

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

PREFACE.

In the fall of 1905, the trustees of the Illinois State Historical Library appointed an advisory commission to formulate a plan for the future publications of the Library. On the recommendation of this commission it was determined that the Illinois Historical Collections should be continued and the volumes numbered consecutively, but also that series should be formed of the volumes of the Collections devoted to the same historical period, such as the French, the British, the Virginia, etc. The present volume is the first which has been published under this new plan and, as its title shows, it is the first volume of the Virginia series. For this reason an introduction has been prepared containing the history of those years, when Illinois formed a part of the commonwealth of Virginia and the government established by that state continued to exercise authority over the French villages.

Had not a prior discovery of the manuscripts imposed this selection upon me, I should not have chosen to edit the records of Cahokia first; for, interesting as is the picture of this frontier community which they present, the central movement within the county of Illinois is best traced at Kaskaskia, and as a collection, the records of that village would offer greater variety and interest. How rich is the material, which still remains to be published, may be readily seen from the Introduction.

There will be found in this volume many new interpretations of past events as well as descriptions of those which have been hitherto unknown, the result of a careful comparison of sources, frequently used by previous writers, and a study of much new material recently discovered. In writing the history of these years I have felt very like a pioneer and later researches may not uphold all my conclusions. The work has been done with the sources before me, however, and no important statement has been made without a careful sifting of the evidence as offered by the primary witnesses. It has been my endeavor to tell the story as it is narrated by those who took part in these events and to remain uninfluenced by prejudice for or against either parties or men. If, on the whole, the picture of the misery of the French people under the tyranny of the Virginians appears to occupy too prominent a place, it is because the testimony of both themselves and the Americans warrants it. Another reason may be found in the fact that the Americans were the aggressors, and, as the critic of a musical performance describes the action of the performers rather than the instruments, so the deeds of the frontiersmen rather than the merely passive experience of the French people must form the theme of this narrative.

In the preparation of this volume I have become indebted to many persons, who have given freely both of time and information. To them I wish to make my acknowledgments and to express my thanks. Several have, however, given me such assistance that a more personal expression is called for. My colleague, Professor Thomas E. Oliver of the department of modern languages, has devoted time and thought to the reading of the text and the elucidation of its meaning. It has been of the greatest value to me that I have been permitted to use his careful scholarship in all difficult cases. Mr. Benjamin Sulte of Ottawa, Canada, has read all the proof of the French and the translation and his many valuable suggestions have been incorporated into the text and footnotes. Hon. Walter B. Douglas of St. Louis spent several days with me over the translation of the legal phrases and besides has added much to the completeness of the book from his notes. For their unfailing kindness and courtesy in superintending the search for material and the copying of manuscripts, my thanks are due to Dr. Reuben G. Thwaites of the Wisconsin Historical Society, Dr. Arthur G. Doughty of the Canadian Archives, Dr. J. Franklin Jameson of the Carnegie Institution, and Dr. H. J. Eckenrode of the Virginia State Library. Institutions such as the Missouri Historical Society of St. Louis and the Chicago Historical Society have offered the freest use of their collections and to their officers I desire to express my gratitude. I would also acknowledge my indebtedness for the help they have given me in reading parts of the manuscript or proof to Dr. Louise Phelps Kellogg of Madison and my colleagues, Professor Evarts B. Greene, Professor Stephen A. Forbes and Mr. Frank W. Scott. In making the transcription, in preparing the manuscript, and in reading the proof my wife has been my constant assistant and to her sympathetic judgments and criticisms the volume owes many improvements in arrangement, interpretations, and diction. While rendering thanks for the assistance given me by these many friends, it must be understood that they are in no way responsible for any errors which may be found in the volume; for these I hold myself alone accountable.

INTRODUCTION.

On the banks of the Mississippi in southwestern Illinois, lies the American Bottom, the land most hallowed by romance and history of all the lands of the old Northwest. Taking no account of the prehistoric epoch whose monuments survive in the numerous Indian mounds of the region, we find its history running back over two centuries to the time when the first white settlers placed their villages by the side of the great river of the West in an attempt to realize the idea of a colonial empire as conceived by the Grand Monarch in his palace at Versailles. Here for almost a hundred years, while the dominion over the Northwest was passing from France to England and from England to the United States, these villages endured unchanged amidst the creeks and ponds of the bottom, which mirrored in their quiet waters the old world civilization transported into the heart of the wilderness from feudalized France.

The American Bottom<sup>1</sup> extended southward from opposite the mouth of the Missouri for about a hundred miles to the point where the Kaskaskia formerly emptied her waters into the Mississippi; but within recent times the lower part of this tract has been cut away by the greater river's breaking through to the bed of the smaller, thus conveying to the Missouri side a piece of this historic ground. Here is found some of the most fertile land in the United States. Like historic Egypt, it is the gift of a river and, like it, is submerged at intervals, although not periodically, by the fertilizing waters that gave it birth. In breadth the bottom land varies from three to seven miles, the average being about five. When the first settlers came, it presented to the eye a view of almost tropical luxuriance, inviting the beholders to make their homes in a spot that offered more than the land of promise flowing with milk and honey. Along the bank of the Mississippi was a forest of about a mile in width, wherein grew various kinds of nut trees, hickory, pecan, black walnut, and here and there were scattered groves of crabapple and single trees of the persimmon and mulberry. The underbrush was composed of numberless thickets of wild plums, blackberry and other bushes; and all were matted together by the grapevines, which, in their efforts to gain the sunlight, twined serpent-like about the tree trunks, encircled the branches, and almost covered the tops with their broad leaves. On the east side of the bottom was a long stretch of limestone bluffs, rising perpendicularly from the plain to the height of about a hundred feet, effectually cutting off the low land from the prairies beyond. The bluffs presented their rough-hewn faces to the view like the bastions of some cyclopiian fortress, but in places they were screened by the trees which clung to their sides and hung from their crests. Between the forest and the cliffs lay an undulating meadow, the surface of which was varied by belts of trees bordering the lakes and ponds or fringing the streams which had found their way through the bluffs and followed their quiet courses to the great river beyond. On both meadow and bluff the growth of the flora was luxuriant. In the marshy places the reeds raised their slender tops far above the head of the passer-by, hiding from view the snowy lilies serenely floating on the surface of the ponds; while in forest, field, and swamp the bluebells, goldenrod, mallows, and cardinal flowers made the scene on every side gay with their brilliant hues.

Here nature offered her gifts with bounteous hand; but as in all such lands of tropical prodigality the climate was warm and enervating, inducing in man a love of indolence and repose rather than the more virile emotions. The ponds and streams, so beautiful with their fringe of foliage in spring, became in summer stagnant and were the breeding places of myriads of mosquitoes, which scattered the germs of disease among the hardy invaders of the wilderness. In the springtime the waters of the Mississippi submerged the land and occasionally stretched in an unbroken expanse from the bluffs of Illinois to those of the opposite shore.<sup>1</sup>

This is not the place to tell the earliest history of this region, of the exertions of the French to settle and hold the Mississippi valley, or of that inevitable struggle with England which ensued; for the narrative of the documents printed in these pages belongs to a later period. When their story begins the American Revolution was at its height, and the echoes of that struggle, heard on the banks of the Mississippi, had awakened in the hearts of the French habitants a fond hope of freedom; when their story ends, the constitution of the United States had been adopted and the new-born nation was prepared to attempt the solution of the difficult problems incident to her heritage in the West. Between these dates the American frontiersmen had found their way to the Illinois and the dramatic struggle of Anglo-Saxon energy with Gallic quietism had begun.

In the year 1778 there was a population of less than a thousand white settlers and of about the same number of negroes and Indians in the villages of the bottom. At the north was Cahokia with its three hundred whites and eighty negroes; forty-five miles south was St. Philippe, formerly inhabited by a dozen families, but now, because of the exodus of the French at the time of the transference of the territory to the British, with only two or three remaining; at Fort de Chartres village, called Nouvelle Chartres, there still lingered a few French settlers; three miles farther south Prairie du Rocher nestled under the bluffs, from which it took its name, with a population of a hundred whites and almost as many slaves; and at the extreme south was the metropolis of the bottom, Kaskaskia, which boasted eighty houses, five hundred white inhabitants, and almost as many black.

The settlement of the white men in the bottom had not driven out the aborigines, for the French have always dwelt in peace with the American Indians, the management of whom they understood far better than did the Anglo-Saxons. Near the French villages were the homes of these children of the prairies, who numbered at the time less than five hundred members of the four remaining tribes of the Kaskaskias, Peorias, Mitchigamies, and Cahokias. The French and British travelers are unanimous in describing these Illinois Indians as degenerate descendants of a once warlike people. Their association with the French, instead of fitting them better to meet the trials of life in the wilderness, had corrupted the qualities of bravery and physical courage and made them the debauched parasites of their white neighbors.<sup>1</sup>

Besides these settlements of the American Bottom on the Mississippi River, there were in the valley of the Wabash the two important posts of Ouiatanon and Vincennes, the latter of which rivaled the Illinois villages in population and importance; for it was by the Wabash that the principal trade route between the more western posts and Canada ran.<sup>2</sup> Many smaller settlements were scattered throughout the region; at Peoria on the Illinois river, where lately Jean Bte. Mailhet had revived an older trading post; at St. Joseph on the river of the same name, and at Miami; and here and there smaller groups of French traders might be found in the Indian villages and elsewhere. These smaller posts served only the purposes of trade. Their white inhabitants, being migratory in their habits, either followed the Indians on their periodic hunts or went from one post to another merely to buy the furs when the Indians returned.

The British dominion ended with the Mississippi River. On the western bank were other French villages such as St. Louis and

Ste. Genevieve, belonging to the government of Spain. They did not differ greatly in character or population from these of the British shore; but since the rule of the Spaniard was on the whole more congenial to the Gallic temperament, many of the more progressive settlers from the eastern bank had made their homes there during the last decade, and the Spanish bank enjoyed greater prosperity and a more rapid increase of population than did the British, advantages which the events of the succeeding years tended to augment, so that at the end of the period under review the Spanish shore had profited by the misfortunes of the neighboring villages.<sup>1</sup>

Most of the French of the western posts came from Canada, with which country they retained constant communication through trade and exchange of messages on family affairs. Very few had come directly from France and the number from southern Louisiana was relatively small.<sup>2</sup> Here in Illinois and on the Wabash which under both the French and British regime were subject to the same jurisdiction,<sup>3</sup> they had lived for one or two generations, engaged in the pursuits of trade and the cultivation of their small farms. The majority, known as the habitants, coming as they did from the lower classes of France, were illiterate and ignorant; and their life in the wilderness, far removed from the restraints of civilized society, had not improved their mental or moral qualities, but had developed those best fitted to their mode of living. Like the Indians with whom they associated and even intermarried,<sup>4</sup> they were active, adroit and hardy, but

<sup>2</sup> See notes to census on pp. 624 et seq. Reynolds (My Own Times, ch. xii.) says that the population of Kaskaskia and Cahokia showed differences due to their origins, the former being settled from Mobile and New Orleans and the latter from Canada. Although I have not traced out the origin of all the families of Kaskaskia as I have of those of Cahokia, I have noticed no indications of such a difference. Certainly all the prominent families of Kaskaskia were Canadian and the names of the other families are easily recognized as coming from the same place. Although it is necessary to make some use of Reynolds' books, they must be recognized as the most unreliable sources for the early period that we have. More errors in the histories of the state may be traced back to his statements than to any other one source.

<sup>4</sup> All writers testify to the intermarrying between the French and Indians, but I have been surprised at the infrequency of the occurrence of marriage contracts between representatives of the two races among their records. This may be due to the fact that contracts on such occasions were not used. I am inclined to believe, however, that the frequency of such marriages has been somewhat exaggerated by the travelers.

also cunning and treacherous. At their best the voyageurs and coureurs de bois could be seen laboriously pulling their flat boats laden with produce up the rivers or gliding in their canoes on the wood-girt streams and ponds in pursuit of game. In such labors they were merry, patient, and industrious; as a rule they were faithful in the performance of their engagements and were warm in their friendships, but to their enemies revengeful and ready to take the meanest advantage. Yet their life amidst the dangers of the forest did not develop in them physical courage, for in the presence of an unexpected attack from Indians or others they were generally timid and resourceless.<sup>1</sup> Without doubt many individual examples of pluck and bravery might be enumerated; but in comparison with the American frontiersmen the French voyageurs and coureurs de bois exhibited little boldness and initiative in action. Returned to the settlement they were careless and pleasure loving, dissipating their energies in drinking, gambling, and gossiping; and, as irresponsible as children, they were easily turned aside from the pursuit of their real interests. It can be readily understood that to the men who followed the wilderness trace or tracked the wild beasts in the dark forest, agriculture and the mechanic arts would offer little or no attraction; but even in the pursuit of their calling one looks in vain for a sign of the enterprising spirit of the Anglo-Saxon.

Although priests and governors made loud complaint of the disorderliness of these habitants, yet their pleasures and vices were of a far milder type than those of their counterparts, the American backwoodsmen. The French always retained a respect for law and constituted authority and preferred to be guided rather than to lead. The expression of their individualism was checked in the presence of officials, for government meant to them authority with a divine right to rule. In all their dealings, business and social, they never neglected to call in the assistance of notary or judge, whose legal papers they preserved, as their records show, with the greatest care and reverence. In their petty quarrels with each other the Frenchmen saw no disgrace in seeking from the court a "reparation of honor" instead of ending them with the brutal fights common among the Americans. Though given to drinking and gambling, the dance was their favorite amusement, and to the weekly frolic came the men and matrons, the young men and maidens; and even the priest graced these festive gatherings. Here all danced until the small hours of the night or even to daybreak with no appearance of rowdiness or vulgarity to mar their simple festivities.<sup>1</sup>

It is due to the remembrance of this lower class, the habitants, that travelers, both French and English, have condemned in such unmeasured terms the Illinois French settlers; but the picture of the village society would be incomplete if limited to a description of the coureurs de bois and voyageurs; for it was never wholly vulgarized and depraved, owing to the presence here of many persons from the better classes of France and Canada—the gentry, Clark called them—who, accustomed to greater refinements of life than those of the log cabin, endeavored to surround themselves with such little elegancies as might be brought from Canada or elsewhere. Some of the residents could claim nobility of birth. The acting commandant in 1778 was son of the seigniorial lord of Savourmon, the sieur de Rocheblave. Timothe Boucher, who a few years later held a similar position, was the sieur de Monbreun,<sup>2</sup> a grandson of Pierre Boucher several times governor of Three Rivers, who was ennobled for his services in 1660. Among the gentry, which was a rather elastic term, were also many well-to-do men, who had risen to prominence in the Illinois or else possessed some patrimony, before migrating to the West, which they had increased by trade. Such was Jean Bte. Barbau of Prairie du Rocher, the members of the Bauvais<sup>3</sup> and Charleville families of Kaskaskia and their neighbors and friends, the Viviats, the Lachances, and the Janis; and at Cahokia, the Sauciers, François Trottier, Antoine Girardin, and J. B. H. LaCroix.<sup>1</sup> Next to the acting commandant the most important individual of the American Bottom was Gabriel Cerré, who had acquired his wealth in the fur trade. He was well educated and had correspondents in Canada and elsewhere.<sup>2</sup> Among the rising young men must be reckoned Charles Gratiot, who had established himself at Cahokia in 1777 and was associated in business with three Canadian merchants. He had had an excellent education, spoke several languages, was something of a dandy in dress, and had by his address won for himself a place of influence in the community.<sup>3</sup> These were the men and others like them to whom Sir William Johnson, the British Indian commissioner referred, when he wrote that the French traders were gentlemen in character, manners, and dress, and "men of abilities, influence, and address."<sup>4</sup>

<sup>3</sup> Reference to the family will be found at various places in the Introduction see pp. xx, n. 5, ii., n. 3, cvii., cxvi., cxxiv. The members of the family always wrote the name as spelled above. They commonly used their second name in preference to their surname St. Gemme.

These members of the gentry lived far more elegantly than the American backwoodsmen and were their superiors in culture. Their houses were commodious and their life was made easy for themselves and families by a large retinue of slaves.<sup>5</sup> They were in social life pleasant, their hospitality was proverbial, and their courtesy to strangers constant. They evidently maintained the distinction between themselves and the poorer and more ignorant classes, so that the democracy of the American frontier was not established among them. Thus was added to the French settlements an element of refinement and elegance, however simple,

<sup>2</sup> Gabriel Cerré was born at Montreal, August 12, 1734. As early as 1755 he was established at Kaskaskia, where he married in 1764 Catherine Giard. His activities at the time of the coming of Clark are told in the succeeding pages. He did not find it best for his business interests to remain among the Virginians and by June 17, 1779, had made his preparations for his removal to St. Louis by purchasing a lot in that village. The date he left Kaskaskia is not known, but was probably before the end of 1779. He became one of the most influential citizens of St. Louis and died April 4, 1805. which was always lacking in the more virile, if less romantic, communities of the American pioneers.<sup>1</sup>

Except for the wildness of the surrounding uncleared land and the luxuriance of the growth of vegetation, these villages copied in their external appearance and internal life the similar communities of France in the eighteenth century. Just as the English settlers on the seaboard brought with them their English household goods and their English institutions, and planted them by the streams and hills of New England, so these French of the Mississippi valley transplanted from the heart of France their homes with their utensils and ornaments and the village community in which they and their ancestors had lived.

All the houses were of one story with a broad veranda on one or more sides. The less pretentious ones were built of upright beams set in horizontals at top and bottom with the interstices between the beams filled with what was called "cat and clay", a composition of clay and finely cut straw or moss. At one side, and sometimes two, there was a large chimney for the spacious fireplace of the living room and kitchen.<sup>2</sup> The better houses were of stone and with their sheds, barns, and slave quarters gave evidence of prosperity and wealth. Around each <sup>1</sup> Very severe judgments have been passed upon the French on the Mississippi and Wabash rivers by many writers. Among these the most important have been the British officers and the later French travelers. The first class has always been noted for its incapacity to appreciate the good characteristics of a civilization different from its own, and the French travelers, such as Michaud and Collot, visited the region after the events narrated in this Introduction had driven the more progressive men from the eastern bank to swell the Spanish villages. Therefore it has seemed necessary to supplement their accounts from other sources. In writing the description of these people I have first of all had in mind the record of their acts contained in this volume. The picture formed in the mind after reading these records is not that of the most "debased, ignorant, and superstitious of humanity", but rather the reverse. These facts should in part offset the strictures of Fraser and Croghan, as should also the letter of Sir William Johnson quoted above. At their best the French of Illinois were not dissimilar from those on the Spanish bank, so that the description of Ste. Genevieve by Brackenridge is correct enough for Illinois. Any knowledge of the conditions in Canada may be used cautiously also. We have two attempts to form judgments of these French, coming from men of different character. The first is by C. F. Volney, who visited the region in 1796 and the other by Edmund Flagg whose visit was made in 1836. The testimony of Governor Reynolds may also be admitted, since he lived among them and knew them well. An excellent description of the French-Canadians of the period may be found in Collin, The Province of Quebec and the Early American Revolution, 282 et seq.; see also Frazer, Die Kolonisation des Mississippiales, 382.

dwelling was a small yard enclosed by a picket fence, within which enclosure were the orchard and the kitchen and flower gardens. The whole presented an attractive picture of quiet and peaceful home life. Within the house everything was generally home made, although some of the more wealthy brought their furniture from Canada. The poorer houses appeared shabby and badly kept, for the French women were careless housekeepers, and rather extravagant and wasteful. At least such was the opinion of the American settlers who lived among them.<sup>1</sup>

On account of the social character of the people, the isolated farm house was uncommon in the bottom and the village community was the rule. The streets were narrow and the houses were placed close to the edge of the lots, almost on the street-line. The farm land lay outside the village in two large fields, one the common field and the other the commons. The common field was divided into long narrow strips, ten to forty perches in width and extending from the river to the bluffs; these the inhabitants cultivated. The commons was the wood and pasture land belonging to the community,<sup>2</sup> and was separated from the cultivated fields by a fence, which was erected by the proprietors, each being responsible for that part crossing his land. The community had the right to make concessions from the commons and add them to the common field for new arrivals and for newly formed fami-

<sup>2</sup> The statement is true enough for the period under consideration. This is not the place for a discussion of the history of French land tenure in America, for the origin of the system must be sought in the period of the French régime and the final settlement of the questions arising out of it in the years after the United States took control, so that the discussion of the land tenure will naturally come within the scope of some future volume. However, a few words on the subject may be of value in explaining the situation. The land acquired from the Indians for the purpose of colonization was regarded as belonging to the king's domain, after the company of the Indies resigned the government of it. This domain land was disposed of in two ways. 1st. Large tracts might be granted to individuals as seigniories. The character of the title given was that of the franc alleu, which in the eighteenth century did not differ essentially from the benefice. These large seigniories were divided by the proprietors into smaller tracts and granted to the habitants as censive holdings, which paid the grantor a perpetual rent of a sou an acre, were subject to the banalities, and escheated to the seignior in case no heirs were found. 2nd. The king might retain the control of the land himself and grant it out himself in censive holdings, as he did at Kaskaskia and Nouvelle Chartres. The land cultivated by the people of Cahokia belonged to the seignior of the Seminary of Foreign Missions; St. Philippe was a seignior belonging to the Regnaults and Prairie du Rocher had been originally conceded to Boisbriant, but had been passed on by him to Langlois. In the bottom there were also many smaller concessions in franc alleu and under the British many more were made by one of the commandants. lies.<sup>1</sup> This method of laying out the fields and this kind of land tenure were transplanted from France, where they had been developed through centuries; for when the French people found themselves in places where land was plentiful, the power of tradition prevented a readjustment of their ideas in regard to landholdings and agriculture. Hence they brought with them the mark system and tenure, with the whole machinery for the administration of the village land as they knew it in France. The time for plowing, sowing, and harvesting was regulated by the assembly of the inhabitants, as well as all other questions affecting their common property and common interests. The officer elected to supervise the execution of the laws of the commons and the decisions of the assembly was the syndic, of whose presence in the villages on the Mississippi during the eighteenth century there still exists proof. The assemblies of the villagers, which copied the French custom in this particular as in all others, were held before the church door after mass and were attended by all males of military age.<sup>2</sup>

The Illinois French were not an agricultural people, although they did send down some grain and cattle to New Orleans.<sup>3</sup> For this reason they made no progress in the art of agriculture and continued to till their fields in the same way and with the same kind of implements as had their fathers for generations before them. The profits and the adventurous life of the fur-trader exercised for them such a fascination as to prevent their pursuit of a calling which would have given them a firmer hold upon the soil and might have preserved them from many of the misfortunes which finally overcame them. For the same reason they never speculated in land or attempted to gain possession of large holdings. In later years, when they in a way controlled their own destiny, they tried to protect themselves from the <sup>3</sup> When compared with the Americans, this is true; but the Illinois French raised grain and vegetables to a greater extent than has generally been admitted, and their exportation of grain to New Orleans was an important item in the Mississippi trade. American land-traders; but the contest was too unequal and, since their own hold on the land was so weak, they were forced to bow to fate and to see themselves supplanted by the Americans, who were builders of more permanent homes.

The most conspicuous buildings in the villages were the churches. The Cahokia church, however, was in ruins in 1778 and was rebuilt in the next few years; but at Kaskaskia there was "a huge old pile, extremely awkward and ungainly, with its projecting eaves, its walls of hewn timber perpendicularly planted, and the interstices stuffed with mortar, with its quaint old-fashioned spire, and its dark, storm-beaten casements." Here the Kaskaskians had worshipped for two generations.<sup>1</sup> The people were for the most part very devoted to their religion, and the priests exercised great influence over them. Their attachment was due more to traditional allegiance, however, than to personal conviction. The wild life of the wilderness had not been without its effect, and the lack of proper supervision had resulted in religious recklessness; yet however debauched and irreligious their lives, the coureurs de bois and voyageurs were easily brought by a vigorous priest to acknowledge their dependence on the church. At the moment of death they always sought the consolations of religion and left by will money for the saying of masses for the dead. There appears, therefore, to have been no rebellion against the church. In one individual case only is there any evidence that the radical thought of France had penetrated to Illinois.<sup>2</sup>

In the management of the church property the villagers were associated with the priest through the vestrymen, whom they elected for this purpose from the most prominent men of the communities. Social life centered in the church, as it did in the Puritan New England village, and the people looked forward to the church processions and festivals as important events in their monotonous village life. It was also at the church door that the assemblies of the people met, that the auction of property was held; and it was after the church service that the Sunday dance took place.<sup>1</sup>

In 1778 the priest in charge of the Illinois parishes was Father Pierre Gibault, who with some interruptions had been serving the parishes on the Mississippi and Wabash since 1768. He was curé of the parish of the Immaculate Conception of Kaskaskia and vicar general of the bishop of Quebec. Father Gibault came from a good Canadian family. He was enthusiastic in his work, and appears to have maintained order in the parishes, which had been long neglected or served only by Father Meurin who had found himself too old and feeble to perform his arduous duties successfully. Father Gibault during the years of his residence had gained a great influence over the people of the region, which he used at a critical moment to change their destiny.<sup>2</sup>

The territory of Illinois had been ceded by France to England by the Treaty of Paris in 1763 and two years later British troops had occupied the country. The policy of the British government was very vacillating in regard to the Northwest Territory, and particularly as to the French villages. It is quite evident that there was no purpose of opening the region up for settlement, and there was serious thought of removing the French from their villages to Canada.<sup>3</sup> For this reason the government of England was unwilling to establish a permanent civil organization in spite of the efforts of the French inhabitants and the American traders and land speculators, so that the government remained to the end military. Until 1774 the whole Northwest was subject to the commander of the British forces in America with headquarters at New York, and the relations of the West were closest with the seaboard colonies. In that year, however, by the passage of the Quebec Act the country was joined to Canada and steps were taken to provide a civil government for it; but this was prevented by the outbreak of the Revolutionary War.

In the spring of 1776 the military force, which had been maintained in the Illinois was removed, and the commandant in charge appointed as British agent Philippe de Rastel, Chevalier de Rocheblave. The choice was a wise one. Rocheblave had had a long and varied experience in the West, had served as an officer in the French army during the French and Indian War, and at the conclusion of peace had taken refuge, as did many other Frenchmen, under the Spanish flag. He was entrusted with the government of Ste. Genevieve, but having become involved in legal difficulties with the Spanish officials, he returned to the British bank. The exact date of his return is uncertain, but the proceedings against him in the Spanish court occurred in October, 1773, so that he could have been at longest a little over two years in British Illinois, when he received his appointment to look after the British interests in the western country. In his various undertakings he had proved himself bold and resourceful, avaricious and not too scrupulous in his methods, and by nature suspicious. He knew well the nature of the French inhabitants, and had a dislike and deep-seated suspicion of the Spaniards. His ambition was such as to lead him to give his best service to his employers, and they in turn had confidence in his abilities and willingness to serve them. On August 13, 1777, Carleton wrote that "his abilities and knowledge of that part of the country recommended him to me as a fit person."<sup>1</sup> Hamilton says of him, "I shall in my correspondence with Mr. de Rocheblave keep alive the hopes of his being Governor of New Orleans — a more active and intelligent Person is not to be found in This Country of ignorant Bigots, and busy rebels, and had he the means I doubt not of his curbing their insolence and disaffection."<sup>2</sup> The intimation in Hamilton's letter was correct enough; for, although the inhabitants treated Rocheblave as commandant and judge, his powers as agent were too limited and the money allowed him insufficient to enable him to accomplish what he saw was necessary for the British cause. Time and again he was informed that he could only draw for his salary and that his expenses were to be met by the sums which the commandant at Vincennes could allow him.<sup>1</sup>

By what law other officials were exercising civil powers in the Illinois does not appear from the records, but the existence of such is proved from their acts. There were at Cahokia, St. Philippe, Kaskaskia, and Prairie du Rocher officers styling themselves judges, who put in execution the decrees of the commandant. Since at the same time these judges were captains of the militia, it is probable that the French official with similar duties was retained by the British officers. Besides this judge or captain there were a sergeant and a notary in each of the districts of Cahokia and Kaskaskia.<sup>2</sup>

The foregoing description of conditions in British Illinois would be far from complete without an account of one very important element of the society. No sooner had the news gone forth that the land to the north of the Ohio River had been ceded to England by the French than the merchants of the seaboard colonies began to compete for the fur-trade of the region in a way that had been impossible hitherto. Up to this time the principal trade in the Illinois had been conducted by Canadian and Louisiana merchants, the English colonists having found their way north of the Ohio only just previous to the outbreak of the last war. But now the opportunity was opened to the eastern merchants and they eagerly seized upon it, thus bringing on a commercial war for the trade of the Ohio and the Mississippi. In this the merchants of the English colonies had one decided advantage, since they could deliver goods at the villages of the Illinois cheaper than the same could be purchased and brought by way of the lakes and the Wabash or up the Mississippi.<sup>1</sup>

The British soldiers were hardly established in Fort de Chartres before the merchants who made their starting place Fort Pitt had arrived. Among the first was one who was to exercise great influence on the development of the Illinois, George Morgan, who like the majority of traders from the East came from Philadelphia. He had been educated at Princeton and had then entered the firm of the Bayntons, which became better known in the West under its later name of Baynton, Wharton & Morgan.<sup>2</sup> Although young, by his enthusiasm he had persuaded his partners to embark on western trade and land speculation, and they established branch stores at Kaskaskia, Cahokia, and Vincennes. Other firms also entered into competition, such as the firm of Franks & Company of London and Philadelphia, whose representative, William Murray, was a little later than Morgan in reaching the Illinois. About the same time an Englishman, who claimed Manchac in Mississippi as his home, established the firm of Bentley & Company. These and other companies brought with them many agents, clerks, and hunters, so that the list of names of men of English speech in the region became a long one. In 1768 Morgan writes that there were sixty Englishmen in a militia company which had been formed. Among them were many names which will be mentioned in the following pages. John Henson was the representative of Baynton, Wharton & Morgan at Cahokia, Richard Winston set up in business for himself in partnership with Patrick Kennedy, and the firm became later the representative of Morgan's interests at Kaskaskia; Richard Bacon served Morgan in his farming enterprise; others, either men attached to one of the firms or independent traders, were Daniel Murray, brother of William, James Rumsey, Thomas Collins, Thomas Brady, and Richard McCarty. In the first years of the British rule it looked as if the Ohio River would become the great trade route of the region and supplant the older and, with the French, more popular waterways to New Orleans and Canada.<sup>1</sup> Even the British government seems to have approved at first this attempt to turn aside the trade from its older channels, for in 1769 the colonial governments were empowered to appoint officers to superintend the Indian trade, and Fort Pitt and the Illinois were assigned to Pennsylvania.<sup>2</sup> Thus the Indians north of the Ohio became accustomed to Fort Pitt as the seat of authority in matters in which they were vitally interested.

The fur-trade was not the only inducement to draw the American colonists to the banks of the Mississippi, for from the first the opportunity to speculate in lands was a rival attraction. Land traders were early interested in the territory at the head-waters of the Ohio and soon found their way down the river. In this movement some of the most prominent men in America were interested, such as George Washington, Lord Dunmore, and the Franklins, father and son. The Illinois lands offered equal attractions and early became an object of speculation, in spite of the Edict of 1763 prohibiting settlements in the region. It is impossible to enter into the complicated questions connected with the attempt to open up Illinois by making it a new colony.<sup>3</sup> It is sufficient to know that many prominent men were connected with all such schemes, and that while William Franklin, Sir William Johnson, Samuel Wharton, and others were seeking for a charter for the Illinois colony and Benjamin Franklin was employing his powers to persuade the British government to grant the same, there was formed in March, 1766, a company for the purchase of land near the French villages, of which George Morgan was the representative in the Illinois. Although several strips of land were bought, nothing of any moment was accomplished by this company.<sup>1</sup> However, another known as the Illinois Land Company, most of the members of which were Philadelphians, acquired in 1773 through its representative, William Murray, two large tracts, one situated on the Illinois River and the other south of Kaskaskia on the Ohio. Two years later, the Wabash Land Company, the members of which lived for the most part in Maryland, purchased through its representative, the Kaskaskian Louis Viviat, an associate of Murray, two tracts on the Wabash, one above and the other below Vincennes. Since both purchases were made from the Indians and contrary to the Edict of 1763, they were not allowed by the British government and were annulled by General Gage.<sup>2</sup> When the American Revolution broke out, most of the purchasers sided with the colonists and looked to the success of their cause to further the enterprise in the West.

Although there was at times considerable complaint against the British commandants by the merchants and land-traders, these were generally favored more than the French inhabitants or the Canadians, until the passage of the Quebec Act in 1774, which united the Illinois territory with the province of Quebec and annulled any special favors and privileges which the merchants from the East may have enjoyed. This act and the canceling of the land purchases, which proved the intention of the British government to carry out the principles enunciated in the Edict of 1763, were discouraging to the enterprises of the repre-

<sup>1</sup> The purchases of several pieces of land and the grants of others by Colonel Wilkins, commandant, were recorded in the record-book of the district. (Kas. Rec.) The agreement creating the land company is in the library of the Hist. Soc. of Pennsylvania. The original members were William Franklin, Sir William Johnson, George Croghan, John Baynton, Samuel Wharton, George Morgan, Joseph Wharton, Joseph Wharton, Jr., John Hughes, and Joseph Galloway. The firm of Baynton, Wharton & Morgan received a concession of a large tract of land in the American Bottom from Colonel Wilkins in 1769. This claim passed into the hands of John Edgar, was confirmed by Governor St. Clair, but was rejected by the land commissioners of the U.S. Amer. State Pap., Pub. Lands, ii., 206.

<sup>2</sup> The best account of the Illinois and the Wabash Land companies is contained in a pamphlet published in Philadelphia in 1796 with the title, Account of the Proceedings of the Illinois and Ouabache Land companies. sentatives of the Eastern colonies, and from that date their number in the Illinois began to decline and trade turned back to the older channels. The next men of English speech to compete with the Spanish and French merchants for this western trade were representatives of the new British Canadian houses which sprang up after Canada was ceded to Great Britain. When it is remembered that the persons back of this attempt to capture for the East the trade of the old Northwest and to exploit that territory through their colonizing schemes were some of the most important merchants and professional men in the seaboard colonies, one cause of the opposition among the Easterners to the Quebec Act is easily understood.<sup>1</sup>

The entrance of the American colonists into the Illinois had two results, one immediate and the other more remote. The trade had brought into the French villages several men of English speech, who for one cause or another determined to remain; and their presence made possible continual correspondence between the West and the colonial revolutionists; and at the same time they prepared the minds of the French to receive any company of American soldiers who might undertake the conquest of the country. The second result was apparent only later. The men who had been foiled in their attempt to secure the trade of the old Northwest and to acquire its land for colonization were not willing to accept the decision of the Quebec Act as final, and were prepared to renew the attempt at the first opportunity with the chance of greater success.

Rocheblave had been appointed agent for the British a year after the outbreak of the American Revolution, and from the first he had trouble with the Americans who remained in the villages and who generally sympathized with the cause of independence.

It is difficult to decide to-day where justice lay in the constant disputes between the two parties, for the endless recriminations which they hurled at each other were surcharged with personal hatred and irreconcilable hostility.

The first cause of dispute grew out of the trade with the Indians. Every government in the West has been forced sooner or later to attempt to regulate the sale of liquor to the natives, since one of the chief dangers to the small frontier community comes from intoxicated savages. Since Rocheblave was without authority, he was obliged to use other means than prohibition to regulate this dangerous trade; and no better method could have been devised than that he used. In a community practically without government like that of the Illinois, public opinion alone could be called into play to prevent an evil which endangered the lives of all alike. One of the first acts of Rocheblave was to call an assembly of the inhabitants on April 17, 1776, to discuss among other matters, all questions concerning their relations with the Indians. It was decided that, since some savages made war on the English and some on the French and since both realized that they were under one government and were all brothers and must hold together, the assembly of the inhabitants should regulate the trade with the savages from time to time. The people also agreed on their honor not to give to the Indians any intoxicating liquor, and to assemble under arms when the commandant gave the signal. At the same assembly it was determined that, if any one refused to pay just debts, the inhabitants would give their assistance to the government to enforce such payment. The agreement was signed by all the prominent Frenchmen of the villages, but by only one Englishman, Daniel Murray.<sup>1</sup> Later this agreement was made the subject of reproach against Rocheblave by one of the English merchants, Bentley, who was most bitterly opposed to the acting commandant. If Rocheblave's charges are to be believed, Bentley and his associates were the chief offenders in the sale of liquor to the Indians.<sup>2</sup>

It was not the liquor traffic, however, which caused the greatest difficulties between the British agent, and the English-speaking inhabitants of the Illinois. On account of the war for independence carried on by the seaboard colonies against the mother country, the western territory became the center of many activities directed against England, of which Rocheblave kept himself well informed, but against which he was able to do little on account of the apathy of the British government. Across the river lay the Spanish posts, which, since the appointment of Galvez as governor of Spanish Louisiana, had become the seat of intrigues against England; for the Spanish officials of America were rather quicker in perceiving the advantages which might be gained by Spain from the rupture between England and her colonies than was the home government, and they committed many overt acts against England before actual war was declared by Spain. From St. Louis and New Orleans the Americans received very substantial aid. At the latter city was Oliver Pollock, who was the American agent and was on the best of terms with the governor. From Fort Pitt boats were sent to New Orleans for supplies of all kinds and these boats were even harbored in St. Louis, opposite the British Illinois.<sup>1</sup>

The English-speaking merchants of Kaskaskia participated in these acts against England and maintained their intercourse with the eastern leaders in spite of the watchfulness of Rocheblave. Bentley and others traded almost openly with the rebels. When William Linn went to New Orleans to obtain powder and other supplies for the Americans, Bentley met him on the Ohio River and sold him powder. It was also known that he sent a boat to Kentucky for the same purpose.<sup>2</sup> The chief representative of the American cause in the West was George Morgan, who in 1776 was appointed agent under the commissioners for Indian affairs in the middle department and made his headquarters at Fort Pitt.<sup>1</sup> His intimate knowledge of the West and his many friends among the French and Indians made his selection a wise one; and he was able to make some opposition to the activities of Hamilton, the lieutenant governor of Detroit. Morgan maintained his relations with his agents in Kaskaskia, Winston and Kennedy, and with other correspondents at Detroit and elsewhere.<sup>2</sup> In a letter written in July, 1776, he says: "I am now here on Public Business for the United Colonies. I want to know the exact situation of affairs at the Illinois & what Quantity of flour & beef you could furnish a company of two of men with at Kaskaskia the 25th of next December. This I will depend on you for by the return of Silver Heels who ought to be at Pittsburg as early in September as possible as there is a great treaty to be held in that month with all the western Nations. If one of you could come along with him it may be much to your advantage, but you should be very secret with respect to your Business." There follows an order for horses and the letter ends with a repetition of his request that one of the partners meet him in Pittsburg.<sup>3</sup> It is difficult to determine whether the letter is more than a business letter or not. The company of men may refer to some commercial enterprise that was contemplated; but Congress had determined in the previous April to send an expedition against Detroit and there may have been in the writer's plans a similar one against the Illinois.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>2</sup> In a letter from Rocheblave to Hamilton, May 8, 1777, occurs the following: "It has occurred to me to tell you that the spy, named Elliot, whom you have had arrested at Detroit, was the bearer of a letter from George Morgan, commissioner for Congress and general director of the undertakings which are made from Fort Pitt against here, to Richard Winston, a very zealous partisan of the same cause." (Letter enclosed in Can. Archives, Q., vol. 14, p. 74. See also letter quoted below.) There are scattered references to Morgan in the Kas. Rec. Very late in my investigations I learned that there were three letter-books of George Morgan in the Carnegie library of Pittsburg, Pa. I made every effort to have search made in them for material, which would throw light on Morgan's activities in the West. Through the fault of no one, but rather on account of the shortness of the time, I was unsuccessful.

Whatever Morgan's plans may have been, there can be no doubt about the belief of the English-speaking traders in the Illinois; for they were expecting that he would soon bring about such an expedition. They talked of this openly among themselves and spoke of the power of the colonies to the French, to whom they pointed out the advantages of a change of alliance. When William Murray left Kaskaskia in the year 1776, he instructed his brother Daniel to furnish any American troops, who might come, with the supplies they should need; and later he sent word from New Orleans by Colonel George Gibson, to the same effect; instructions which Daniel carried out, when George Rogers Clark arrived in 1778. On June 7, 1778, Richard McCarty of Cahokia wrote to John Askins of Michillimackinac: "It is said that Morgan was to be here with 600 men last winter, but very likely he has something else to do."<sup>1</sup>

In the midst of these intrigues Rocheblave was not strong enough to do more than to memorialize the government at Quebec. Even when he had proved against Bentley the charge of selling goods to the colonies, he did not dare to arrest him in Kaskaskia,<sup>2</sup> for although at the beginning of his administration he had been able to unite all the French in his support, there had developed two parties, one of which showed signs of opposing him. The American merchants had not lived so many years in the villages of the Illinois without making friends among the French, nor were the latter wholly without longings for liberty and aspirations for greater independence. It was only eight years before this that they had commissioned their friend and neighbor, Daniel Bloüin, to present to the British government their wishes for a civil establishment to replace the military tyranny from which they suffered.<sup>3</sup> That movement had caused excited discussions in the villages at the time, and most of the French could recall the principles, without doubt largely inspired by the Eastern traders among them, for which they had then struggled.

<sup>2</sup> Bentley was arrested at Michillimackinac and carried to Quebec, where he was kept in confinement until his escape in 1780, when he returned to Illinois to take his revenge, as the later narrative will tell. See post, p. cxlv. The more important papers in regard to the arrest of Bentley have been published in the Mich. Pioneer and Hist. Col., xix., 321 et seq. His intercourse with the Kentuckians is further proved by the fact that Clark made efforts to have Bentley exchanged, Clark to Lernout, March 16, 1779, Ill. Hist. Col., i., 415.

It is true that these same villagers later told Clark that they had not understood the cause for which the colonies were fighting. But this was given as an excuse for not having joined the American cause earlier, for they certainly were not so ignorant nor so artless as they chose to appear to the leader of an army of backwoodsmen. Many had seen the broadsides sent by the Americans to Canada. Their intercourse through trade with Kentucky and Fort Pitt had brought the knowledge to others, and such men as Winston, Kennedy, and the Murrays had been preaching the joys of independence for years. Many of the French were also warm friends and admirers of that enthusiast for the American cause, George Morgan. It is, therefore, not strange that many gave Rocheblave a half-hearted support, although they were not ready to come out openly on the side of the American agents.<sup>1</sup> Among these more or less disaffected Frenchmen must be counted some of the most important men of the communities, such as Father Gibault, the Charlevilles, the Bauvais, Bienvenus, Lafont, Duplasy and Janis of Kaskaskia, and J. Bte. Barbau, who controlled Prairie du Rocher. How Rocheblave was regarded at Cahokia is not known. The captains of militia, Joseph Cesirre and François Trottier, had not chosen to participate in the court, which the acting commandant called to clear himself of the charges made by Bentley; but this may have been due to hindrances rather than choice. The men composing this party were among the most intelligent of the villagers; they had all given their support to the demand for the civil government from the British in 1770, and among them were the officers of the militia, as Duplasy, Janis, and Barbau.

<sup>1</sup> The above analysis of the conditions in Illinois in the year 1778 is based upon hints from many sources and events which followed the arrival of George Rogers Clark, so that it is impossible to refer to any one document or group of documents as proof. The statement of the French to Clark in regard to their ignorance of the cause of the struggle is in Clark's letter to Mason and his Memoir, English, Conquest of the Northwest, i., 417 and 480. In the Memoir, (p. 475) Clark intimates that he found some of the French inclined to the American cause. Cerré, of whom I speak below, is one of the men who claims not to have had the opportunity to understand the cause for which the Americans struggled, but no one can read the letter written him by Monforton on Sept. 22, 1778, without believing that Cerré's

The mass of the habitants were probably on the side of the government.<sup>1</sup> Illiterate and unintelligent, they were willing to accept conditions as they found them without attempting to bring about a change; and, besides, obedience to the constituted authorities was part of their nature. There were, however, several of the richest and most prominent Frenchmen upon whom the acting commandant could count, whose loyalty to the British cause and Rocheblave was far stronger than the attachment of their opponents to the opposition. Among these were Gabriel Cerré, Louis Viviat, and Nicolas Lachance of Kaskaskia. Viviat should, perhaps, not be counted at this time, for he died in the fall of 1777; but up to the time of his death, he was one of the most important traders of the region and had been in partnership with William Murray. He was the member of the Wabash Land Company who acted as the agent in the purchase of its claim. He had, however, severed his connection with Murray just previous to his death, because of the acts of Daniel Murray, who was particularly lawless. Throughout the prosecution of Bentley by Rocheblave, Viviat had given the latter his support.<sup>2</sup> Of Lachance little at this time is known except that he was accounted a friend of Rocheblave.<sup>3</sup> Unquestionably the most important member of the government party was Gabriel Cerré. He was forty-four years old and had been in Kaskaskia since 1755. Through his personal wealth and commercial connections, he exercised an influence over the villagers second only to that of the commandant, with whom he was on terms of intimacy. It is quite possible that his trading interests brought him into oppo-correspondent gave him credit for an intelligent understanding of the claims of the two parties. (Can. Archives, B., 122, p. 161.) Daniel Murray in writing to Bentley on May 25, 1777, gives the following proof of the existence of parties among the French: "As to your being complained of already to General Carleton you need not dread that, for since your departure Rocheblave drew out a complaint against you and wanted all the principal Inhabitants to sign it which they all absolutely refused to do, particularly the Charlevilles, Bienvenue, Lafont, Plassey, Janist, etc., no doubt but your friends Viviat Cerré Lachance might have done it but they are too few to countenance it when so many refused to do it." (Mich. Pio. and Hist. Col., xix., 417.) Scattered through the Court Record, Kas. Rec. are other indications of party divisions.

sition to the Americans and that self interest bound him to the British side.<sup>1</sup>

Rocheblave never deceived himself in regard to the weakness of his position, and several times urged upon Governor Carleton the appointment of a commandant and the sending to the Illinois of British troops, a recommendation which proves his interest in the cause he upheld and his own disinterestedness. His letters are full of such expressions as these: "I await with the greatest impatience the orders of your excellency, or rather I beg of you to give them to some other person, a native Englishman, in order to escape the too common jealousies of some, who having merely the name, and whose affections are all for the Americans, are seeking to thwart all my efforts, intriguing with our neighbors and poisoning with the venom of their hearts the purest intentions. . . . All the alarms I have sought to give will be only too well realized. We are upon the eve of seeing here a numerous band of brigands who will establish a chain of communications which will not be easy to break, once formed. If by the schemes of the Spanish the Natchez are conquered, there will be established an armed force in this country. You have no time to lose to prevent this misfortune. If militia can be counted for anything at present a person of discretion with troops would attract more adherents than would be believed. Inclination is in spite of abandonment and distress, still for the government, but it is more than time to revive their drooping courage or all will be lost here."<sup>2</sup> The British government planned at one time to relieve him and appointed, in 1777, Matthew Johnson lieutenant-governor of the Illinois; but for some reason he never went to his post,<sup>3</sup> and Rocheblave was compelled to face the event concerning which he had given so frequent warnings, and to learn that the party of his opponents was stronger in a crisis than his own.

<sup>3</sup> Can. Archives, B., vol. 46, p. 95. From Murray's letter to Bentley, May 25, 1777, it is learned that the new governor was expected at Kaskaskia, Mich. Pio. and Hist. Cal., xix., 417.

The American attack on the villages of the Illinois did not come about in the way that the inhabitants and Rocheblave had anticipated. They had been led to look for an expedition sent by the united colonies and directed by George Morgan against the whole line of posts extending from Detroit to Kaskaskia; but what actually occurred was that one of the revolting states, Virginia, sent an isolated detachment under a pioneer of Kentucky to revenge the British and Indian attacks on her frontiers.<sup>1</sup> The immediate occasion of this expedition was the rapid colonization of Kentucky during the last four years, and the danger to the new settlements from the detachments of Indians sent by Lieutenant Governor Hamilton of Detroit. To the Kentuckians the whole territory north of the Ohio River appeared the breeding ground of these Indian incursions into their territory. The conception of an attack upon the Illinois was due to the genius of one man, George Rogers Clark, who clearly perceived that the holding of Kentucky depended on checking the British power to the north. He laid his plan before the governor and council of Virginia, by whom it was approved.<sup>2</sup> He then proceeded to raise his troops, keeping the destination of the expedition as secret as possible. Had he taken into consultation George Morgan or some of the men associated with him, he could easily have put himself into communication with the American party in the Illinois. On account of this silence he never fully understood the conditions existing in the French villages. He had preferred to work by himself and had collected his own information. In 1777 he had sent two spies, S. More and B. Linn, to Kaskaskia to investigate the situation. They remained in the villages some time, giving themselves out as hunters; but they failed to get into communication with the leaders of the opposition to Rocheblave, because Clark had not informed even his spies of his purpose.<sup>1</sup> It was evidently expected by the American traders of Kaskaskia that they would learn something from these Kentucky hunters, for Bentley, who was absent, wrote to Murray concerning them; but the latter answered: "As to the hunters you write of there is three of them, one of them was here before, his name Benjm Lynn, but they bring no news that I can hear of worth reporting."<sup>2</sup> According to Clark's account of their investigation given to Patrick Henry, the governor of Virginia, they reported that: "The principal inhabitants are entirely against the American cause, and look on us as notorious rebels that ought to be subdued at any rate, but I don't doubt but after being acquainted with the cause they would become good friends to it."<sup>3</sup> There has been preserved, however, another account according to which they reported that there were: "Strong traces of affection for the Americans, among some of the inhabitants."<sup>4</sup> There is also a tradition that Linn was warned by a trader of an attack planned by some Indians against himself and companion.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>2</sup> This is not the place for an account of military actions, nor have I considered it necessary to repeat what is contained in Clark's own narratives, which have been so frequently exploited by historians and novelists that they are very familiar. His Letter to Mason and his Memoir have been printed in English, Conquest of the Northwest, i., 411 et seq.

The history of Clark's journey down the Ohio, of his landing near Fort Massac, and of the march across the prairies is so well known that it need not be retold; but the events occurring at Kaskaskia which made his success possible are less familiar. The states had sent down the Mississippi, in the spring of the year, an expedition under Willing to make attacks on the British posts in the south. The course of this expedition, Rocheblave had followed with interest and, as he heard of the depredations Willing made upon property, he published the accounts to the villagers in order to cause them to fear for their own.<sup>6</sup> When he learned that another expedition was on the Ohio directed against the Illinois, he connected it with the Willing raid and saw in it an attempt on the part of the Americans to gain control of the whole stretch of the river. This news of the approach of Clark did not reach him much before that officer was at the falls and possibly not before he had landed at Massac creek. Rocheblave immediately ordered out the militia to make preparations for resistance; but he soon learned the strength of the party opposed to him, for the American traders in Kaskaskia either persuaded the inhabitants not to attempt repelling the invaders, and in this they were aided by the Spanish emissaries, or else they quieted the fears of an attack. Whatever occurred, Rocheblave found that he could accomplish nothing, for his government was by persuasion rather than by command, and the militia officers were members of the party that gave lukewarm support to the British and was half inclined to the American cause. Unfortunately for Rocheblave, his chief supporters were not with him at this crisis; Viviat had died in the preceding fall, Lachance had recently been taken prisoner,<sup>1</sup> and Cerré had just started with some furs for Michillimackinac. Hoping that the sight of a reinforcement coming to their assistance might arouse the inhabitants, Rocheblave sent a messenger to summon the militia from Vincennes; and M. Legras actually started with forty men from that village to assist Kaskaskia. The message had come too late, however, for Clark landed at Massac creek, marched across country, and cut off any help which might be rendered from the Wabash. Thus the crisis, which Rocheblave had been prophesying, arrived, and he found himself unable to make any resistance.<sup>2</sup>

"The majority of the inhabitants knowing the manœuvres which had occurred in the lower part of the Mississippi were resolved to defend themselves, but the dealings of our neighbors, the Spaniards, and the abuse of the treacherous English, especially those named Daniel Murray, Richard Winston, and John Hanson, prevented them from doing it. There remained to me for a resource Mr. Legras, who prepared himself with forty men to come and join me from Fort Vincennes, where he is a captain of militia, but the rebels having landed on the beautiful river [Ohio] sixty leagues from here, crossed the neck of land which separates that river from this place, and prevented that. I regret so much the more that he did not arrive, as a number of men on seeing me supported would have joined themselves to us, and we would have been able to hold the balance of affairs in opposition to those who were desti-

Whether Clark and the American traders of Kaskaskia communicated with each other before the attack in the night of July 4th and 5th, is very doubtful. We have seen that, before setting out from Fort Pitt, Clark knew of no party in the village that was ready to give him assistance; but he may have heard of the American partisans from that party of hunters, just from Kaskaskia, who met him at the Tennessee River, although from his own account their information was anything but reassuring; or Murray and his associates may have communicated with him as soon as he approached the village. There is some slight evidence that the capture of the village was made less difficult by the aid of some of the inhabitants; for Clark seems to have found no trouble in procuring boats to convey his troops across the Kaskaskia River;<sup>1</sup> and, if the tradition is trustworthy, his soldiers were admitted to the fort and guided to the bedchamber of Rocheblave by a Pennsylvanian, who may have been Daniel Murray.<sup>2</sup> Clark himself says that provisions were tute and in extremities." In 1780 Rocheblave gave a similar explanation of his failure to defend the Illinois. Can. Archiver, B., 122, p. 545.

Since Clark himself says "that they had some suspicion of being attacked and had made some preparations — keeping out spies — but they, making no discoveries, had got off their guard" (Letter to Mason, English, Conquest of the Northwest, i., 416) and, "we were informed that the people, a few days before, were under arms, but had concluded that the cause of the alarm was without foundation, and that at that time there was a great number of men in town, but that the Indians had generally left it, and at present all was quiet" (Ibid p. 476), there appears to be no good reason for rejecting the testimony of Rocheblave. It is to be noticed also that the Cahokians write as if the Kaskaskians chose not to defend their village. See post, p. 537. The chief difficulty in reconciling Rocheblave's account with other known facts lies in his own letter of July 4th, which gives a long narrative of the depredations of the Willing expedition on the southern Mississippi and only makes a brief mention of the expected attack on Kaskaskia i. e., "We are upon the eve of having here a numerous band of brigands."

Historians have followed too exclusively and uncritically the narratives of Clark, who was fond of the dramatic, not to say the melodramatic, and who never hesitated to omit details which would affect what he regarded as the dramatic dénouement. Like other frontiersmen he never underestimated his own deeds, and after a careful comparison of the letter to Mason with the Memoir, one is forced to believe that he was given to exaggeration. Therefore it is not surprising that he did not make more of the persons and conditions which made the occupation of Kaskaskia easy and that he emphasized the surprise of the place, since that appealed to his dramatic instincts. Mason in his paper on Philippe Rocheblave (Chi. Hist. Soc.'s Collections, iv., 373) uses the letter quoted above, but does not attempt to give any explanation of it. I have not noticed an attempt to explain this letter by any other historian of this event. See Winsor, Nar. and Crit. Hist. vi., 719; English, Conquest of the Northwest, i., 168; Roosevelt, Winning of the West, Pt. ii., ch. iv.

<sup>1</sup> He says, "We marched after night to a farm that was on the same side of the river, about a mile above the town, took the family prisoners, and found plenty of boats to cross in, and in two hours transported ourselves to the other shore with the greatest silence." (Letter to Mason, English, Conquest of the Northwest, i., 416.) If he really found these boats on the east bank of the Kaskaskia, how did they happen to be there, since very few people were living on that bank at the time?

collected for his troops by Murray and Winston during the night.<sup>1</sup>

It is evident from the narratives of Clark and Bowman and from the letters of Rocheblave that the inhabitants and the commandant himself had not expected the attack so soon. On the day before the attack Rocheblave wrote to Carleton: "We are upon the eve of seeing here a numerous band of brigands,"<sup>2</sup> but the whole tone of the letter proves that by the "eve" he did not mean that very night. In the letter sent after the capture of the village, he writes as if he had expected that there was plenty of time to send to Vincennes for aid, after he had learned of Clark's movements; and as if he had been disappointed in his hope of assistance, because the Virginians had made a forced march by land. This looks as if he had expected the party to take the customary route down the Ohio and up the Mississippi. If Clark had followed this course, the time would have been ample for Rocheblave to obtain reinforcements from Vincennes.<sup>3</sup>

What the feelings of the majority of the French people were when they heard the warwhoop of the frontiersmen in their village streets, can be easily imagined. Since the time of the attack was a surprise and the less intelligent French had been taught to believe the worst of the "Big Knives," the first fear of the majority has probably been correctly depicted by Clark. Many of the more intelligent, who had supported Rocheblave, must have felt terror at hearing the noise and have had misgivings of the future, which would place in power Murray, Winston, and Kennedy, whom they had learned to regard as their enemies. Others, like Father Gibault, who were acquainted with the hostility of the Protestant East to the Roman Catholic Church, feared perhaps that the freedom of worship might be denied them. After all allowance has been made for such causes as these and the suddenness of the attack, Clark's narrative of the abject terror of the French people still appears somewhat exaggerated. They were without doubt timid, but they were not poltroons. Besides, they saw several familiar faces among the Virginians, some of whom had been in Kaskaskia, and others they had met on trading trips.

The party strife of the village broke out in Clark's headquarters on the very night of the attack. The closest adherent of Rocheblave's faction, Gabriel Cerré, was absent from the village, and his enemies tried to win the favor of Clark by making accusations against him; but Clark was not deceived. He recognized that his position was critical. He was in an alien community and had only a small body of troops with which to hold the people in check. Under such circumstances he could not afford to drive the leader of such a strong party from him. How important he regarded the winning of the support of Cerré and his party is proved by the space he devotes in his Memoir to an account of his relations with this leader.<sup>1</sup> He finally confronted Cerré with his accusers, and the latter were afraid to repeat their charges. By this diplomatic conduct he won over the man who could bind the discordant elements in the villages to his side.

The chief means used by Clark to gain the good will of the French at this critical time were the French treaty and the cry of liberty. We have already seen that the words liberty and independence were not wholly unknown in these regions. To assert that the movement which was growing in France and which was in eleven years to break out in the French Revolution was without effect on the banks of the Mississippi would be taking too much for granted. The best of these men were educated and traveled to New Orleans and Quebec, and what was talked of there was repeated by the firesides of the Illinois. Only ten years before their friends of New Orleans were in revolt against Spanish tyranny,<sup>2</sup> when the word liberty became a household term; and two years later the French of the Illinois were making use of the same word in their struggle with Colonel Wilkins.<sup>1</sup> The traders from the East had been full of similar ideas during the past few years. Liberty and independence were words with which to fire the imaginations of the French and to make them dream of things to come.

The French treaty was Clark's trump card in the game he was playing; for the word France awakened in the minds of the Kaskaskians memories of days gone by, always more joyous than the days of present hardship,—those days when the lilies of France waved over the forts of the Illinois. France is a name of wonderful meaning to Frenchmen of all times. The people of Illinois felt its charm and, at a later day, said "when these men once pronounced the name of France, how could they raise their hands against them?"<sup>2</sup> Just previously rumors had been spread up and down the Mississippi that France was coming into her own again, ridiculous reports no doubt spread by those discontented with the British rule, and yet they aroused in the hearts of the French a hope, of which the appearance of Clark seemed a harbinger.

It was not with rifles and swords that Clark won the Illinois, but with the promise of liberty and the alliance with France. These two weapons were all sufficient. Immediately after the occupation of Kaskaskia Clark sent Bowman with a detachment of thirty men to occupy Cahokia, which yielded readily to the same persuasions.<sup>3</sup> Vincennes joined the American cause without even the use of troops, for Father Gibault undertook to persuade the people to submit, which they did after their priest had represented the case to them.<sup>4</sup> In their first enthusiasm the French furnished the Virginians with all their necessities and their need was great, for they had reached Kaskaskia, as the inhabitants of Vincennes said, "half naked like the Arabs."<sup>5</sup> But the spirit in which the French received the Americans is best seen in the way they aided in defending the country against the British. In December following the occupation of the Illinois by Clark, Lieutenant Governor Hamilton of Detroit retook Vincennes and threatened the other villages. At no time had Clark's position been so dangerous, for he had neither money nor sufficient troops. With him were only two companies of soldiers, in which some of the French had already enlisted. Since these were too few either to hold his position or to make an attack, he called upon the villages; and two companies of Frenchmen were formed. The merchants of the region raised the necessary money. Clark then made his difficult and dangerous march across the submerged prairies, a march which tried to the utmost the endurance of the men. The conquest of Vincennes and the retention of the whole Northwest for the Americans were the results. More than half of the men who followed him so bravely were inhabitants of the American Bottom.<sup>1</sup> To the French soldiers in Clark's little army as well as to the Virginians belongs the honor of that campaign and its consequences.

After the submission of the villages to him, Clark found himself in command of a large country inhabited by a people who had joined themselves willingly to his cause and to whom he had promised greater liberty than they had hitherto enjoyed. From the first he was called upon to exercise the power of commandant and judge. He continued for a time the custom, followed by the last two British representatives, of appointing arbitrators in all cases of dispute between the inhabitants.<sup>2</sup> This, however, was not in accordance with his own ideas of self-government, which were those of the West generally, nor did his many military duties permit him to give that attention to civil affairs that was required. He therefore made other arrangements. He writes that he caused: "a court of civil judicature to be established at Cahokia, elected by the people. Major Bowman, to the surprise of the people, held a poll for a magistracy, and was elected and acted as judge of the court. [The policy of Mr. Bowman holding a poll is easily perceived.] After this similar courts were established in the towns of Kaskaskia and Vincent."<sup>1</sup> The title of the court thus founded at Cahokia was the "Court of the Committee of Cahokia," and a few pages of the records of its sessions have been preserved and are printed in this volume.<sup>2</sup> Clark reserved the right of appeal to himself and he adds: "I believe that no people ever had their business done more to their satisfaction than they had through the means of these regulations for a considerable time."<sup>3</sup> By an examination of the few remaining records it is possible to arrive at an approximate date for the founding of these courts. The date of the earliest paper which has been preserved issuing from the court at Cahokia is October 29, 1778.<sup>4</sup> Among the Kaskaskia Records is a court record, the last pages of which were used by the clerk of the British government and later by the clerk of the Virginia government for recording deeds and other instruments. The first entry in it after the date of the occupation of Kaskaskia by Clark was made on October 20th. The last direct petition to Clark that exists is dated August 27.<sup>5</sup> Therefore it must be concluded that the courts were established between the last of August and the last of October. But it is possible to make a closer calculation. Since it is probable that an entry was made by the Kaskaskia clerk in his book of record shortly after the machinery of civil government was started, we may take the date October 20th as approximately the date of the establishment of the court at Kaskaskia; and since that at Cahokia was the earlier, the court of that village must have begun to hear suits about the middle of the same month and possibly a little earlier.<sup>1</sup>

These courts were modeled after the county courts of Virginia, with some modifications. The number of justices sitting at Cahokia was seven, four of whom were necessary for a quorum; the sessions were held weekly; the jurisdiction included both criminal and civil cases; the records of the sessions were kept in English.<sup>2</sup> Since the members of this committee were elected by popular vote, the first election of chief magistrates ever held on the soil of Illinois or of the old Northwest was that at Cahokia in the month of October, in the year 1778.

During the last few years disorder and crime had increased in the Illinois. We have seen how Rocheblave lacked the power to enforce good order and had appealed to public opinion without effect to put an end to the trading in liquor with the Indians. But it was not from the depredations of the Indians only that the people suffered. Members of the slave class, influenced by the disorders of the times, had become insolent and violent, so that the fear of the large population of red and black slaves was widespread, and with good reason, for many murders had recently been committed, for which the slaves were suspected of being responsible. Members of the family of the Nicolle had become sick and died under the most suspicious circumstances, and several sudden deaths of both whites and blacks had occurred which gave every evidence of being caused by poison. To stop further lawlessness by this class, Clark published a very stringent order against the slaves on December 24, 1778, in which he forbade them to walk the streets after sundown without a special permission from their masters, or to assemble for dances at night, under penalty of punishment by flogging.<sup>1</sup> All persons were forbidden to sell liquor to slaves. In the court of Cahokia an investigation of the death of the Nicolles was begun. This was not ended until the following June, when it was proved that some slaves, of whom two were particularly guilty, had poisoned a number of whites as well as several negroes.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> It is possible that Clark was mistaken about the establishment of a court at Kaskaskia, for among all the records that have been preserved there is not one issuing from such a court, or one that gives direct evidence of the existence of such a court. Moreover there has been preserved a petition, dated February 18, 1779, from a widow in regard to her husband's estate, in which she gives elaborate reasons for not having troubled Colonel Clark during his presence in Kaskaskia, and states that conditions are now such that she must have protection to save her property. Since Clark was away, she applied to the officers of militia of Kaskaskia. These heard her prayer and granted the protection. The act was signed by the officers, but not as members of a court. One name has been torn off, but the others are Joseph Charleville, Richard Winston, Charles Danis, and Charles de Lisle acting for Duplasy. Kas. Rec., Petitions.

Of this first experiment in popular government in the Illinois very little can be said, for almost all its records have been destroyed. The character of Clark, the order he preserved or tried to preserve, and the expedition with which justice was administered, no doubt made the government generally popular; still the military power was very evident and at times arbitrary, and the soldiers were becoming unruly. Therefore the French looked forward to the time when a civil government, not so dependent on the military force, should be inaugurated. The people were reasonable, however, and recognized the necessity of these temporary arrangements, and in their first enthusiasm exhibited a tractable and united spirit to their commandant. In justice to Clark it must be said that neither at this time nor later, when there was most just cause to criticise the military force, did the French utter a word of complaint against him, for he had won, not only their esteem, but their affection, so that they never held him responsible for the evils that crowded upon them.

One cause for uneasiness developed very soon among the people. In the first excitement over their change of allegiance and under the influence of that enthusiasm which was aroused by the talk of liberty and independence by Clark and his soldiers, they had been ready to make many sacrifices for the cause they had espoused. At first they gave freely of their goods, and later sold them to the patriots, who had brought them this "priceless gift", and received in return continental paper money, which they were assured by Clark and his officers was equal in value to the Spanish piastre, or else drafts on the treasury of Virginia or the Virginia agent at New Orleans, Oliver Pollock.<sup>3</sup> At the time the paper money was worth about twelve cents on the dollar, and the French were to learn that many of the drafts were worthless. The suspicions of the inhabitants were not aroused until early in 1779, while Clark was absent on the Vincennes expedition. Speculation in continental money was very common throughout the East and every advantage of variation in its value was used by the traders. It is not surprising, therefore, that the story of Clark's dealings in the Illinois were soon known by these men, who, tempted by the opportunity of purchasing goods with continentals at their face value, rushed into the region. They reached the French villages in the early spring of 1779, and in their eagerness to make the utmost use of the opportunity, they bid against each other with the result that the confidence of the French was lost and the value of the paper tumbled.<sup>1</sup> In speaking of this event, Clark says: "There is one circumstance very distressing, that of our own moneys being discredited, to all intents and purposes, by the great number of traders who come here in my absence, each outbidding the other, giving prices unknown in this country by five hundred per cent, by which the people conceived it to be of no value, and both French and Spaniards refused to take a farthing of it. Provision is three times the price it was two months past, and to be got by no other means than my own bonds, goods, and force."<sup>2</sup> There was another reason for the appreciation of the price of supplies. By the arrival of Virginians in regard to the value of the paper money. See Cahokian Memorial to De la Balme, printed in this vol., p. 547, also page 6; from the memorial of the people of Kaskaskia to the Virginia commissioners, March 1, 1783, is taken the following passage: "But on account of the honest appearance of General Clark and of his officers and because they assured us that they had orders to draw on M. Oliver Pollock, agent of the state of Virginia at New Orleans, there was no difficulty in obtaining all they needed for a specie in current paper, which was scattered in quantities both on this bank and the Spanish at the value of metallic piastres of Spain and all our supplies have been sold at the same rate and conditions . . . and since we could not believe that an officer in accordance with his orders would leave us ignorant of the fact that this money was depreciated, we have received it at its intrinsic value." (Menard Col., Tardiveau Papers.) In a memorial to the governor of Virginia the same people said: "The suppliants have furnished all the necessary provisions to the troops at a sufficiently moderate price and have been paid with a paper money and letters of exchange which we were assured were equal in value to the Spanish piastre." (Ibid., memorial dated May 4, 1781.) The people of Vincennes in a petition to the governor of Virginia, June 30, 1781, wrote: "The accredited officers of finance and others have assured us that continental money was of equal value with coin, and we accepted the same in good faith." (Va. State Papers, ii., 192.)

the Virginians all open trade with Canada had been stopped and, since that country was one of the chief sources from which the inhabitants drew their goods and to which they sold their furs, commerce became stagnant and commodities scarce.<sup>1</sup>

The credit of Clark's government was supported at this time by the merchants and traders of Illinois. He says: "Several merchants are now advancing considerable sums of their own property, rather than the service should suffer, by which I am sensible they must lose greatly, unless some method is taken to raise the credit of our coin."<sup>2</sup> The merchants who gave this timely aid to the American cause were Daniel Murray, Winston, Janis, the Charlevilles, the Bauvais, Duplasy, and Bienvenu, of Kaskaskia; Barbau of Prairie du Rocher; Godin, Trottier, Girault, LaCroix, Gratiot, and McCarty of Cahokia; LeGras, Huberdeau and Bosseron of Vincennes, and Vigo with possibly others of St. Louis.<sup>3</sup> The state of Virginia had undertaken more than she could perform, since her treasury was exhausted and her credit gone, so that Clark never received the financial support that he needed; and he and his officers were in time forced to use that expediency which made the Thirty Years War in Germany so frightful, namely that of compelling the people to support them. This last resort had not become necessary in the spring of 1779, at least it was not officially recognized; for the French were still ready to make herculean sacrifices for the cause which they had accepted and to furnish supplies on the doubtful credit of the state; but the time was fast approaching when they would demand a settlement.

<sup>3</sup> Clark's account against Virginia, in English, Conquest of the Northwest, ii., 1040 et seq. The list of names is not complete since I have been unable to identify several as spelled by Clark and because drafts were drawn by other officers besides Clark and these would not appear in his account. In fact, the list of those who at this time or later furnished supplies on credit is a very long one, including almost every man of property in the Illinois. Gratiot of Cahokia, Cerré of Kaskaskia, and Vigo of St. Louis have always received due credit for the assistance they furnished, but they were no more active than the other members of the French villages. In the end these three never suffered from their efforts at this period as severely as did many others. Richard Winston, who at the time of the coming of Clark was regarded as wealthy, died in poverty; and the Bauvais family was reduced to almost the same extremity. These are only two instances among many.

While Clark had been regulating the affairs of the Illinois, the news of his great success had been received with rejoicing at Williamsburg, and the government of Virginia began preparing for some more permanent form of civil establishment for her new citizens. The territory north of the Ohio River lies within the region which Virginia claimed as hers under her charter granting the land from sea to sea. According to the Virginia interpretation of that charter, the state was fully within her rights in legislating for that territory, to which her troops had just given her another title.

On the 19th of November, 1778, a committee was appointed by the legislature to draft the requisite bill, which was introduced on the 30th and passed both houses on December 9th.<sup>1</sup>

The civil establishment thus created for the region was the same in its essential character as that which Virginia had used in her expansion westward, the county government. Kentucky had but a few years before received a similar organization. This new territory, which included all that Clark actually held, stretched from the Ohio to the Illinois River and up the Wabash towards Detroit to an indefinite boundary. Ouatanon was certainly under the jurisdiction of Virginia, but beyond that post and the Illinois River there is no proof of her exercising jurisdiction. The land lying between this northern boundary and the lakes was disputed territory and was traversed by Virginia and British troops at various times.

The government of the "county of Illinois", as it was called, was temporary in character and was given force at the time of its enactment for only one year and then to the end of the next session of the legislature. On account of the difference in the population Virginia law was not fully extended to the new county.<sup>2</sup> "On account of the remoteness of the region," so runs the preamble of the act, "it may be difficult, if not impracticable, to govern it by the present laws of the commonwealth, until proper information, by intercourse with their fellow citizens, on the east side of the Ohio, shall have familiarized them to the same, and it is therefore expedient that some form of government adapted to their circumstances should in the meantime be established." The chief executive officer and commander of the militia was the county lieutenant, or commandant. He was empowered to appoint as many deputy commandants, militia officers, and commissaries as he found necessary. The civil officers were to be the same as the inhabitants were accustomed to, and they were to administer the law which was in force in the region already, that is, the coutume de Paris. Officers, created by the lieutenant, to which the inhabitants were unaccustomed were to be supported by the Virginia treasury, the others by the people. Both military and civil officers were required to take the oath of office according to the religion to which they were accustomed. The people were given assurance of the free exercise of their religion. The power of the court to be established and of the county lieutenant was limited in actions for treason and murder to the same extent as it was in all counties of Virginia.<sup>1</sup> In such cases the lieutenant was permitted to stay execution until the opinion of the governor or the assembly had been obtained.

On December 12, 1778, and in accordance with this act, Patrick Henry commissioned John Todd county lieutenant. For such a difficult and important position Todd seemed as good a candidate as was available. His ancestry was Scotch-Irish, one of his ancestors having fled from Scotland to escape the persecutions of Claverhouse. His grandfather had come to America in the year 1737, when Todd's father was still in his youth, and had settled in Montgomery County, Pennsylvania. From his mother Todd inherited Welsh blood. His education had been exceptionally good. His uncle, also named John Todd, was a well-educated man, having graduated from Princeton in 1749, and was a minister in Louisa County, Virginia, where he kept a classical school. It was at his uncle's school that the future county lieutenant was educated. Afterwards he studied law and practiced a short time.

But the attraction of the frontier life was in his blood, as it was in that of so many other young men of his time, and at the outbreak of the Dunmore's War he became aid to General Lewis. In the following year he made his way among the first settlers to Kentucky and was present at the meeting which was held to establish the government of the proprietary colony of Transylvania. In 1777 he was elected burgess from the county of Kentucky to the general assembly of Virginia. The duties of this office prevented him from taking part in Clark's expedition to the Illinois.<sup>1</sup> In appearance Todd was far from imposing. He was only five feet six inches in height, but was reputed the swiftest footman of his day and excelled in all forms of gymnastics. Like Clark and most of the leaders of the western movement he was still a young man, being at the time of his appointment twenty-eight years old. His experience, however, had been on the frontier; he was accustomed to the American type of pioneer, and was personally brave and a good Indian fighter. He united with these qualities a knowledge of law and a culture superior to that of any other man in the West. His education and his character seemed to fit him for the task before him. But the events in the Illinois were already approaching a crisis, brought on by the clash of Anglo-Saxon and Gallic temperament; the unity of feeling and the glow of enthusiasm aroused by the shouts of liberty and the huzzas for the French alliance were already changing, and the French were beginning to count the cost of the transference of their allegiance; criticism, denunciation, and open opposition were ready to break forth. Under such conditions was the experience of twenty-eight years sufficient to enable Todd to master the situation?<sup>2</sup>

The instructions given him by Governor Henry were wise and suited to the occasion: "Altho Great reliance is placed on your prudence in managing the people you are to reside among, yet consider'g you as unacquainted in some Degree with their Genius,

Clark received Todd with joy, for they were good friends; but a greater reason was that he found the task of superintending the civil department and at the same time of making the needed preparations for the contemplated attack on Detroit in the summer too difficult.<sup>2</sup> The fussy details of the former were annoying to a mind like Clark's which was only aroused to its best by the excitement of some bold military undertaking.

Todd reached the Illinois in May, 1779. One of his first duties was to organize the militia. There was little to be done, for Clark had maintained the military organization which he found in existence and had confirmed the appointments of the officers already in command. Todd now reconfirmed them under the authority conferred on him by the act of the Virginia legislature. As far as the records show neither Clark nor Todd made many changes in the personnel of the militia. Under the British rule the officers had been selected from the most prominent men of the community, and the new government could not afford to alienate them. A few changes were made by one of the Virginians in Kaskaskia, where Richard Winston, an American trader, was made commandant, Nicolas Janis and Joseph Duplasy were retained, and Brazeau was not given a commission.<sup>1</sup> There could be no thought of change at Prairie du Rocher, where J. Bte. Barbau had been chief citizen for years.<sup>2</sup> At St. Philippe a commandant was also appointed, probably Pierre the Sieur de Girardot, who held somewhat the same position in that community as Barbau at Prairie du Rocher.<sup>3</sup> At Cahokia Joseph Cesirre, who had been judge and captain of militia for several years, was not commissioned, but this was probably due to his death, which occurred in this year, possibly before Todd's arrival. François Trottier was made commandant of the village and Michel Beaulieu and Pierre Godin called Turanjeau, were commissioned captains.<sup>4</sup> The latter was a new name in such a prominent position, but the Godin family was an important one and without doubt the appointment was approved by the people. In Peoria J. Bte. Mailhet was appointed commandant.<sup>5</sup>

Before issuing the commissions to the militia officers, Todd had given his attention to the establishment of the civil govern-

<sup>2</sup> Barbau was from New Orleans and was about fifty-seven years old at this time. He was one of the judges of the court of judicature established by Colonel Wilkins in 1768 and from that date is conspicuous in all the affairs of the American Bottom. It will be seen that he was called to an important position later at a critical time. See post, p. . . After the United States came into control of the country, he still continued to be a representative citizen and was appointed to many public positions. He died in 1810. Kas. Rec.; Smith, St. Clair Papers, ii., 165. His will is recorded in the probate record of Randolph Co.

<sup>3</sup> Girardot was a former French infantry officer, who for some reason chose to remain in the Illinois. He was appointed one of the justices by Colonel Wilkins. I have not been able to find the rest of his name, for he was always called by his title.

<sup>5</sup> The appointment of a commandant at Peoria and St. Philippe is not mentioned by Todd in his Record-Book, but since we learn that such officers were acting later at these places, they must have been appointed about this time. For an account of Mailhet see p. 231, note 2. In 1790 it was believed that Mailhet was appointed commandant by Clark. Smith, St. Clair Papers, ii., 138.

ment. He had received very definite instructions on this head in the act creating the county, according to which the magistrates were to be such as the people were accustomed to and were to be elected by popular vote. The problem, however, was not an easy one. Under the French regime the civil magistrate was a judge with sole authority in all judicial and executive matters not belonging to the military department.<sup>1</sup> During the British period there had been a feeble attempt, in 1768, to create a court of judicature, but it had failed;<sup>2</sup> and since that time the military commandant had been also judge, assisted by justices in each village, whose duties seem to have been to put in execution the decrees of the commandant. Neither of these arrangements was in accord with the democratic ideas of the frontier. There was, however, another model. Since the fall of the previous year, the Illinois villages had been governed by the courts established by Clark. The justices were elected by popular vote and had given general satisfaction. Todd determined to continue these as fulfilling the requirements of the law. Since Illinois was so large, it was impossible to hold a court at any one of the villages for the whole county. Three districts were, therefore, created: the Kaskaskia district included Prairie du Rocher, Chartres village, and St. Philippe besides Kaskaskia itself; the Cahokia district extended from the village of Prairie du Pont to Peoria on the Illinois River; and the Vincennes district included all the region of the Wabash.<sup>3</sup> The court consisted of six justices from the principal village and representatives from the other communities of the district. Thus two justices were elected for Prairie du Rocher and one for St. Philippe in the Kaskaskia district; one was added to the Cahokia court for the little village of Prairie du Pont; and three were elected for the communities in the Wabash region outside of Vincennes.<sup>4</sup> These

<sup>4</sup> Todd says in his speech that six justices are to be elected at Kaskaskia and two others from Prairie du Rocher and St. Philippe. As a matter of fact two were elected justices were elected for a year and might become candidates for re-election.<sup>1</sup>

The election for the new government was held at Kaskaskia, on May 12th, with suitable ceremonies. The people were summoned to a general assembly at the church door, where they had been accustomed to meet to transact their business for years. They came in their picturesque holiday apparel, for to them this seemed the day of the fulfilment of all their anticipations. Near by were drawn up the Virginia soldiers of the Illinois battalion, and possibly groups of Kaskaskia Indians were on the outskirts of the crowd. The central group was composed of Clark with his officers and Todd with his attendants, and with these stood without doubt Father Gibault.<sup>2</sup>

The presiding officer of this remarkable assembly was George Rogers Clark. He had prepared an address for the occasion, but since his knowledge of French was limited, it was written and read by his official interpreter, Jean Girault. His address was in part as follows: "From your first declaration of attachment to the American cause up to the time of the glorious capture of post St. Vincent, I had doubted your sincerity; but in that critical moment I proved your fidelity. I was so touched by the zeal which you have shown that my desire is at present to render you happy and to prove to you the sincere affection that I have for the welfare and advancement of this colony in general and of each individual in particular. The young men of this colony have returned from Post St. Vincent covered with laurels which I hope from Prairie du Rocher, as the election certificate shows. (Kas. Rec.) The ninth member of the court was the Sieur de Girardot, who was a resident of St. Philippe. (Amer. State Pap., Pub. Lands, ii., 192.) The number six remains throughout the period as the number of justices to be elected at Kaskaskia. See pp. cxvi., cxxiv. At Cahokia there was always a member of the court who was a resident of Prairie du Pont and the court of Vincennes must have also followed the Kaskaskia model.

<sup>1</sup> In Cahokia the election was annual and on account of the completeness of the records it is best to base conclusions about practice on that of the court of that village; but in the certificate of the second election of the two justices of Prairie du Rocher in 1789, it is stated that the time of service of the justices as established by law had passed and so two more justices were elected. This would make the tenure of office three years. (Kas. Rec., Pol. Papers.) No conclusions can be drawn from the elections at Kaskaskia, since they were held so irregularly and the same is true of what little is known of the court at Vincennes. (See post, p. lxxiv.; Dunn, Indiana, passim.)

<sup>2</sup> In all French villages the regular place for holding assemblies was in front of the church. Babeau, Les assemblées générales, 21 et seq. It is possible that the troops and the Indians were not present, but it seems probable that they were.

they will continue to wear." He then praised those who had remained at home to defend their village, and expressed a hope that they would soon have an opportunity to win similar glory. He told them that they would soon possess the liberty which the Americans enjoyed, and that America would protect them. The government, "has appointed for you a civil lieutenant governor to regulate and settle your affairs. In a short time you will know the American system, which you will, perhaps, think strange in principle, but in the end you will find in it so much peace and tranquillity that you will bless the day that you embraced the cause of the Americans. You should be persuaded that we desire to render you happy and to procure for you all possible succor.

"I present to you Colonel Todd, my good friend, as your governor. He is the only person in the state whom I desired to fill this post in this colony. I am fully persuaded from my knowledge of his capacity and diligence that he will succeed in rendering to you justice and making you contented.

"You are assembled here, gentlemen, for an affair of the greatest importance, namely, to elect the most capable and illustrious persons to sit in judgment on your differences. . . . I pray you to consider the importance of this choice and to make it without partiality and to elect the persons most worthy of your trust; and I hope that in a short time that you will be convinced that you are the freest people in the universe."<sup>1</sup>

Clark was followed by the county lieutenant, John Todd. His speech was also read by some one familiar with the language. He said in part: "Gentlemen, I am sent by the government of Virginia to exercise the duties of chief magistrate of this county. The reception which I have received from you deserves my thanks. I am flattered and shall always be happy, if my power can serve your well-being. I am sure that nothing will be lacking on my part to secure that end.

"The Republic of Virginia has had only noble motives in coming here. It was not moved by the love of conquest but has come to invite you to participate with her citizens in the blessing of a free and equal independence and to be governed and judged by officers who shall be placed in power by the people.

"Your great distance from the capital, gentlemen, does not permit you to send representatives to the assembly; but if in the future it happens that for your welfare or to avoid loss you prefer such representation, I have it in my instructions to assure you that it will not be refused you.

"The purpose for which we have assembled you to-day, gentlemen, is that you may choose among you six of the most notable and most judicious to be judges of the court of Kaskaskia, conjointly with two others from Prairie du Rocher and St. Philippe.

"Each one with the right of voting can give his vote, either viva voce or by writing, to elect whomever he wishes to place in office."<sup>1</sup>

The assembly then proceeded to the election. A large ballot sheet had been prepared which was divided into squares. At the top of this were placed the names of the candidates, and at the side the names of the voters as they handed in their votes either by word of mouth or by writing, and their choice was checked off in the proper squares.<sup>2</sup> The harmony of parties is evident from the list of men chosen as justices. The old factional strife, which had marked the years of Rocheblave's government, was hushed before the grand ideals which had been invoked by the men who had inaugurated this new constitution. All men united in choosing those who appeared most fitted to exercise the duties of the new office. At the head of the court was placed the man who had been the chief support of Rocheblave, but who had in the past few months won the confidence of Clark and his officers by the liberal assistance he had given their tottering finances, Gabriel Cerré. On the whole, however, the names of the judges are those of men who had been lukewarm to the British cause and had won favor either in the recent campaign against Vincennes or by their cordial acceptance of the American allegiance. There were elected from Kaskaskia, besides Cerré, Joseph Duplasy, Jacques Lasource, Nicolas Janis, Nicolas Lachance, and Charles Charleville.<sup>1</sup>

On May 19th the people of Prairie du Rocher assembled and elected J. Bte. Barbau and Antoine Duchaufour de Louvieres as their representatives in the court. At St. Philippe, Pierre Sieur de Girardot was elected.<sup>2</sup>

The court now being complete, Todd issued the commission on May the twenty-first: "From the great Confidence reposed in your Judgment & Integrity by the good people of Kaskaskia and its dependencies and agreeably to an act of the general assembly of Virginia, you are hereby constituted & appointed Justices of the peace for the District of Kaskaskia and Judges of the Court of the said District in cases both civil & criminal. any four or more of you are authorized to constitute a Court before whom shall be cognizable all actions and cases of which the Courts of the Counties of this commonwealth Respectively have Cognizance. your judgment must have the Concurrence of at least a majority and be entered with the proceedings previous and subsequent and fairly recorded in Books provided for that purpose."<sup>3</sup>

Richard Winston, who was already commandant of the village, was appointed by Todd to the office of sheriff and Jean Girault, state's attorney. Carbonneaux, who had been clerk during the British period, was re-elected by the court.<sup>4</sup>

The date of the inauguration of the court at Cahokia is not known. During the subsequent years the elections were held generally after the middle of June, the nineteenth being the favorite date; but the court was elected before that date in 1779, for it was in session as early as the tenth of June.<sup>5</sup> The election passed off without making many changes in the personnel of the court which had been established in 1778 by Major Bowman. In the place of Langlois, Bte. Saucier was returned. J. Bte. LaCroix was appointed sheriff by Todd and François Saucier was elected clerk by the court.<sup>1</sup> A court was also established at Vincennes. As this post lay outside the territory which in time has become the state of Illinois and since the records from which this account is drawn belong to the villages of the Mississippi bottom, the history of Vincennes will be noticed only incidentally in this Introduction.

The history of these courts was very dissimilar, as will be shown in the following pages; but there are certain general statements in regard to them which can be made that are true of all. The courts met at first rather irregularly, for the justices seem to have attempted to continue the weekly sessions to which they had become accustomed in Clark's courts. Later they gave this up and settled down to holding monthly sessions with some regularity and meeting in special sessions when required.<sup>2</sup> The individual justices had jurisdiction in cases involving not more than twenty-five shillings, as was the law in the other counties of Virginia.<sup>3</sup> The French law was retained as the law of the county, but it was modified somewhat by the law of Virginia. In a letter to Clark on December 12, 1778, Governor Henry mentions sending him the Bill of Rights of Virginia to guide the French people, and appeal was made to it at one time at least in the history of the court of Kaskaskia.<sup>4</sup> But this was not the only Virginia act that was used in these courts, for we find mention of the "Code of Laws and Bill of Rights" as a guide to be followed in questions of difficulty.<sup>5</sup> What this code contained I have been unable to discover, but it was probably the more important laws respecting the county courts. There was some attempt at Kaskaskia to regulate the procedure in accordance with English law. On one of the stray papers of the records from Kaskaskia there is a regular docket like that of any English court. At the end of the Cahokia court record, published in this volume, there is an attempt to imitate the same form. Trial by jury was also permitted and probably required in criminal cases; at least the record of the first jury trial at Cahokia was criminal. Another evidence of the influence of the English law is the practice of arresting men for debt, which makes a late appearance in the history of the Cahokia court. On the whole the law of the courts is that of the coutume de Paris, as it had been used in the Illinois throughout the eighteenth century. The litigants do not as a rule favor the English procedure and are generally satisfied to have a majority of the judges decide their cases in accordance with equity.

There were very serious charges made against the Vincennes justices on account of the large costs they demanded. A similar charge could not be made against the Cahokia court, for, with the exception of a few cases, which might be explained if we knew all the circumstances, the costs were moderate and not different from those that had been fixed by the ordinances of the French kings. Of the Kaskaskia court almost nothing is known, on account of the disappearance of the record. That the justices of Cahokia were careful in preserving the records of their sessions is evident from this volume. The history of the courts at Kaskaskia and Vincennes was far more stormy, and no doubt in the factional fights the records were not kept as well, but that they were made is evident from numerous references to them in letters and petitions. Where they are now is not known, but in both places there were plenty of men who would prefer that such records should not remain in existence, and they have no doubt been destroyed.

Although unity among the French population appears to have reigned at the election and there was great enthusiasm expressed for Clark and the new county lieutenant, there was no such feeling for the American soldiers or for the numerous traders and land speculators who had already found their way into the country. The backwoodsman was a type that had been developed rather slowly in the Eastern colonies; but the endless Indian warfare, the life of the woods, the separation from the centers of civilization, the need of reliance on self had produced a set of men well fitted for the task of winning the West. Of great physical strength, brave to recklessness, splendid riflemen, trained in woodcraft in which they were second only to their foes, the Indians, lovers of individual freedom, hostile to the regulations of society, hard drinkers, suspicious, quarrelsome, intolerant, uncultured even to vulgarity, they had all the virtues as well as the vices of the Homeric heroes.

It is difficult to trace the origin of these men of the frontier, for they came from all nations, from England, Ireland, Germany, and Holland. There was also a strong strain of Scotch-Irish blood from western Pennsylvania. Some came from respectable families of the eastern settlers; many had fled to the West to escape the consequences of crime; others were redemptioners. Men of noble ideals mingled with those of the criminal class, for the West asked no questions in regard to the origin and past life of men, provided they were courageous and could wield an axe and fire a gun. What was needed were men, and they came from all classes. The love of the frontier with its excitement was in their blood and they came to fight the Indians, to quarrel among themselves, take up the land, winning it from the Indians and from nature in a way that no other men could have done so well. The well-controlled colonies of the French with their many prohibitions on individual initiative had failed where the splendid self-reliance and personal assertiveness of the American pioneers succeeded.

The men trained under the French system now came in contact with this different race of beings. In the ensuing struggle those best adapted to survive in the life of the backwoods had an advantage which they used without restraint and without compassion, and the French gave way before the egoism of the Americans, for whom they were no match. There was little to unite these discordant elements. The French were Catholics; the majority of Americans, Protestant, and the Calvinistic blood of the Independents and Presbyterians still ran warm in the veins of the pioneers, although they may have long ceased to feel the restraining influence of religion. For them the Catholics were enemies, as they had been on many a battle field of the Old World. The French lived on good terms with the Indians, the pioneer knew no good Indian save a dead one. With unremitting and relentless watchfulness they waged that war of extermination until the Indian was driven from the coveted prairies. The friends of the foe who had murdered with such cruel barbarity father, mother, sister, and brother of these stalwart pioneers were not to be trusted, and at every Indian uprising the French people were suspected. The French had been educated to respect the law and to obey the magistrates. With their little difficulties they were accustomed to run to the constituted authority for redress. The frontiersmen preferred to execute their own law and in any dispute were themselves judge, jury and executioner. Let a disagreement arise and there followed that terrific fight in which no rule was known, no end was allowed, save the yielding of one party to the greater physical strength of the other. Kicking, throttling, gouging of the eyes, biting were all permissible. In such a struggle the greater strength and weight of the American had a distinct advantage over the Frenchman. Hence that contempt for the smaller race which is so marked in the attitude of the pioneer for his French neighbor.

No better example exists of their differences than in their manner of life. The frontiersmen preferred the isolated log cabin, built without the least attempt at attractiveness; bare of furniture, comfortless, ill kept, life here was unlovely, individualistic, and unsocial. Even when forced for safety to seek the shelter of the stockade, they brought to the common life only the same qualities. Amidst the stench of cattle and hogs in the enclosure, the young were brought up with no conception of a quieter and more lovely life. The hero of the stockade was the strongest in the rough and tumble fight, the surest shot, the killer of Indians. The French were temperamentally the opposite; their mode of life had more refinement, more attempt at æsthetic enjoyment, was gentler in every way. Their little cottages in the village community surrounded by the picket fence, which enclosed a garden with vegetables and flowers, set them apart as a people of different ideas and civilization.

It was over these two people who were now mingling in the Illinois villages that Todd was called to rule. The soldiers of Clark had answered nobly to his call to war against the British and Indians, but it required other training than theirs to garrison a village of peaceful citizens. When the spirit of self-abnegation, which marked the army of backwoodsmen on the campaign, had disappeared, the equality which reigned on the frontier reasserted itself and Clark's influence became only that of an equal. The obedience yielded to him in an emergency and in the face of danger was past, and the spirit of individual assertiveness was again predominant.

The French had experienced the evils of this rule of the untrained militia from Virginia and Kentucky, and were glad to be finally released from its petty tyranny. They saw with joy the inauguration of the civil government, for the court would be their champion against the soldiery; and under the strong hand of the lawcourt, an institution which the French were accustomed to respect, order would again be restored and they would taste the sweets of that liberty which Clark and Todd had promised them. The court was French, and it is to this institution that the "villagers" clung throughout the following years, for through it, alone could they hope to bring that freedom from military rule which oppressed them.

The reverse of the picture must not be forgotten. The position of the Illinois battalion was a very difficult one. The men were in a country far from their source of supplies, surrounded by hostile tribes of Indians, and unable to confer easily with the officials in Virginia. They, therefore, were frequently forced to act independently and their acts were not always confirmed by the Virginia authorities. Their supply of money from the state was also inadequate for the work they had to perform. This was due to two causes: first because Virginia did not fully appreciate the importance of holding the Illinois — that was a need better understood by the Kentuckians; second, the finances of the state were such that there was no supply for this distant country. In 1780, Governor Jefferson wrote to Clark: "The less you depend for supplies from this quarter the less will you be disappointed by those impediments which distances and a precarious foreign commerce throws in the way, for these reasons it will be eligible to withdraw as many of your men as you can from the west side of the Ohio leaving only as many men as will be necessary for keeping the Illinois settlement in spirits, but we must accommodate our measures for doing this to our means."<sup>1</sup> In the previous year the situation was only a little better. It was the necessity of holding the country at any cost that forced upon the men of the West the use of measures which bore with harshness on the French, measures which were often cruel and brutally carried out. That they held the territory for America is their excuse. The French were not the only ones to suffer. Clark never received just recompense for his labors, and many personal debts which he incurred for the cause were never paid. Many of his officers suffered in the same way and found themselves financially embarrassed by their devotion to the American interests.

No sooner was the court of Kaskaskia established than it took up the cause of the French and attempted to put an end to the anarchy which threatened. In a memorial to John Todd of the twenty-fourth of May, 1779,<sup>2</sup> the justices told their grievances and demanded reforms: First, "The soldiers of Fort Clark go into the commons of this place to hunt the animals of the undersigned petitioners and without giving heed to the brandings or to whom they may belong they have enclosed them in the fort and killed them without giving notice to anyone. Such acts have never been seen in this country before. It is contrary to all law and particularly contrary to the usages and customs of an independent country like this one, which has been announced to be free. In a place where each should be able to do with his property what pleases him and to enjoy it as seems good to him, the soldiers have killed trap-veen, mink, beaver, and other animals belonging to people who can not subsist without them. It causes for some a lack of means for the cultivation of the fields and for others a lack of nourishment and subsistence for the family. We have always been ready to furnish animals for the garrison in so far as it was in our power and are still ready as far as we have resources. If it is permitted that our beasts of burden be killed, how can we cultivate our fields and furnish the needs of the garrison and those of our families? If such abuses continue, which tend to the ruin of the colony, what will become of the colonists?"

The second subject of the memorial was against the sale of intoxicating liquors to the Indians. They said that the French had made an agreement not to sell any liquors to the Indians, as it had been the cause of disaster to the colony and they begged Todd to put an end to this trade.<sup>1</sup> The third subject was in regard to trade with the slaves without permission of the masters. The black law was still in force and forbade such trade, which was nevertheless practiced and caused the slaves to be insubordinate and disorderly.

On this last subject Clark had already issued an ordinance, and at this very time there was in process the trial, which had begun in the courts founded by Clark, of the slaves for poisoning.<sup>2</sup> The case was proved against two and a sentence of execution pronounced against them, so that this kind of disorder from the slaves received a check.

The subject of trade in liquor with the Indians was apparently regulated by the issuance of trade licenses; at least there are in existence two such licenses, one of which is in this volume and the other may be found in John Todd's Record-Book.<sup>1</sup> Since these measures did not prove effective, the court, on September 6th, issued a proclamation prohibiting the sale of liquors to the savages and the buying of any commodity from slaves without permission of their owners.<sup>2</sup>

The first subject was beyond the power of the civil government and was never fully righted, for this grievance concerning the killing of cattle belonging to the French appears in all subsequent petitions of the inhabitants of the villages, whether they addressed themselves to Virginia, to Congress, or elsewhere. The position was a difficult one, and the soldiers left to shift for themselves recurred again and again to this method of foraging. During the summer of 1779 some steps seem to have been taken to stop the abuse, for the officers complained several time of the lack of supplies, and the imminent need of military seizure, which they were forbidden to make.

There was another vital question in the Illinois which demanded the attention of the county lieutenant. The land was fertile, and he had every reason to fear that there would be a rush of settlers to the county, which would now fall under the land laws of Virginia that permitted the greatest license to settlers in preempting land. The result in Kentucky had been land-speculation, law-suits, and general anarchy. This Todd hoped to prevent in the Illinois. The French settlers were always opposed to the indiscriminate giving away of unpatented land and, in the petition of May 24th already mentioned, they called Todd's attention to some adventurers who were taking up large tracts of land near their village, and urged him to save at least the rich river bottom. They did not know that the Virginia assembly in May, at the time this question was under discussion in Illinois, had passed a law forbidding settlements north of the Ohio river.<sup>3</sup> Todd was directly interested in the land question, as he had been appointed the surveyor of the county by the corporation of William and Mary college.<sup>1</sup> In the middle of June he "enjoined all persons whatsoever from making any New Settlements upon the Flat lands, unless In manor and form of Settlement as heretofore made by the French Inhabitants untill further Orders given hereon."<sup>2</sup> That Todd had no intention of forbidding settlers in the prairies is evident from the proclamation, and after Todd's departure neither the incoming immigrants nor the officers of the troops paid any heed to the Virginia legislation. In fact many Americans found their way to the region and were welcomed by Clark, who believed that the settlement of families was the best way to hold a country. In 1779 Montgomery mentions the departure of several families from Kaskaskia to form a settlement up a creek about thirty miles.<sup>3</sup>

But it was not the single settler only who had to be watched. No sooner had the news of the conquest of the Illinois reached the East than the Illinois and the Wabash Land companies, which had been formed during the British period,<sup>4</sup> decided to pool their interests and begin immediately to make settlements. Only a few days after the Virginia assembly passed the act creating the county of Illinois, on December 20th, William Murray on behalf of himself and the other proprietors presented a memorial in which he set forth the fact of the purchase of lands from the Indians and the purpose of making a settlement as soon as the state of affairs in the West would permit.<sup>5</sup> In order not to allow the claim to lapse through non-occupancy, the companies made, the next spring, preparations to form a settlement on the Wabash, and appointed on March 20th John Campbell as their western agent.<sup>6</sup> There was sent him a proclamation to be published in which the most liberal terms were offered to the first five hundred settlers in the town which it was proposed to establish. The enterprise was not pushed further at this time.

The next subject to engage Todd's attention was the paper money. While on his way to Illinois, he had learned that the issues of continental paper money of the dates May 20, 1777, and April 11, 1778, were ordered to be paid into the continental loan offices by the first of June, 1779, or they would become worthless;<sup>1</sup> but he hoped to obtain a longer time for the money from the Illinois. Todd issued a proclamation on July 27th, which he repeated on August 22d, setting forth the necessity for depositing with him, the called-in emissions for which he would issue certificates. In all between fifteen and twenty thousand dollars were thus collected and deposited with the notary; but nothing further was done with it.<sup>2</sup> It was estimated that there remained in the hands of the inhabitants twenty thousand more notes of these issues, which were, of course, of no value whatsoever. Another loss to the French came from the large amount of forged money that was put in circulation. It was a common practice, and an easy one, to counterfeit the continental and colonial paper and large amounts were carried to the Illinois. This, however, was refused by Todd and the more intelligent merchants. The result of all these operations was that confidence in the paper money was greatly weakened until the French refused to take it at all.

It was to buoy up the sinking credit of this paper that Todd devised a scheme to call in a further amount, since he thought the prime cause of its depreciation was the quantity in circulation.<sup>3</sup> On June 11th he wrote to the Court of Kaskaskia the following letter: "The only method that America has to support the present just War is by her Credit. That Credit at present is her Bills emitted from the different Treasuries by which she engages to pay the Bearer at a certain time Gold & Silver in Exchange. There is no friend to American Independence who has any Judgment but soon expects to see it equal to Gold & Silver. Some disaffected persons & designing Speculators discredit it through Enmity or Interest: the ignorant multitude have not Sagacity enough to examine into this matter & merely from its uncommon Quantity & in proportion to it arises the Complaint of its want of Credit.

"This has for some years been the Case near the Seat of War. the disorder has spread at last as far as the Illinois & calls loudly for a Remedy. In the interior Counties this Remedy is a heavy Tax, now operating, from which an indulgent government has exempted us. one only remedy remains which is lodged within my power that is by receiving on behalf of Government such sums as the people shall be induced to lend upon a sure fund & thereby decreasing the Quantity." The plan as he set it forth was to borrow 33,333 $\frac{1}{3}$  dollars of Treasury notes, whether of Virginia or the United Colonies, on certificates for 21,000 acres of land near Cahokia. The lender was obliged to make a loan of at least \$100, for which he or his heirs should be entitled to demand within two years a title to his allotment of land, or the sum originally advanced in gold or silver with 5 per cent interest per annum, at the option of the state.

This project met the approval of the governor and council but had to be brought before the assembly for confirmation.<sup>1</sup> Todd in the meanwhile appointed commissioners to receive the money and large sums were paid in and sealed up, for which certificates were issued. The matter stopped there, for nothing came of the project except the exchange of the paper for the certificates.<sup>2</sup>

Although Todd had been compelled by law to take up the recalled emissions and to refuse the counterfeits and this last scheme for bolstering up the credit of the paper currency was a common enough one in his time, the effect of all these transactions was to throw further discredit on the currency and make the purchase of provisions for the army almost impossible. For this he was held responsible and roundly denounced by the army officers, who had themselves been the most at fault in passing a depreciated currency at par value, a deceit which caused the French to lose all faith in their money and their word. The blame, however, had to be placed on some one and the head of the civil government was the victim. The animosity thus aroused remained long after Todd had left the Illinois and had met his death at the battle of Blue Licks. Sometime after 1790, William Shannon, who was in 1779 commissary in the Illinois, wrote of these transactions: "it was owing to the false suggestions of Col. Todd, a gentleman who came to the Illinois in the month of May, 1779, in character of chief magistrate, who I believe by his reports to government as well as by his transactions while in the Illinois country had done great injury to the inhabitants. Immediately after his arrival His policy was to put a total stop to paper credit which he did by putting the paper money he found in the hands of the different Individuals under cover and sealing it up (where a great part of it still remains) and giving the holders thereof a certificate specifying that he had Inclosed under his Private Seal paper bills of Credit to a certain amount and for which he promised them (as he said they had been imposed on) lands in proportion to the money they brought to him to secrete for them ---- this proceeding put a total stop ever after to paper credit in that country."<sup>1</sup>

This was the explanation of Todd's actions in the military circles. Unjust it was and false; but Todd found himself, as he tried to protect the French, more and more in opposition to the military department. And yet he could not assume the leadership of the French party, because of his duty to the American cause and of the necessity of maintaining control of the territory at any cost. There was nothing left for him but to attempt mediation, which was foreordained to failure. On September 18 Richard McCarty, who was captain of the company stationed at Cahokia, wrote Todd: "I dont see yet through the designs of a few dispicable Inhabitants who say they are authorized by you, to parade themselves in the fields Distroying My property when there are Numbers of other hogs in the same place . . . . Indeed unless there is Soon a Change for the Better me nor my Soldiers will have no Business hear, Neither can we stay half Naked, what we are paid with Call'd down by the Civil power."<sup>1</sup> The same writer was more open in expressing himself to Colonel Montgomery: "Colo. Todd's Residence here will spoil the people intirely for the inhabitants no more Regard us than a Parcel of Slaves." He also says it would be a good thing to get Todd out of the country, "for he will possitively Sett the Inhabitants and us by the Ears . . . . In some complaints by the Inhabitants the other day he wished that there wasn't a soldier in the country. . . . I have never Seen the people of this place So Mutinous as they are by the encouragement of Colo<sup>l</sup> Todd, for they even begin to threaten to turn my men out of Doors and god knows what I shall do If they do for we are not Above 20 Strong and them Sick that I could depend on So they may Starve us if they like."<sup>2</sup>

This outspoken opposition of the French made its first appearance at Cahokia, possibly because the people of the village were more independent and self-reliant, but probably because there never was a large garrison in the village and it was far from the seat of government, Kaskaskia. Then too the captain in command was well known, having been a trader in Cahokia some years before the coming of the Virginians. His rapid promotion in the army had somewhat turned the head of this Irishman from Connecticut, and he was overbearing and arrogant in his relations with the people.<sup>3</sup> In a moment of anger he once told them that he wished he was commander in chief of their village and he would send some of the inhabitants in chains to Virginia.<sup>1</sup> Todd had no very good opinion of McCarty and later told the governor that he had "rendered himself disagreeable by endeavoring to enforce Military law upon the Civil Department at Kahos."<sup>2</sup>

The military had causes for complaint, although these were not due to Todd. The soldiers were ill fed and badly clothed as the means of supplying their needs began to fail. In September, Captain John Williams wrote, "provisions is very hard to be got without Peltry,"<sup>3</sup> and in the same month Colonel Montgomery wrote to Clark: "I cant not tell what to do in Regard of Clothing for the Soldiers as the Goods you wrote to me is gon . . . and I would Be Glad that if it is in your power to Send a Relefe to me for the Soldiers if it is onley As Much as will Make them A little Jump Jacote [Jacket?] and a pear of overalls I think they Mite Scuffle threw. But in Regard of lining there are Bad of, But if I had Som Strouding I Could Exchang it for lining on the other Side as The [sic] have all Redy offered it to me."<sup>4</sup> McCarty's tale of troubles at Cahokia was even worse; for the soldiers were deserting daily because of the lack of clothing.<sup>5</sup>

Thus the question of the support of the troops had become the vital issue between the civil government and the army. The French were unwilling to part with their goods without some assurance of payment, for they had learned from sad experience, and the deception in regard to the money was not the only one. Many of the bills drawn on Oliver Pollock at New Orleans or on the treasury of Virginia by the officers were coming back protested. Even when merchandise instead of money or drafts was promised, the French were disappointed. The experience of Gabriel Cerré is one that occurred not once but many times. In a letter to Clark he explained that he had used his credit to purchase supplies for the troops on the promise of the commissary Shannon to repay him in merchandise, which was now refused him.<sup>1</sup> No wonder the inhabitants felt they could do no more. They had furnished their goods and had even taken on themselves obligations in order to make the expedition of Clark a success. This they had done when Clark and his men first surprised Illinois in the summer of 1778. They had also fitted out the Vincennes expedition in the winter with supplies as well as with soldiers. In the summer of 1779, Clark had organized a campaign against Detroit which never took place, and again the French were ready with supplies and volunteers. They were now to be called on once more to sell their goods without hope of pay, and this brought on the crisis that proved to Todd the illusiveness of his mediation and the impossibility of the maintenance of a civil government.

After the failure of the Detroit expedition the troops were assigned for the winter to the different villages, which they reached in August. Colonel Montgomery was placed in command of the Illinois; Captain John Williams was stationed at Fort Clark in Kaskaskia, Captain Richard McCarty, at Fort Bowman in Cahokia, and Captain Shelby at Fort Patrick Henry in Vincennes.<sup>2</sup>

Preparations were immediately made to collect supplies for the winter and the campaign of the following spring. Hunters were sent out to obtain meat, and the officers were instructed to purchase provisions from the inhabitants. To this end, Todd, on August 11, issued a proclamation inviting the inhabitants to make contracts with the commissaries for flour. Knowing the attitude of the people he felt the necessity of adding: "If I shall be obliged to give the military permission to press, it will be a disadvantage, and what ought more to influence Freemen it will be a dishonour to the people."<sup>3</sup> Nine days later Colonel Montgomery tried the effect of his eloquence and proposed that one of the citizens should be appointed contractor to assess the inhabitants for the benefit of the service, and he adds: "The complaint of the worthlessness of the money will not last long, I hope, but in the meantime I am certain that all good compatriots will set about assisting the garrison, seeing that it is so many years that their fellow patriots have carried on the war and fought and received their pay in this same money. In order to remedy the difficulty in regard to the counterfeit money, letters of exchange will be given for all kinds of supplies."<sup>1</sup> Two days later Todd prohibited the exportation of any provisions from the Illinois for sixty days. "The offender herein shall be subjected to imprisonment for one month and more over forfeit the value of such exported Provision." This was not the first time that an embargo had been laid on exportation, for two months before the court of Kaskaskia had prohibited exports without the consent of the commandant.<sup>2</sup>

The result of these measures was that the justices of the court of Kaskaskia assessed the inhabitants of the village according to their wealth, and by August 31 there had been delivered into the storehouse 54,600 pounds of flour and a promise of 1600 pounds more had been made.<sup>3</sup> This amount was considerable, but not sufficient to support the large army that Clark expected to put in the field the following summer. Other efforts were therefore made to induce the people to part with further supplies, and Montgomery's eloquence was again called into use. The effect of this second appeal is told in a report to Clark on October 2d. "Since I received your letters I have Made a second Trial in Regard of laying up a Sufficant Quantity of provision But it seems to no effect as the [sic] aGain Repete to me that themselves and Negroes is neaked and Without I can suply them with Goods or peltry it will be out of their poer to Supply Me in More then What the Already have promised Me which will not Be over half enuf to Supply An aremey. Todd had meanwhile been making efforts to supply the deficiency with some success. In the latter part of September he was in Cahokia and purchased a large amount of peltry from M. Beauregard of St. Louis, for which he paid as high as three livres per pound, a price which was regarded as excessive.<sup>2</sup> A draft on the treasury of Virginia was given for this. It was this peltry that Montgomery had been counting on to pay some of the debts to the French at the Illinois. Todd preferred, however, to reserve it for future emergencies and declared that the troops must be maintained by the credit of the state. Todd's persistence in this policy caused his administration to end in failure, since, in maintaining it, he found he could no longer protect the people from military levies. Since Montgomery had failed in every attempt to wrest more from the people, he turned the business over to Todd who said: "that he Would Call a counsel of the inhabitants and Compel them to furnish. But when the Met the punkley denied him, he then told Them if the did not Comply he would Give them up to the Militery and Quit Them. the answered him the were well aGread to that & So parted."<sup>3</sup>

The disappointment of Montgomery at this outcome appears very genuine, and he was not sure what to do next. He asks Clark: "with what Face Can I pretend to Seas on those people provisio When the know that we have Got the peltrey and will not Give it to Them and our Money is of no account to Them and our Bills Comes Back protested. Todd left Illinois in November,<sup>2</sup> shortly after his failure, and returned to Kentucky, leaving as his deputy, Richard Winston. He had become discouraged and had begged to be permitted to resign as early as August 13, 1779, giving as his reasons the unwholesome air, the distance from his connections, his unfamiliarity with the language, the difficulty of procuring many of the conveniences of life, and the impossibility of accomplishing his purposes with the means at hand.<sup>3</sup> He had not been agreeably impressed with the Illinois, where he had suffered a severe sickness and been obliged to put up with much that was disagreeable. He voiced the sentiments of many Americans of his time when he wrote, "I prefer Kentucky much to this Country either for the ambitious man, the retired farmer, or the young merchant."<sup>4</sup>

In leaving he did not resign his position of county lieutenant, but retained it at least through the next year.<sup>5</sup> It has been an open question whether Todd ever returned to Illinois after 1779; but a letter written from Vincennes on March 10, 1780, in which he expressed the intention of going to Kaskaskia the next day leaves no doubt that he was at the former place and makes it probable that he was in the latter.<sup>1</sup> Whether he went or not, he left no evidences of his stay, for affairs by that time had passed far beyond his control. Later he thought of returning, for, in 1781, learning that Virginia was planning to give up Illinois to the United States, he offered his services as surveyor in that country, a position he had previously held.<sup>2</sup> After his departure the civil officers and the French still kept up a correspondence with him, and his interest in the affairs of the distant county ceased only with his death.

<sup>2</sup> On November 15, Todd was in Kaskaskia evidently expecting to start for the Falls. (Va. State Papers, i., 358). On December 19, he wrote from the Falls to Charles Gratiot. (See post, p. 617).

<sup>5</sup> This is an unsettled question. His successors in the Illinois continued to be called deputy county lieutenants. Wickliffe in Morehead, Settlement of Kentucky, 174, implies that he did not resign but returned to the county several times. On April 15, 1781, Todd wrote to Jefferson that he still received complaints from Illinois. (Va. State Papers, ii., 44). On the other hand he refused to give orders in regard to a consignment of goods to him as county lieutenant on Nov. 30, 1780. (Ibid., i., 393).

As we have seen, one of the last acts of Todd was to deliver the inhabitants into the hands of the military, since the civil government had failed in its principal mission, the maintenance of the troops. Thereafter the army was to collect its own supplies. The method employed by Colonel Montgomery during the subsequent weeks is clearly shown by the following petition which was signed by a large number of the inhabitants of Kaskaskia on December 8, 1779: "To the Magistrates of the district of Kaskaskia, Gentlemen: We ask of you in whom we put our confidence and whom we have elected to govern this country according to the laws which you have caused to be announced to us in your office, is it not full time that you put an end to the brigandage and tyranny which the military have exercised among us so long? Should not the military be content to see that we are depriving ourselves of every necessity in order to furnish their subsistence and have not left ourselves sufficient for the support of our families and of our slaves, from whom we can not obtain any service in a season so severe? Can we with tranquil eyes see the animals, most necessary for agriculture and other work, killed every day?

"You have a sure means, gentlemen, of putting an end to such disorders; but can we even address you in the hope of causing you to see some glimmer of that liberty which has been so often announced, when you are acting in concert with those who oppress us by taking from us the means of living and from themselves also? We do not believe that it is necessary to report to you in this petition the subject of our complaints, since all the grievances have taken place before your eyes.

"Furthermore you ought to perceive, gentlemen, that the famine has begun to be felt in this country and that we can with difficulty supply with food those who truly merit rations on account of their service and should not be obliged to nourish and warm the useless members of the state. You ought to demand an exact statement of the number to receive rations in order that, when the troops shall have need of asking you therefor, you can deliver what is right.

"Furthermore, notice, gentlemen, that there are in this village only about ten houses which can make remittances and that they are believed to be richer than they really are. We are born free and we wish to enjoy the liberty of true citizens.

"You ought also to observe, gentlemen, that this village has supported all the burden and expense since the arrival of the Americans and that the other villages have felt no burden or a very little. We hope that you will make them contribute to the maintenance of the troops, since they are better able than we are according to their number."<sup>1</sup>

The magistrates took action the next day and embodied the substance of the foregoing complaint to them in a demand on Colonel Montgomery to put an end to the grievances. They pointed out that many useless slaves were being supported in the fort, and that there was a great waste of firewood. Their authority to make this demand was set forth in the following words: "Since our duty exacts that we watch over the public safety and at the same time over the American welfare, we demand, sir, that from now on the troops shall not have the authority to take anything at the houses of the inhabitants without an order from us according to article 13 of the declaration of rights by the assembly of Virginia; which assembly has authorized us to maintain the people of this country in all their rights and liberties. It is there set forth that the military ought to be under the most complete subordination to, and be governed by, the civil power, to which declaration up till to-day the military has given no attention.

"We hope, sir, that you will give attention to our just representation without forcing us to the disagreeable duty of being obliged to appeal to his Excellency, the Governor, and to the Honorable Assembly of Virginia."<sup>1</sup>

Montgomery paid no heed to this memorial or to the threat of appeal to the governor of Virginia. He regarded their demand for a statement of the number of those who were supported in the fort as an insult and an impertinence, and ordered his troops to go from house to house to collect whatever they required, and to shoot the animals on the commons. There were at the time only thirty-eight soldiers in the fort, but with these there were many Americans who had come with their families to settle, and also slaves, all of whom the inhabitants were compelled to support.<sup>2</sup> The winter was a very hard one, the most severe that had been known for years, and the suffering of the people was very great.<sup>3</sup> In spite of this Montgomery proceeded to harsher methods. There is in existence a letter written by him to Deputy County Lieutenant Winston, on March 5th, which shows to what lengths he was ready to go in order to obtain the supplies which he needed. After making the usual demands, he says: "and before that I suffer as much more, I beg you would inform them to put their Guns in good order, as I dont want to take them at any disadvantage. As if they dont furnish I shall look on them as Traitors to the cause of america, and Treat them Accordingly."<sup>4</sup>

Montgomery took the hint in regard to the other villages, however, and went to Cahokia in January, 1780, where he demanded supplies on the ground that the other villages had given in proportion to their wealth. The court of Cahokia agreed that a census of the population should be taken and each person compelled to furnish supplies according to his means. The Cahokians did not have so much cause for complaint as the people of Kaskaskia, for during this winter there were no troops quartered in their village. They preferred no doubt to pay the tax rather than to bring upon themselves a return of the evils they had suffered during the preceding fall, when they had been compelled to receive the troops into their homes, to furnish all supplies, and finally to submit to the seizure of the flour in their mills, which were then sealed with the seal of Virginia. Such acts had alienated the Cahokians, who had been excited to deeds of heroism and self denial under the leadership of Joseph Bowman in the winter of 1778-1779.<sup>1</sup>

When the change of government had failed to satisfy the French and the presence of the soldiers had led to disorder and tyranny, there began a steady stream of emigration to the Spanish bank, which ended in almost depopulating some of the villages of the American Bottom. Among the emigrants were the most important and progressive of the French inhabitants. One of the first to leave was the richest and foremost citizen of Kaskaskia, Gabriel Cerré, who emigrated to St. Louis either in the fall of 1779 or the following winter. Charles Gratiot of Cahokia soon followed his example, and many others went with them "to seek an asylum where they find the protection which is due a free people."<sup>2</sup> Without their leaders the French were less able to hold their own than before. They, however, made their appeal to Virginia, and numerous were the petitions of individuals for the payment of what was owing them. About this time an agent, one Lajeunesse, was appointed to represent the French interests at the capital; but nothing was accomplished, for Virginia had no money to use for investigation or to pay claims, however just, against her.<sup>1</sup> In fact it was at this time, as we have seen, that Jefferson wrote to Clark that it would be necessary to withdraw as many of the troops as possible from the territory north of the Ohio, for he need expect no help or supplies from the state.<sup>2</sup>

The people of Illinois did not receive, at this gloomy moment, that assistance from their own officers against their oppressors that they had a right to expect. Instead the justices of Kaskaskia seem to have tried to gain what personal advantage they could from the situation. In the midst of the troubles and poverty of the winter, when the people were attempting to withstand the exactions of Montgomery, the justices of the court were demanding pay for their services.<sup>3</sup> The magistrates found their office, moreover, sufficiently lucrative to wish to retain it; for, when the time came for a new election, none was held, and, with a few changes to fill vacancies, the justices remained the same for over two years. This irregularity is striking when compared with the annual elections for the court at Cahokia. But Kaskaskia was not alone in troubles of this character; the original justices at Vincennes clung to office until 1787.<sup>4</sup>

The court was also accused by Jean Girault, state's attorney, with being lax in the performance of its duty. Many settlers were straggling into the colony and taking up land both within the village by purchase and by grants from the court of unpatented lands, a custom which had been permitted by Todd and continued by his successors. The situation was such that the government in the Illinois could not give heed to the general law of Virginia forbidding this practice; for the immigrants were there, frequently with their families, and had come without making provision for the future, should they fail to receive land to cultivate.<sup>5</sup> Clark himself had frequently approved of protecting the infant colonies by this means, and the officers of Virginia were among the first to accept grants from the court. One of the earliest records of a land concession of this character is that of one made to Colonel Montgomery. The Indian agent, John Dodge, received in the year 1780 several such patents.<sup>1</sup> Very few of the French seized the opportunity to obtain such concessions at Kaskaskia and the number was even less at Cahokia, provided no account is taken of Prairie du Pont to which Cahokia had another title. It was not against this practice of conceding land that Girault inveighed; but he criticised the court's laxity in not investigating the past of these individuals, who were making their homes in the community, to learn if they were British agents, and its neglect to demand of them the oath of allegiance to the United States and Virginia. He urged the justices to compel all strangers to take this oath immediately or he would be obliged to report them to the authorities. He advised them to avoid such a necessity, for their position was very critical, since they had many enemies.<sup>2</sup>

Girault gave his attention to the execution of the law in other particulars. He forbade the justices to arrest parties without proper hearing, and tried to help them keep the peace by persuading Montgomery to permit the civil authorities to use the military prison so that their commands would be obeyed, a privilege which Montgomery later withdrew.<sup>3</sup>

That protection from military oppression, which might have been expected, was not given by the deputy county lieutenant appointed by Todd. Perhaps it was too much to expect that Winston should succeed where Todd had failed, but at least some opposition to the military exactions should have been attempted. The character of Richard Winston is a difficult one to read, for our knowledge of him depends on the pen pictures drawn by his enemies, and these are not flattering. He came originally from Virginia and had been in Illinois since early in the British period.<sup>4</sup> With other traders he had suffered losses in the Pontiac war. With Kennedy he was an agent for George Morgan, and had won the favor of Clark at the time of the occupation of Kaskaskia. His nature seems to have been one to inspire distrust rather than confidence, for he was suspected of dishonesty by every man with whom he had business or political relations. His partner Kennedy suspected him of having sold the cargo of a batteau at New Orleans and pocketed the proceeds.<sup>1</sup> Murray feared that he was going to play the rogue at one time.<sup>2</sup> Todd left the peltry fund which he had obtained in St. Louis in charge of Winston and Montgomery, and both these financial geniuses made the gravest accusations of dishonesty against each other.<sup>3</sup>

From the fall of 1779 till January 1783, Winston was on account of his position one of the chief men in the Illinois, and in many ways he might have promoted a happier feeling between the French and the Americans. Instead he seems to have done all in his power to intensify the mutual distrust, at least such was the opinion of the best citizens.<sup>4</sup> He had managed to hold together that party which had formerly regarded himself, Murray, and Bentley, as leaders against Rocheblave; and under him this party had gained some accessions.<sup>5</sup> Certainly later the clerk of the court, Carbonneaux, became one of his adherents, as did the important Langlois family and also Winston's successor in the county lieutenancy, Timothe de Monbreun. But the real leaders of the French inhabitants were decidedly hostile to him, and he counted among his opponents some of those who had ardently desired American supremacy and had joyfully welcomed Clark. From the sources of information we can judge that Winston's affiliations were always shifting, and it is difficult to find just where he stood at any one time. That he was jealous of the power wielded by the military is unquestionable, but it seems to have been his policy never to take a decided stand, unless he was compelled to do so or saw that some personal advantage would accrue thereby. His relation to Montgomery was hostile, for the two men distrusted each other; but outrageously as they abused each other, the French were always firmly persuaded that Winston was betraying them to the military.

The military situation in the spring of the year was a gloomy one; the time of service of most of the troops had expired, and there was little chance of recruiting more; there was no hope of financial aid from Virginia, and the supplies in the villages of Illinois were exhausted. It was also known that preparations were being made by the British for a concerted attack on the western posts. Under these circumstances there seemed nothing for Clark to do but evacuate the country, leaving a few troops to keep up the courage of the French. He consulted with Todd, after a rapid survey of the posts had been made by the latter,<sup>1</sup> and they decided to concentrate the few troops at their disposal at a fort to be built at the mouth of the Ohio. The spot that was finally chosen, and where Fort Jefferson was erected, was a place called the Iron Mines south of the river's mouth.<sup>2</sup> All the troops at Vincennes were recalled and commissions were sent to the French to raise a company and take possession of Fort Patrick Henry.<sup>3</sup> Orders were also given to Montgomery to retire most of his troops from the villages. But before the preparations for the evacuation of the country could be carried out, news came that the British were already approaching. This expedition was part of a general attack, planned by the British on all the Spanish posts of the Mississippi River in order to prevent any assistance's being given to the Americans by Spain, which had declared war on England the previous year. The British troops from the north and south were to move simultaneously in the spring of 1780, and it was hoped that all the villages from New Orleans to St. Louis would be captured. The energy of Governor Galvez of New Orleans in successfully attacking the British posts on the Gulf during the fall of 1779 and the spring of the next year frustrated the southern plan; but the expedition of the north against St. Louis and the villages held by Clark was made ready, and in the spring of 1780 was under way.<sup>1</sup> The British had hoped that their movements were unknown, but during the winter the Cahokians had noticed the activity of the British agents among the Indians, and by the beginning of April they had been warned of the approaching enemy. On the eleventh of that month they sent Charles Gratiot to Clark, who was at the time building Fort Jefferson, to ask his assistance. At the same time the Spanish commandant and Montgomery wrote him news of the approaching danger.<sup>2</sup> Montgomery hastened to Cahokia, where he was immediately joined by Clark just in time to repel the attack. The Spaniards were equally successful at St. Louis. Clark would have given them assistance, had not the strong winds prevented the signals from being heard.<sup>3</sup>

Throughout the summer of 1780 the people were continually alarmed by accounts of Indian attacks and rumors of others. Fort Jefferson underwent a severe siege;<sup>4</sup> the people of Kaskaskia repulsed a large band of Indians on the 17th of July;<sup>5</sup> and the inhabitants of Cahokia made common cause with the Spaniards to defend themselves against an expected attack the following month.<sup>6</sup> Thus at a time when Clark's position was desperate the French inhabitants gave him signal aid, without which the Illinois would have been lost. It was with a company of 300 French, Spaniards, and Americans that Montgomery marched northward to make reprisals against the Indians around Rock River, and, if we are to believe the Frenchmen, the failure of that expedition was due to Montgomery's incompetence.<sup>1</sup> Meanwhile Clark led the expedition against the Shawnees, an expedition which might have been more successful had not a series of events, beginning at Vincennes, led to a further estrangement between the French and Americans and induced the French at Vincennes to give the Indians information of the movements of the Americans.<sup>2</sup>

These events are connected with the western career of a French officer, Augustin Mottin de la Balme. His presence in the Illinois may, probably, be attributed to a project conceived by Washington and approved by Lafayette and the French minister, Luzerne, for arousing the Canadians to unite their interests with those of the Americans and French in an effort to win independence. In this way Washington hoped to conceal his real intentions of attacking New York as soon as the expected French fleet and soldiers arrived, and at the same time compel the withdrawal of part of the British forces to Canada.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>3</sup> This hypothesis is based on the identity of time and action of the De la Balme expedition with the time and purpose of Washington's plan. There is no other indication of a connection between them. Washington wrote to Lafayette on May 10, 1780, about a proclamation which it had been decided some time before that Lafayette should write to incite the Canadians to rise against the British; and on June 4th he wrote to Arnold telling him to have the proclamation printed, which was done. (Sparks, Washington, vii., 44 and 72.)

On March 5th of the same year De la Balme wrote to Washington for a general letter of introduction, as he was intending to travel in a short time to the "Southern States of America" where he might be confounded with the many adventurers. (Washington Papers, Lib. of Cong.) By April 24th he had changed his mind and it was known that he was thinking of going to the Illinois, for a Mr. Barriere writes him on that date a letter in which he mentions that purpose. (Can. Archives, B., 184, vol. 2, p. 417.) On June 27th De la Balme was at Fort Pitt treating with the Indians; in this he was associated with Godfrey Lincot, a Virginian Indian agent. His success was reported to Luzerne, French minister to Congress. (Can. Archives, B., 181, p. 371. There is a good calendar of this report in Can. Archives for 1888 p. 865.) His acts at Fort Pitt and later in the Illinois, as narrated in the text, show that he was working in the interests of the alliance between the United States and France. That he was not sent to the West solely in the interests of the latter country, as has been suspected. (Turner, Amer. Hist. Rev. vol. x., No. 2, p. 255, note 2.) is further proved by the fact that the French despatches of the time show that the French government expected that the territory north of the Ohio River would be conceded to the states by a future treaty. (See Views of the Government of the King, and Vergennes to Luzerne September 25, 1779. Doniol, Histoire de la Participation de la France, iv., 224 and 360.) The opposition which De la Balme showed to the Virginians is explained by the conditions he found in Illinois as narrated in the text. He was in no way responsible for the interpretation of his actions by Bentley, Winston, and McCarty, who reported that he was hostile to the Americans (See Dr. MSS., 50J51; Va. State Papers, i., 381; this vol., p. 617); nor altogether for the misconceptions of the French. (This vol., p. 551; Can. Archives, B., 184 vol. 2, pp. 421, 442.) The only fact that is at all suspicious is the manifesto to the Canadians, found among De la Balme's papers, in which there is no mention of the United States. (Can. Archives, B., 184, vol. 2, p. 498.); but this may have been due to the feeling of antagonism among the French against the Virginians.

De la Balme had come to America, highly recommended by Franklin and Silas Deane, to offer his sword to the cause of the colonies.<sup>1</sup> He was commissioned inspector general of cavalry by Congress in July, 1777, but feeling himself slighted in not being appointed to the command of that division of the army, he had resigned on October 3d of the same year. He remained in this country, however, and established himself in business at Philadelphia.<sup>2</sup> Late in the spring of the year 1780, he was sent West to start a movement among the French of Illinois which it was hoped would spread over Canada.

On the 27th of June he was at Fort Pitt, where he joined Godfrey Linctot in his efforts to win the Indians to the cause of the allies, France, Spain, and the United States; but he found the conditions there less favorable for his mission than he had expected, on account of the hostility of the Indians to the Americans.<sup>3</sup> On reaching Vincennes in July he realized that the presence of the Virginians, who had made themselves so obnoxious to the French, was a hindrance to his plan, for no campaign in which the Virginians were to join could be promoted.

On the other hand the part of De la Balme's program in regard to assistance from France was most eagerly received, and the emotional French were soon saying that their beloved father, the king of France, was to take control of the West again. It was this message that they gave to the Indians, who still retained their old affection for their allies. In Kaskaskia the message was received in the same way. De la Balme came with a letter of recommendation from Alexander Fowler, a former British officer of the village

On the other hand there was in the manifesto no intimation that France was intending to recover her dominion over Canada.

On account of the betrayal by Arnold, or for some other reason, Washington changed his plans and gave no further attention to arousing the Canadians. (Sparks, Washington, vii, 44, note.)

Previous to the arrival of De la Balme, on May 10, 1780, another French agent, Jean de St. Germain, was at Kaskaskia. He claimed to have come directly from France and to be acquainted with the desires of the king. He united with John Montgomery and Richard Winston in a proclamation to the Indians, in which they were assured of the friendship existing between the French, Spanish, and Americans. (Can. Archives, B., 122, p. 478). Rocheblave writes that St. Germain landed at Charlestown the previous winter and went to the West (Ibid., B., 122, p. 545.) I have found nothing to connect him with De la Blame.

who had joined the American cause.<sup>1</sup> The best citizens of French origin in this village and in Cahokia welcomed him with open arms, or as Winston said, "just as the Hebrews would receive the Masiah."<sup>2</sup> He had very little to say to Montgomery and his soldiers, for his mission was not to them, and in the existing circumstances he could not risk alienating the French by assuming a friendship for the Virginians; nor did Montgomery take any notice of his presence. The Spanish commandant of St. Louis seemed also far from cordial.<sup>3</sup> De la Balme's proposed plan was the raising of a company in the Illinois to occupy Detroit, which was known to be ready to yield, and then to proceed to Canada, where he expected to be joined by thousands of the inhabitants.

Considering the object of his mission and the conditions existing in the French villages, his address to the inhabitants proves his ability for extricating himself from a difficult position. "It is well," said he, "that you know that the troops of the state of Virginia have come here against the wish of the other states of America, as I learned from members of Congress before my departure from Philadelphia, and that the different deputies who compose that body are ignorant of the revolting proceedings and acts of violence, which the troops are practicing towards you and which are not only blameable but condemnable at the tribunal of the whole world. . . . Therefore it is very important for you, gentlemen, on account of the pressing circumstances, that without loss of time you address yourselves to the minister of France in order to force the state of Virginia to redeem the paper money, the letters of exchange, and other claims, which you have in your hands, and to recall from among you the troops which are oppressing you contrary to all right, since you espouse the cause of the king of France and his allies; troops which, far from preserving you from the fury of the cruel enemies, render you victims of a war, which the Indians, who have been constantly friends of the French, would never have made without them." He then urges them to join the expedition against Detroit, "which will win the confidence of the honorable Congress and convince the king of France of the real interest which you take in a cause for which he has already made great sacrifices and which will procure for you in a little while all imaginable assistance from him."<sup>1</sup> That De la Balme deceived the French by promising them the assistance and co-operation of the king of France, and that his words led them to believe that the royal troops would soon be seen again on the banks of the Mississippi cannot be denied; but if he came in accordance with the plan of Washington and Lafayette, he was following his orders as far as it was possible under the very perplexing conditions which he found in the Illinois.

Although the French received him enthusiastically, their power of aiding the expedition was not great and it was only with a handful of men, about eighty French inhabitants and Indians,<sup>2</sup> that De la Balme started for Detroit. The standard which waved over this little company was that of France.<sup>3</sup> He successfully attacked the post at the Miami, but was in turn defeated and killed by the Indians.<sup>4</sup> At the time of his departure for Detroit he had sent a detachment from Cahokia under Hamelin against St. Joseph, which succeeded in sacking that place but was overtaken by a body of merchants and Indians and defeated.<sup>5</sup> Thus ended the attempt at arousing the Canadians. Before the arrival of De la Balme in the West, the policy of Washington and Luzerne had changed and they left their agent to effect what he could alone.

The death of De la Balme did not bring this interesting episode in the history of the Illinois to an end. The villagers of Cahokia had suffered a severe loss at St. Joseph, for all the members of their expedition were either killed or captured except three. The Cahokians, wishing for revenge, hurriedly raised a troop of twenty men and asked aid of the Spanish government, which throughout the year had made common cause with them in repelling and attacking the enemy, and which now sent thirty men to their assistance. With the addition of two hundred Indians<sup>1</sup> they marched in midwinter, within a month of their previous defeat, across Illinois, and in the first days of 1781 took and sacked St. Joseph, returning home immediately.<sup>2</sup>

The failure of De la Balme is not of much importance in our narrative, but the effect of his presence on the people of the Illinois was tremendous. His appeal to them as Frenchmen, their awakened pride in the name, the expectation of French intervention in their behalf, were all factors in the events which followed. From this time there is no mistaking their animosity towards the Virginians. Their eyes had been opened by the harsh treatment of the frontiersmen, but they had submissively accepted their fate without daring to do more than petition their oppressors. On account of the false hope aroused by De la Balme they now dared to adopt open measures, for was not their former king <sup>2</sup> Mich. Pio. and Hist. Col., xix., 600. When the expedition returned the Spanish commandant at St. Louis sent a greatly exaggerated account of the campaign to the home government. In this he said that sixty-five militia men from St. Louis had marched, under the greatest difficulties, across the country and taken possession of an important British post and all the country north of the Illinois River in the name of the king. (The account was printed in the Madrid Gazette of March 12, 1782, and may be found in Sparks, Diplomatic Correspondence, iv., 425.) This immediately aroused anxiety in the minds of the American ministers in Europe. (See ref. to Diplom. Cor. above and Works of Franklin, Bigelow, ed., vii., 444.) That Spain desired to win the east bank of the Mississippi is unquestioned (See Doniol, Hist. de la Participation de la France, iii., 393 et seq.), and that she intended to make the utmost of this unimportant success at a minor British post is plain, but the motive for the expedition came from Cahokia and in assisting his neighbors in expeditions on the eastern bank, as in this case, the Spanish commandant was doing no more than he had done at least twice before within the past year. In taking possession of the territory north of the Illinois River, he was not encroaching upon the region occupied by the Virginians any more than did Galvez when he captured Mobile and Pensacola, for the limits of the county of Illinois extended only to the Illinois River.

The best account, because unbiased and given in an incidental way, is that of McCarty, who in writing the news of Cahokia, where he was, states the facts as I have given them above. Historians have, however, followed exclusively the Spanish account and have made more of the episode than it was worth, for its only importance was the use Spain may have made of it in her diplomacy, provided there is any basis for that suspicion. The most extended account based on the Spanish report will be found in Mason, Chapters from Illinois History, vi., 743; see also Winsor, Westward Movement, 189; Hart, Amer. Nation, ix., 286.

It is worth noticing that the story of the defeat of the Cahokians at the time of the De la Balme expedition and the subsequent victory with the assistance of the Spaniards was heard by John Reynolds from the village people, but the date of the two had been transferred to an earlier time, namely 1777 and 1778. The honor of the victory of the second attack, which, also, according to tradition was for revenge, was popularly ascribed to J. Bte. Mailhet of Peoria (Reynolds wrongly says Paulette) who must have been at Cahokia at the time, since the Peorians had been driven out of their village by the numerous British and Indian attacks in the previous summer. The facts of this tradition support McCarty's testimony (Reynolds, Pioneer History.) Strangely enough Mason (Chapters from Illinois History, 275) accepted the date given by Reynolds and wrote an account of French attacks on British posts before the arrival of Clark.

interested in the fate of his distant and faithful followers? The citizens of all the villages united in a memorial to the governor of Virginia, in which they wrote that they had decided not to receive any more troops in their villages, except those which should be sent by the king of France; the presence of the Virginians had brought them into war with the Indians who before had been friendly and they had suffered therefrom; they promised, however, to guard the frontiers of Virginia from attacks by the Indians.<sup>1</sup> In each of the villages memorials were also drawn up to be sent to the French minister, Luzerne, in which were set forth with great detail the grievances which the inhabitants had suffered at the hands of the Virginians. These petitions, however, never reached their destination, since they fell into the hands of the British with the other papers of De la Balme.<sup>2</sup>

The best account of the changed attitude of the French is found in McCarty's journal. In the summer of 1780, he had been summoned with his troops to Fort Jefferson to give aid against a party of British and Indians attacking it. On his return to Kaskaskia early in August he found that De la Balme had been in the village and that, "the people in General seem to be Changed towards us and Many things Said unfitting," and again, "as things are now the people in General are allienated and Changed from us."<sup>3</sup> The short lived hope of the French did them little good. For a moment they were able to raise their heads like men, but with the defeat and death of their leader their hope was dashed to the ground and the weary wait for other means of relief began again; for, oppressed by the military and hearing nothing from Todd, they could only conclude that Virginia had withdrawn her support and that they were left to do for themselves until some other power should take them under its protection.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>2</sup> The memorial from Cahokia is printed in this vol., p. 535; for that from Vincennes see Can. Archives, B., 184, vol. 12, p. 421. The petition from Kaskaskia, which would have been particularly valuable for the history of Clark's occupation of the village is not calendared in the Hald. Col. and has probably been lost. A very brief memorial to Luzerne was sent by the Kaskaskians after the death of De la Balme and a copy of it is in the Menard Col., Tard. Papers.

During the fall the Americans carried out the plan which they had determined upon before the attack of the British and which subsequent events had postponed, namely, the partial evacuation of Illinois. At the time of the attack on Fort Jefferson the troops had been recalled from Vincennes. Montgomery after his return from the relief of the fort remained some time in Kaskaskia and on October 18th<sup>1</sup> went down the river to New Orleans, leaving a bad name behind him, even among the Americans, on account of his extravagance and dishonesty. He did not add to his reputation by deserting his wife for "an infamous girl" whom he took with him.<sup>2</sup>

Captain Rogers, who was left by Montgomery in command of the few remaining troops at Kaskaskia,<sup>3</sup> was to prove himself a worse tyrant to the French than his predecessor had been. Two other men had appeared in the Illinois in the spring or summer of this year whose names were also to become execrated, John Dodge and Thomas Bentley. John Dodge was born in Connecticut, had become a trader at Sandusky before the outbreak of the Revolution, and, since he showed his attachment to the cause of the colonists, was arrested by the British, who carried him to Detroit and later to Quebec, whence he escaped in 1779.<sup>4</sup> In that year Washington recommended him to Congress as a man who would be useful in the West. He went to Virginia, won the friendship of Jefferson, and was appointed Indian agent.<sup>5</sup>

Montgomery was born in Botetourt county, Va., about 1742. His use of English shows that his education was limited. He was one of the celebrated party of "long hunters" in 1771. His experience in Indian warfare had fitted him for such an undertaking as that by Clark against the Illinois. He was killed by the Indians in Kentucky in 1794. The second, Thomas Bentley, had been well known in the village at an earlier period. On an accusation made by Rocheblave of intriguing with the Americans he had been arrested and sent to Quebec, where he remained until the spring of 1780, when he made his escape.<sup>1</sup> He had asserted his innocence in several persuasive memorials and had convinced even Governor Haldimand of his good faith. As a further evidence of his allegiance to England he went to Virginia and by his intercession for British prisoners with the government gained for Governor Hamilton some mitigation to the harshness of his captivity and for Judge Dejean of Detroit, release on parole.<sup>2</sup> Bentley's double dealing at this time is evident from his letters to the Americans and to the British. While he was writing to Clark concerning the activities of De la Balme and wishing the Americans success in their attack on the Indians, he was writing to the British officers that Illinois could be easily captured by a few hundred soldiers.<sup>3</sup> In his deceit he was eminently successful, for Clark later wrote him a certificate of good character, in which he asserted that the latter had given great assistance to the cause;<sup>4</sup> and the Governor of Canada was so persuaded of his honest motives that he thought it would be wise to allow Bentley to remain quietly in the Illinois, as he would be of great use there. On his return to Illinois, Bentley was firmly resolved to make the French pay for his captivity, for he believed that they had all been in a plot with Rocheblave against him.

The operations of Bentley and Dodge, who formed a partnership for making the most out of the situation, began while Montgomery, who gave them countenance, commanded in the Illinois. They bought up the claims of the inhabitants against Virginia for trifling sums, in doing which it was suspected that they made use of public funds, and their financial operations in purchasing supplies for the troops also aroused suspicion. Such conduct called forth a characteristic letter from McCarty to Todd. As McCarty was feeling at the time particularly angry with the officers of the Virginia line, because he had been arrested by Montgomery for bringing an accusation against Dodge,<sup>1</sup> his testimony cannot be taken without reserve; but that there was some truth in what he wrote is abundantly proved by letters from Clark and others. The letter shows not only the situation brought about by the dealings of the two financiers but also the continued exactions of the troops and the effects of the visit of De la Balme. It is addressed to Todd. "When shall I begin to appologize for the Different light and Oppinion, I saw and had of You when hear last Year, and now. the Spirit of a free subject that you inculcated thro' your better knowledge of things was hid to me. In short, Honour requires me to render You the Justice you deserve, and at the same time to inform you the reason of my altering my notions of things. I then thought the Troops hear would be duly supported by the State, and the legal expense for them paid to the people Justly. I had thought the Duty of an Officer who had any Command was to see Justice done his Soldiers, and that they had their Rights without wronging his Country. I then thought that it was also his Duty to fore see and use all manner of oconomie in Laying up provisions for these Soldiers, to carry on any Opperation that his superiours should judge expedient to order him on, without any regard to private interests whatever, but for the Good of the State he served. I then never Imagined that an Agent would be sent hear to Trade in connection with a Private Person to Purchase the Certificates from the people at such a rate which must appear scandalous & Dishonorable to the State.

not a certificate which is here looked on as next to nothing."<sup>1</sup>

McCarthy by this letter gave warning of his change of party allegiance. He had up to this time sided with the military against the civil authority and the French. From now on he attempted to win the confidence of the latter, in the oppression of whom he had formerly taken active part. Both he and Winston advised the people to refuse all supplies to the troops and starve them out of the country. For this reason Winston also found his relations with the military even more strained than under the rule of Montgomery. He wrote to Todd that: "They Stretch greatly to bring the Country under the military rod and throw of the Civil Authority. So fond they are to be meddling with what is not within their Power. . . . Since the arrival of this Captain Bentley, there has been nothing but discord and disunion in this place. . . he has left no stone unturned to Extinguish the laws of the State, and to revive the Heathen Law, being well accustomed to Bribes and Entertainments. Government ought to regulate the trade as there are many abuses Committed under Military sanction."<sup>2</sup>

It is unnecessary to give the details of the trying winter of 1780-1781, for it was but a repetition of the previous one. The inhabitants wrote that the government was like that of a town taken by assault. Captain Rogers, who was young and inexperienced, was blinded by the advice of the crafty Dodge and Bentley.<sup>3</sup> That the means they used to obtain provisions were cruel is proved by the piteous appeals of the inhabitants to the governor. That their methods were not always honest was firmly believed by many officers and by Clark himself. Captain Robert George in writing to Clark on October 24th after mentioning the almost starving condition of the troops, says that Montgomery told him that, "Capt. Dodge has purchased one Thousand bushells of corn and Ten Thousand lb<sup>s</sup> of Flour, which is all that is to show from a cargo of Eleven Thousand hard dollars worth of Goods sent by Mr Pollock to You, together with about five or six thousand Dollars worth from this place. . . . I have sent for all the State Horses at Kaskaskia, but it appears there is but few — what's gone with them God knows, but I believe there will be a Very disagreeable accompt rendered to you of them as well as many other things when called for."<sup>1</sup> In March, 1781, Clark was thoroughly aroused by the complaints of the administration of the finances in his department, and in writing to Jefferson says: "I Received your dispatches by Capt. Sullivan. That part concerning the Bills counter<sup>ed</sup> by Maj. Slaughter, and letters of advice, is something curious. It's surprising to me that Maj. Slaughter, as an Officer of the State, would suffer these persons to persevere in their villany, was he as he hints truly sensible of the principal that actuated them. You know my Sentiments Respecting sev<sup>al</sup> persons in our Employ. Those he accuses, are gen<sup>l</sup> men of fair Character. I have long since determined to conduct myself with a particular Rigour towards every person under me. Dodge & others, of the Illinois, also."<sup>2</sup>

While the officers were using their positions for private gain and reducing to abject poverty the French by their levies, the troops of Virginia were suffering the severest hardships. In August, 1781, Colonel Slaughter wrote from the Falls of the Ohio: "The situation of my little Corps at this place at present is truly deplorable. destitute of clothing, vituals & money, the Commissaries have furnished them with little or no provisions these three months past nor dont give themselves the least concern about it." Montgomery wrote that at Fort Jefferson there was not a mouthful for the troops to eat, nor money to purchase any, and that the credit of the government was threadbare. On August 6, 1781, Captain Bailey wrote from Vincennes: "My men have been 15 days upon half allowance; there is plenty of provisions here but no credit. I cannot press, being the weakest party."<sup>1</sup>

The contest of Rogers, Dodge, and Bentley with the court was brought to a crisis at the end of January by the acts of the last. Bentley was inspired by his desire for revenge, and his malice is shown by a long letter which he addressed to, "The inhabitants particularly those who are not my friends," wherein he sets forth his grievances at length. There was little that he could say by way of accusation, so he had recourse to abusive language. The letter is too long to quote, but a few extracts will give an idea of its character. "I know that most of you are mortified at seeing me succeed in surmounting the difficulties with which you together with that rascal Rocheblave, Cerré, and others have burdened me. I am persuaded that there is not one among you in this village who did not wish to crush me under the weight of my misfortunes. I know that it is a crime for a damned Englishman to remain among you. The Irish suit you better. They are your equals in perfidy, lying, flattering, and drinking tafia. . . . Some infamous vagabonds have had the audacity to demand an inspection of my books. Nothing but ignorance without parallel, joined with the most complete Irish impertinence could have thought of that. A man of the least honor would not have conceived such an idea.

"I am informed that the cause for which you came was concerning some tafia given to the negroes. On this subject I satisfy you on the honor of a man of integrity that it was not from me that they had it. . . .

"I am informed that Lachance and Brazeau are getting together all the corn for M. Cerré. Why should not I have the same liberty, since perhaps I should give better merchandize and at a better bargain. The reason is that M. Cerré, concerning whom I will prove some day that he is a man without moral feeling, is a Frenchman and I am a damned Englishman."

A suit brought by Bentley against Richard McCarty and Michel Perrault was begun in the court of November, 1780; but the court refused Bentley any recognition until he had taken the oath of fidelity to the United States and Virginia. In the January court Bentley appeared with two Americans and said he was ready to take the oath. This the justices tendered him in the French language, which both he and his companions understood; but Bentley refused to take it, claiming that it was the oath of office that they were offering him. He immediately left the court and soon after returned saying that he had made oath before Captain Rogers. The court, however, stood firm in regard to its rights.

Rogers took up the matter and wrote to the court that he was surprised at their audacity in not recognizing his certificate given to Bentley. "It seems to me that Mr. Bentley has the same right to justice as you yourselves and you can be assured that I can give reasons and proofs to impartial justices of his conduct which will make him appear perhaps a better friend of the state than you, since your court appears to be one for injustice and not for justice. And should you dare to refuse my certificate in the case of the oath of fidelity, I will take it on myself to set your court aside and become responsible for the consequences. You have only to consider and render justice or I will do what is mentioned above."

The court was not frightened into submissiveness, but answered: "We have received your letter of to-day in which you give us over your signature the most complete mark of your capacity in the trust which you imagine you hold.

"We do not doubt the desire on your part to make yourself absolute master; but we have acts of the legislative power of the state of Virginia to govern us and to which we believe we are bound to conform, even as you are yourself, when we require your assistance.

"As to the injustice with which you charge us, there will, perhaps, come a more happy day when we shall prove our good faith, which is always the only motive which leads honorable men.'

Possibly Bentley realized the weakness of Rogers threat, for he now drew up a protest against the action of the court in which he appealed to Virginia. In the February session the court considered the protest, after previously receiving the promise of support from the county lieutenant, Winston. They affirmed that the right oath had been tendered to Bentley, and offered again to permit him to take it either before the court, one of the justices, or the county lieutenant; if he did not wish to do this he was permitted to bring in and show the oath which he claimed to have taken.

Bentley's answer was a public announcement that he was starting for Virginia to carry his case before the governor and council.<sup>1</sup> Another reason for his going was his desire to collect the money for the certificates which he and Dodge had bought up, and about the first of April he together with his two assistants, Dodge and Captain Rogers, departed.<sup>2</sup>

This proceeding of Bentley called for immediate action on the part of the French in order to counteract the influence which would be exerted against them, and it was decided to send representatives to Virginia. But there were preparations to make before they could take their departure. Besides the affair with Bentley the inhabitants wished to send the bills and accounts of the people against the state, and asked Cahokia to unite in this. The Kaskaskians chose Richard McCarty and Pierre Prevost to represent <sup>1</sup> All the papers here indicated belong to the Menard Collection and are therefore copies from the Kaskaskia Register, except the letter of the court to Rogers, which is among the Kaskaskia records. They are all written in French. Besides those mentioned in the text are two certificates that the oath tendered to Bentley was the oath of fidelity, one by Winston and the other by Daniel Murray. The latter had been brought into court by Bentley himself to witness the taking of the oath. The only explanation of Bentley's action is that he feared the news of his having taken the oath would reach Canada.

<sup>2</sup> Va. State Papers, ii., 258 and 260; Dr. MSS., 51J52. After arriving at the Falls of the Ohio, criticisms of his conduct came to the ears of Captain Rogers and he wrote a letter to Governor Jefferson defending himself. He accused Winston and McCarty with being the authors of his difficulties by persuading the inhabitants not to furnish provisions for his troops; and had not Bentley offered his personal credit the troops would have starved, although meat was abundant. He enclosed the affidavits of officers and citizens to prove his statement. He ended by writing: "I cannot conclude without informing you that 'tis my positive opinion the people of the Illinois & Post Vincennes have been in an absolute state of Rebellion for these several months past & ought to have no further Indulgence shewn them, & such is the nature of these people, the more they are indulged, the more turbulent they grow — & I look upon it that Winston & McCarty have been the principle instruments to bring them to the pitch they are now at." them. The agreement with them was made on the fifth of May and signed by forty-one inhabitants, the most representative of the village.<sup>1</sup> The people of Cahokia had not learned to trust McCarty, even after his change of parties, for they remembered his arrogance and tyranny while he commanded the troops in their village. They therefore chose only Prevost.<sup>2</sup> Meanwhile the clerk of the Kaskaskia court had prepared copies of all the papers throwing light on the hard treatment the people had endured and all other matters. These were countersigned by Richard Winston, deputy county lieutenant, who at this time was supporting the French party. A five page memorial was written to the governor setting forth in detail the grievances of the people and was signed by sixty-two Kaskaskians.<sup>3</sup>

It was an unpropitious time to petition Virginia, since the scene of war in the East had been shifted to her territory and she could give little heed to her western dependencies. The Kaskaskia papers did not, however, reach their destination; for one of the bearers, Richard McCarty, while on his way was met and killed by the Indians and his papers carried to Detroit. What became of Prevost is not known. This event was to bear immediate results. Learning from McCarty's papers that the French were heartily weary of the Virginians, the British officers determined to use other means than war to recover their dominion over the Illinois.<sup>4</sup>

As he was indebted for a considerable sum to Pierre Menard, the later lieutenant governor of Illinois, the judge of Cape Girardeau, where Tardiveau was living previous to his death, turned them over to Menard. These I found in a warehouse on the banks of the Mississippi at Fort Gage, Illinois; and they have been presented by their owner, the grandson of Pierre Menard, to the Illinois State Historical Library.

<sup>4</sup> De Peyster to Powell, July 12, 1781, Mich. Pio. and Hist. Col., xix., 646. See also Papers of Old Cong., xlviii., 19. Since the papers, which should have been in the possession of McCarty at the time of his death, were in Kaskaskia in 1787 (see previous note), it is necessary to conclude that McCarty did not carry with him the important copies from the record-book and that Prevost, who was to have carried them, never started or returned with them, or else that duplicates were made for the two messengers. The last alternative is probably the correct explanation.

on that July night in 1778, the people of Illinois had passed through many phases of feeling towards the Americans. They had at first rejoiced that at last the liberty which had been the subject of their dreams was to be enjoyed. There followed a few months of peace under Clark's mild rule, when the French actually stripped themselves of their property to supply the troops with necessities and to further the cause which they had adopted. Then the anxious days came when the vandalism of the troops and the doubt about the payment for their goods made them less jubilant. They received Todd with his civil government as a prophet of a new era. Todd had failed and had handed them over to the military, and Montgomery had succeeded in so thoroughly cowing them, that their power of opposition was weak. De la Balme had aroused them by the new born hope of once more coming under the dominion of France, and he too had failed; but their pride in the name of Frenchmen had been awakened and from that hour their opposition to the Virginians was more forceful. The number of troops in the Illinois under Rogers was not large, so their boldness had little cause for fear from that source; but the long struggle against poverty and tyranny was telling on their courage, and many were beginning to look to England, their allegiance to which they had so lightly repudiated, as a power that might possibly offer them protection. The feeling was not an active force, but simply an indifference in regard to what might happen. The intercourse with Canada had not been completely broken off by the war, for the French there found opportunity now and then to send their goods to their brothers in the Illinois.

This feeling of a possible renewal of relations with England was not confined to the French of the Northwest. Among the western Americans also the same attitude was to be found. George Morgan, writing at this time, mentions a letter he had received in regard to Kentucky, where the indifference to the American cause appears to have been widespread, due largely to events somewhat similar to those affecting the Illinois.<sup>1</sup>

It was this feeling that gave the British hope that they might persuade the French to renew their allegiance to the British crown. In June the lieutenant governor of Michillimackinac sent six men to the Illinois to see what could be accomplished. In the three accounts, printed in this volume,<sup>1</sup> their exact mission is differently described; in one it was to excite the people to offensive action against the Spaniards, in another to raise militia to be paid by the British, and in the third to make a commercial treaty. The agents made the mistake of going first to St. Louis, probably to open negotiations with the French of that city, who appear to have been as discontented as their relatives on the other bank. They were arrested by the Spanish commandant, Cruzat, and a letter addressed to the inhabitants of Kaskaskia and Cahokia was found in their possession. A copy of this letter was sent to Major John Williams, who had replaced Captain Rogers at Kaskaskia.

Cruzat gave every appearance of acting in good faith towards the Americans in this matter, and evidently did arouse the discontent of the people in the Illinois who felt that their letter should have been sent to them. But the Spaniard was crafty and no doubt would have been willing to see the eastern bank pass again into the hands of the British in order that Spain might reconquer it.<sup>2</sup> Cruzat was clever enough to persuade Linctot, a Virginia Indian agent at the time in St. Louis, and possibly Gratiot, of his loyalty to the Americans. This may be seen by the letters of these two written to Clark, July 31 and August 1, in praise of the action in withholding the letter and messengers from the French of the American Bottom. But six weeks before those letters were written the Spanish governor had reached an understanding with the Illinois people, and two of the British agents were permitted to go to Cahokia, provided they found bondsmen. The agents accomplished very little, however, owing to their initial mistake; but that the undertaking might have been successful or the mistake even rectified may be inferred from a letter of Antoine Girardin to Governor Sinclair.<sup>3</sup> Girardin was one of the most important citizens of Cahokia at this time, had been elected one of the members of the first court, and was the most enterprising man in the village. His position was such that he understood the feeling of the people, and his letter probably reflected their attitude correctly. He wrote that, if a force of British soldiers without any Indians should be sent to the Illinois, he was sure the people would receive them; and at the same time he offered his assistance. It is possible that, had the British acted promptly, they might have succeeded. Yet possibly not, for shortly after this letter was written, the news of the surrender of Cornwallis reached the West and naturally raised the hopes of those who still clung to the American cause.

During the summer of 1781 the court at Kaskaskia had tried to assert itself in the interests of good order. Certain American settlers had followed the example of the troops in killing the cattle of the French. As long as the soldiers were present, they were safe from prosecution, but now, when there does not appear to have been any garrison at Fort Clark, indictments were brought against six Americans by eleven Frenchmen for shooting the cows and other animals in the commons. The Americans were arrested and tried; the charge was proved against them and three were banished from the country for three years and the others fined.<sup>1</sup>

The justices also dared make opposition to the deputy county lieutenant. Without consulting the court, Winston appointed, as notary public, Antoine Labuxiere, son of Joseph Labuxiere who held the office of state's attorney after the resignation of Jean Girault.<sup>2</sup> The first opposition to this appointment came from the notary-clerk of the court, Carbonneaux, who, perhaps, was not anxious to have a rival. The court supported their clerk and Winston was obliged to yield. The principal reasons alleged by the court for their objection were the youth of Antoine Labuxiere and the law that no officer could be appointed except by the vote of the people. Winston answered that he was in no way responsible for his actions to the court but only to the state of Virginia.<sup>1</sup>

The unfriendly relation existing between the county lieutenant and the court that is evident from the foregoing instance had existed ever since the appointment of the former, and from now on appears to have increased, until Winston had few adherents among the French inhabitants, a circumstance which he was to regret in the future. Exactly what bearing this disagreement had upon a new election of justices at this time it is impossible to say. Four justices from Kaskaskia, Lasource, Janis, Lachance, and Charles Charleville, had held office for over two years, in fact ever since the election held by Todd. The other two members had been Duplasy and Cerré. The former had been killed in the De la Balme expedition and the latter had gone to St. Louis. As far as the record shows only one of these places had been filled, by the election of Michel Godin. The two justices from Prairie du Rocher were to remain unchanged for another year. It is not known what became of the Sieur de Girardot who represented St. Philippe. All the justices desired to continue in office, but since the list of magistrates was not complete, two more, J. Bte. Charleville and Antoine Bauvais, had been elected to fill the vacancies on July 19th. The prolongation of their tenure of office by the justices was not popular, and it is possible that Winston utilized the opportunity to bring such pressure to bear that the court was obliged to submit; for on the tenth of September he was requested to permit the summoning of an assembly of the people to "elect magistrates to fill the places of those who had held their position for two years or more."<sup>2</sup> The assembly was called the same day and there is in existence the polling sheet that was used. Perhaps on account of the shortness of the notice or for some other reason only twenty-seven votes were cast, not exceeding by many the number of candidates which was sixteen. Antoine Morin was the most popular candidate receiving twenty votes. The next one on the list was Pierre Langlois with eighteen votes; the third was Vitale Bauvais, whose brother had been elected in July, and whose family was at this time and later one of the most influential among the French population; the fourth was Pierre Picard with eleven votes. The other candidates had only a few supporters. The analysis of the vote would indicate that Winston had not been supported at the poll and that his opponents had carried their candidates. At the bottom of the polling sheet is written the certificate of election. The clerk first wrote the name of Pierre Langlois, who was more friendly to Winston than the other justices, as president of the new court, although he had received fewer votes than Morin. He then crossed this name off and substituted that of J. Bte. Charleville, one of the justices chosen in the July election, who may have had a prior right to this position. His vote had been cast for the four successful candidates and he was and remained a firm adherent of the French party. Whatever the explanation of the erasure is, neither of the two men became president of the court, for the position was held during the following year by Antoine Bauvais, who was one of the justices elected in July.<sup>1</sup>

Kaskaskia was not to have the burden of many troops during the next winter; but the village did not wholly escape persecution, for two of the men formerly most troublesome returned. It is true that the one who had made himself most offensive, Thomas Bentley, never again visited this country. He failed in his attempt to realize on all the certificates which he had bought from the French. His petition to the Virginia council was denied, and that body intimated that the gentleman was an impostor. Bentley defended himself against the accusation and appealed to the letter of General Clark and to the testimony of Colonel Montgomery and John Dodge.<sup>2</sup> Possibly on account of the character of his attestors, one of his claims was afterward allowed. He was still in Richmond waiting for its payment in July, 1783, and probably died during the year for his wife began the process for the settlement of the estate shortly afterwards.<sup>1</sup>

When Rogers and Dodge returned to Kaskaskia I do not know, but there is a characteristic letter from Rogers dated November 10, 1781, demanding supplies. His threats were somewhat modified. He said that if the people did not give him what was needed for his thirty troops, two hundred would be sent; but there was no suggestion of setting aside the court. He claims to have been acting under orders<sup>2</sup> and was probably sent to Kaskaskia more to reconnoiter than to act as a guard, for Clark expected that the British would make one more attempt to win the West, which had become more important to them now that the southern campaign had ended in the capture of Cornwallis. Rogers evidently did not remain long in the country, for before the winter ended Clark informed the governor that Vincennes had been completely evacuated and that only a few spies were kept at any of the villages.<sup>3</sup> Dodge had probably returned with Rogers and remained in the village. Before twelve months had passed the records were to give no uncertain account of the activities of the "illustrious Dodge."

There is among the Kaskaskia Records a long and interesting letter in the French language written in December by George Rogers Clark to the court of Kaskaskia, in which he states that he has learned that there are in the village numerous refugees and vagabonds who are disturbing the peace and tranquility of the community by stealing property in spite of the authority of the court. He laments this fact and urges the court to use its power even to the extent of inflicting corporal punishment or the death penalty. He tells the justices to make use of their militia and to call on the other villages for aid. Just what circumstances drew this letter from Clark will probably never be known; but the things he speaks of were constantly happening, so that he might have written such a letter at any time after he entered the country. The interesting point is that he desired the court to uphold its authority, and there is nothing to indicate that he authorized the unnecessarily harsh and arbitrary measures of his officers. In notifying the French of the surrender of Cornwallis he gave them the hope that a better day was coming for them.<sup>1</sup>

Of the winter of 1781-1782 there are no records except such as show that the court was regularly sitting and performing its duties. A single document should be mentioned. On February 10th another election was held to appoint a single magistrate. Fifteen votes were cast of which Stanicles Levasseur received five and was elected. Whose place he filled cannot be discovered, for there remain no lists of the judges like those of the court of Cahokia.

The year 1782 was to be the last one of the war. The Virginians had managed to hold the country northwest of the Ohio for almost four years and this last was to pass without real danger. Rocheblave, the former acting commandant of the Illinois, had returned to Canada and laid before the government a plan for the reconquest of the whole territory, but his suggestions were without influence.<sup>2</sup> Several parties of Indians were sent into the Northwest, however, and one of these defeated the frontiersmen at Blue Licks—it was in this engagement that John Todd was killed; but no serious attack was made on the French villages. Clark retaliated by leading a large party against the Miami villages and inflicting severe punishment. It was his last achievement in the war.<sup>3</sup> On November 30th, a few days after the Miami campaign, a provisional treaty of peace was signed by England and the United States. The danger to the Illinois from Canada was for a time at an end. On January 18, 1783, the Illinois regiment was disbanded<sup>4</sup> and in the following July Clark was relieved of his command.<sup>5</sup>

In the villages of the Illinois during these years of neglect we find as close an approximation to the form of the classic city-state as has ever existed in the western hemisphere. For a short time they were practically cut off from the rest of the world and from the only power which might legally exercise authority over them, so that each village was a self-governing community. As we shall see later the period was for Cahokia one of moderate prosperity and peace; but the more important village, Kaskaskia, passed through all the sufferings which her earlier prototypes experienced during periods of social anarchy. The Greeks gave the special name of stasis to that disease which was so common to their peculiar form of civil organization. It was caused by one party within the state making the political issue the subjugation of all others, an issue which was pursued with maliciousness and violence.<sup>1</sup> In a famous passage Thucydides has described the results of this disease: "The cause of all these evils was the love of power, originating in avarice and ambition, and the party spirit which is engendered in them when men are fairly embarked in a contest. . . . Striving in every way to overcome each other, they committed the most monstrous crimes; yet even these were surpassed by the magnitude of their revenges, which they pursued to the very uttermost, neither party observing any definite limits either of justice or public expediency, but both alike making the caprice of the moment their law. Either by the help of an unrighteous sentence, or grasping power with the strong hand, they were eager to satiate the impatience of party spirit."<sup>2</sup> The description is as applicable to the conditions existing in Kaskaskia during the years following the withdrawal of the Illinois regiment as to the cities of Greece, which Thucydides had in his mind.

The factional strife and the personal enmities, which had been engendered by the past years in Kaskaskia, but had been somewhat controlled by the presence of the military force, broke out in the most virulent form of stasis, during the course of which the love of power, avarice, and personal animosities seized control of the government, overthrew it, and left behind only anarchy. Three parties entered into this struggle for power, and probably the final blame for the result must be ascribed in part to all. The mass of the French inhabitants made up what may be called the French party, the leaders of which were the justices of the district court. These latter considered themselves the chief representatives of sovereignty and would have been glad to compel submission by all rivals. The strength of this party was rather greater in the district than in the village proper, where the people were more divided in their allegiance and more cowed by their opponents.<sup>1</sup> Its members were hostile to the Americans who had settled among them and feared that they would be finally overcome in numbers and lose their French laws and officers. They looked upon the deputy county lieutenant in particular as an enemy, who would take the first opportunity to make himself supreme and whose action in trying to placate the Virginians and at the same time to incite the French to opposition they regarded as treacherous.<sup>2</sup> It is probably true that the leaders of the party were ignorant, as Winston asserted, and incapable under the existing conditions of fulfilling the duties which the accidents of war and geographical position had thrust upon them.<sup>3</sup>

Winston had a small following among the French, led by Pierre Langlois, one of the justices, and Carbonneaux, the clerk of the court. Some of the Americans had also attached themselves to his party. His contempt for the French was only less than his hatred of John Dodge, the leader of the third party, whom he regarded as his chief rival. The hostility of the two men dated back to the time when Montgomery was still commanding in the Illinois, and, since Dodge had always been associated with the military party, the personal strife between them appears to be a continuation of the struggle between the army and the civil government, which had broken out when John Todd was still in the county.<sup>1</sup> That Dodge actually held a military commission at this time is extremely doubtful. He had been appointed Indian agent for Virginia and even used that title occasionally during the year 1782. Since Clark had never trusted him and his reputation among the Virginia officials was none too good, it is not probable that he had been promoted to a position in the army.<sup>2</sup> However, after the departure of Captain Rogers, Dodge gave himself out as commandant of troops in Kaskaskia and was able to persuade many of the French people to acknowledge his authority. With him were associated Israel Dodge,<sup>3</sup> who seemed ready enough to follow his energetic and capable brother, and the more turbulent American immigrants. For the next few years John Dodge is the power in the village of Kaskaskia. Unfortunately most of the records of his interesting career, which the clerk of the court carefully preserved, have been destroyed, so that the details can only be obtained from the rather unsatisfactory petitions of the inhabitants to Congress.

Dodge's first attack was on the deputy county lieutenant, in the summer of 1782. The fear of renewed British invasions and possible treachery were his excuses. Winston had become thoroughly exasperated with the actions of the Virginia troops, and probably desired to identify himself with the French party. At any rate he went about among the people telling them that Dodge and the officers who had been in the Illinois were vagabonds and robbers, who had only come to the French villages for the purpose of pillaging. There is no proof that he entertained treasonable designs, and his remarks give evidence of being inspired solely by personal dislike and enmity to individuals; for he excepted Clark from his general condemnation.

On April 29th John Dodge issued an order, which he signed as captain commandant, to his brother Israel to take a party and bring Richard Winston before him to give an account of his conduct. Even if he had held a military commission such an order was entirely illegal; and his next act was still more so, for he ordered that Winston should be imprisoned because he, "has been guilty of treasonable expressions Against the State and officer who have the hon<sup>r</sup> of wearing Commission in the Service of their Country; damned them all a set of thieves and Robers and only come to the Country for that purpose, The above Crime being proved before. i now deliver him to you prisoner and request of you to Keep him in surety until he may be brought to justice."<sup>1</sup>

The day of the arrest Mrs. Winston appealed to Antoine Bauvais to assemble the court and summon the Dodges to appear and justify their actions. The court met at one o'clock the same day but refused to take cognizance of the affair, probably being willing that their two enemies should fight it out. On the next day Dodge wrote to Joseph Labuxiere, state's attorney, and asked for his co-operation. Labuxiere's training was not such as fitted him to oppose the military power. He had served under France and Spain where orders from the captain in command were obeyed, so he took up the case; but he protested that he would not hold himself responsible to the state or to Winston for the events and prejudice which might result therefrom. He said, however, that he was bound to give information to the council of Virginia and to General Clark and that he had been unable to persuade the court to draw up the process against Winston without a deposit of money, which neither he nor Dodge possessed. Labuxiere summoned the witnesses, who were named by Dodge, to appear before him. The first was Michel Perrault, captain of infantry, who testified that he wrote to Winston for some supplies belonging to the state and that Winston sent part of them; that later the witness, being reduced to "indigence," had sold some of these, and Winston had then said to him that he was following in the footsteps of his superiors who were a band of thieves. The next witness was Major John Williams, former captain of infantry. He said that he had frequently heard Winston swear at all the officers of the Illinois troops except General Clark and declare that they had come to the country only to rob and steal. The third witness was Henry Smith, who called himself improperly a former captain in the Illinois battalion.<sup>1</sup> He repeated the testimony of Williams. Labuxiere ended his account of the testimony with a statement that he was aware that he had exceeded his duties in thus summoning witnesses before him, but that he thought the importance of the case demanded his action.

While Winston remained in prison, some friend or his wife obtained possession of John Todd's record-book, which was probably in Winston's house as it was the property of the county lieutenant, and entered therein this protest: "Kaskaskia in the Illinois 29th april 1782. Eighty and touce. This day 10 oClock A:M I was Taken out of my house by Isreal Dodge on an order Given by Jno. Dodge in despite of the Civil authoroty Disregarded the Laws and on ther Malitious acusation of Jhn Williams and michel perault as may appear by their deposition I was Confined By Tyranick military force without making any Legal aplication to the Civil Magistrates. 30th the attorney for the State La Buxiere presented a petition to the Court against Richard Winston State prisonner in their Custody the Contents of which he (the attorney for the State) ought to heave Communicated to me or my attorney if any I had."<sup>2</sup>

Winston was detained in prison for sixteen days, and after his release persuaded the justices to hear the case in which the civil authority had been so defied. On June the 30th they ordered <sup>1</sup> In 1781, when he was among those prosecuted by the court for killing cattle (see supra, p. cvi.) he testified that he was a laborer. His name does not appear on any list of Clark's troops.

Labuxiere to inform them of the witnesses whom he had interrogated and to send them a list of questions which he desired to have asked, for they wished to end the affair, seeing that Winston intended to leave the country. The records do not contain an account of the proceedings before the court, but Winston was acquitted. After this interesting episode we lose all sight of Dodge for a few months, and when he reappears he has won for himself the mastery of the village of Kaskaskia. The steps by which he acquired his power are unknown; but the acts of Winston during the last months of 1782 no doubt prepared the way.<sup>1</sup>

Winston had good reasons for feeling that the court had not given him cordial support in his contest for the rights of the civil against the military power, and it was probably due to his influence that a new election of magistrates for Kaskaskia was held shortly after his release. On the sixteenth of June, an assembly of the people of Prairie du Rocher was held in the house of J. Bte. Barbau, commandant of the militia, to elect magistrates to fill the places of Barbau and Louvieres, who had been magistrates "during the time fixed by the code of government." They had held their positions since June, 1779. The two newly elected justices were Aimé Compte and J. Bte. Jacquemain.<sup>2</sup> On the fifteenth of September Kaskaskia held a new election, only twenty-one men exercising the franchise, and six new magistrates were chosen—J. Bte. Bauvais, Louis Brazeau, François Charleville, François Corset, Vitale Bauvais, and Antoine Morin; but Winston issued a certificate of election to only the first four, to whom he also wrote a letter of congratulation.<sup>3</sup>

It is to be noticed that Vitale Bauvais and Morin were both members of the former court, which had refused to support Winston against Dodge. In spite of the act of the county lieutenant <sup>1</sup> The papers in the foregoing narrative may be found in the following places. In the Papers of Old Congress, xlviii., 4, are the two orders for arrest and imprisonment of Winston and Mrs. Winston's appeal with the call for the court on April 29. the other justices gave their support to their rejected associates and Vitale Bauvais was made president, a position he held as long as the court continued to sit.

Beaten once again at the election, Winston determined to use other means of asserting his authority, but he allowed at least two months to pass before proceeding to the final act. That act was decisive. Towards the end of November, he posted on the church door a notice abolishing the court of the district of Kaskaskia. Thus by act of the civil authority, and not by that of the military, the court of Kaskaskia came to an end. From this date until June, 1787, no bench of justices held sessions in that village.<sup>1</sup>

Winston himself had decided to go to Virginia. He wished to obtain justice against John Dodge, to petition for the remodeling of the government, and to recover the money which he had advanced to the state. His loans to Virginia had been considerable and he found himself reduced from affluence to extreme poverty by his support of the American cause. One of the officials of the court, the clerk François Carbonneaux, had supported Winston in his action and was to accompany him to Virginia. On December 3d, they persuaded a few Kaskaskians to appoint them their agents either to Virginia or to Congress for the above purposes. The signatures to this document reveal the strength of the party of the county lieutenant. Of the signers seven were Americans and ten were Frenchmen, of the latter five only could write and but one, Pierre Langlois, had held the position of justice of the peace.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> The existence of the court can be proved up to November 15th. (Kas. Rec., Petitions. That it was set aside by a placard on the church door is proved by a letter of the two Bauvais and Corset in 1787. (Kas. Rec., Letters.) Winston is unquestionably the one who set the court aside, for in a memorial to the Va. commissioners, the French party wrote that he had "annulled, set aside, and revoked the good law which you have given us for the surety of the country." Menard Col., Tard. Papers.

<sup>2</sup> From now on the petitions to Congress are numerous and it is necessary to depend upon them for much of the narrative, since the local material has been lost or destroyed. These petitions must be used with caution, for they emanate from different parties in the Illinois and their value can only be estimated after a careful analysis of their contents to determine who were the petitioners. First there was the party of Winston. The first petition was carried by Winston and Carbonneaux, but since Winston died in Richmond in 1784 (Dr. MSS., 4J37), Carbonneaux was the representative of this party at Congress. They wanted to remodel the existing government and to make Illinois into one district under a county lieutenant having sufficient power to maintain order. They had a contempt for the French, for their lack of intelligence, and for their failure to rule themselves. (Papers of Old Cong., xxx., 453.) The second party was that of John Dodge, who was more success-

No

Before leaving the country Winston made provision for the maintenance of the county government by the appointment, on January 8th, of Jacques Timothe Boucher Sieur de Monbreun, as his successor, but this he did not make public till January 21st, at which time he confirmed the sale of the office of notary-clerk by Carbonneaux to Pierre Langlois.<sup>1</sup> Before the arrangements for his departure were completed, the announcement of the arrival of the commissioners for western affairs, sent by the state of Virginia, had reached Kaskaskia, so that he had a further incentive for haste.

Although, for lack of other name, it is necessary to continue calling the government in the Illinois, the county of Illinois, legally the county had ended twelve months before Winston appointed his successor. It had been established by the act of the Virginia assembly in December, 1778, and was to last for one year and thereafter until the end of the next session of the assembly. It was renewed in May, 1780, and continued for a similar period.<sup>2</sup> ful by means of intimidation in winning the support of the French people, including the deputy lieutenant left by Winston, and to whom the Americans looked for leadership. He was not, however, able to win over the prominent members of the French party, who remained distinctly hostile. Dodge and his followers advocated the establishment of Illinois as a separate state, being no doubt influenced by the similar demand of the county of Kentucky. Their petition was carried by Pentecoste in 1784. (Papers of Old Cong., xxx., 435, 463.) The third party was that of the French, led by Barbau, the Bauvais, Janis, and others. The people of Cahokia may be regarded as belonging to this party. The members were devoted to the court and the French law modified by the Virginia enactments, as they had been established by John Todd; but the party had no objection to changes in the civil organization which might be made by Congress; in fact its members demanded a government from Congress. Their petitions were carried by Major Lebrun and Mr. Parker. The writers of their communications were the clerks of the courts. (Papers of Old Cong., xli., 113; this vol., p. 567, 581.) The fourth set of petitions were written by a faction of the French party which remained irreconcilable after the attempted settlement by Colonel Harmar in 1787 and continued to protest against Dodge. (See post p. xxxvii.) The leaders were a priest, Father de la Valliere, and the clerk of the court, Pierre Langlois, both of whom wrote the petitions. Their papers contain information of value as they conserve the older issues of the French party. (Papers of Old Cong., xlviii., 13, 19, 89.) The fifth set of petitions were of a very different character. They are those signed by Tardiveau, whose purpose was to gain from Congress concessions of land for all the French and Americans in the Illinois. He had persuaded members of all parties to sign agreements with him to pay him one tenth of the land thus obtained for his trouble. His petitions contain few details and statements of fact, since he could not afford to prejudice Congress against any of his clients. They are very wordy and full of flowery phrases and in proportion to their length contain little of value. He had obtained copies of all the important memorials and papers in the Kaskaskia records and from these he drew his information; but since the copies he used are still in existence, they furnish better evidence than his interpretation of them. (See post, p. ciii. Tardiveau's petitions are in Papers of Old Cong., xlviii., 110 et seq.)

At the next session there was an attempt to have the act continued, but without success.<sup>1</sup> On the fifth of January, 1782, the general assembly adjourned and, "the statutory organization of Illinois expired" and from that time there was no government resting on positive provisions of law in the Illinois country, until Governor St. Clair inaugurated the county of St. Clair in 1790.<sup>2</sup>

The reason for this action of the legislature of Virginia is to be found in the negotiations with the United States in regard to the cession of this territory. A bill to that effect was passed by the assembly as early as January 2, 1781; but the business dragged through several sessions of the United States Congress, and the cession was not consummated until March 1, 1784.<sup>3</sup> As is well known, it was not until 1787 that Congress passed an effective law regulating the government in the Northwest and not until the spring of 1790 that the governor appointed under that act reached the French settlements, so that during the period of eight years the people of the American Bottom were left to themselves to settle the problem of government as best they could.

After repeated petitions from the West and many accusations against officers, Virginia determined in the year 1782 to send a board of commissioners to these regions to investigate the claims against her and the whole question of the finances of the Western army. The accounts and bills as they had come to Virginia were greatly confused; for Montgomery, George, and other officers had made drafts without authority, and the amounts appeared large and were drawn for specie, so that fraud was suspected.<sup>4</sup> The commissioners did not start for the West until October. They sent from Lincoln county on December 4th a notice of their appointment and powers to Kaskaskia and Vincennes and requested that word be sent to Cahokia and St. Louis. A meeting at the Falls of the Ohio was set for January 15th.<sup>1</sup>

On arriving at the appointed place of meeting, the commissioners found no one. They suspected that Clark and his officers were conspiring to keep the French representatives from them, for they learned that the clerk of Kaskaskia, Carbonneaux, and the delegates from Vincennes had arrived at the Falls and been sent away.<sup>2</sup> Whether their suspicions were correct or not it is impossible to say. If correct, the attempt was not successful; for the commissioners were overtaken at Logan in the spring by Winston and Carbonneaux. The latter made an accusation of ignorance and neglect of duty against the justices of Kaskaskia. He also recommended a stronger government for the country and said that some persons were setting themselves up as lords of the land. The commissioners believed that he represented the better elements of his village, instead of a minority as was the case. Winston did not make any deposition at this time. He accompanied the commissioners to Richmond, where he died in great poverty in the year 1784.<sup>3</sup>

Winston and Carbonneaux were not the only ones to carry memorials to the commissioners. On March 1st, the members of the French party sent off a ten-page petition concerning the affairs in the Illinois, in which, although they tried to confine themselves to claims for payments, as they had been instructed to do by the commissioners, they recur now and then to the hardships which they had endured. At about the same time another memorial, signed by most of the men opposed to Winston, was forwarded and in this was given in detail an account of the double <sup>2</sup> In his journal Colonel Fleming, one of the commissioners, is very outspoken about his suspicions. (Dr. MSS., 22269). From the same journal it is evident that Carbonneaux and the delegates from Vincennes were at the Falls in time for the meeting on January 15. Winston did not start from Kaskaskia till the 21st of the month and the delegate from Cahokia, Fr. Trottier, left sometime in March. (See post, p. 145). All the representatives were at Fort Nelson on March 30th and wrote a letter to Clark from there. (Dr. MSS., 50J80).

<sup>3</sup> The deposition of Carbonneaux is obtained from an extract sent by Walker Daniel to the commissioners February 3d in Dr. MSS., 60J3 and Va. State Papers, iii., 430; notice of Winston's death in Dr. MSS., 4J37. I regret that I have been unable to see the journal of this board of commissioners, which is in the *Va. dealing of the county lieutenant, who had told the military officers that the French must be ruled by the bayonet while he was urging the French to oppose further levies; and the memorialists further declared that Winston was responsible for the lawless condition which prevailed in the country.<sup>1</sup>

Those who had given freely of their goods for the support of the American cause were never to receive full recompense for their services. Most of the bills which were presented were finally paid by Virginia, but not until they had passed into the hands of speculators such as Bentley and Dodge, who had given to the original holders a very small percentage of the face value of the claims. Later the United States attempted to compensate the French people for the losses they had suffered by granting them concessions of land; but the delays were so long, their needs so pressing, and their foresight so poor that the men to whom the grants were made sold them for a song to land-jobbers and speculators, long before the difficult land question of Illinois was finally settled a generation after the occurrence of the events for which the French and others had ruined themselves.<sup>2</sup>

Between the appearance of the Virginia commissioners in January, 1783, and that of Colonel Harmar in 1787, the Illinois people were almost completely isolated. On account of the destruction of the documents which would have furnished information on the events of the period, the view we obtain of the men and affairs is a very hazy one. This, however, is evident. The experience of the Kaskaskians during the years of the American occupation had unfitted them to rise to the dignity of self-government and the anarchy only grew worse; whereas in Cahokia the court founded by Todd remained in power and was able to preserve order. The difference in the destinies of the two villages can only be ascribed to the presence of the turbulent frontiersmen

<sup>2</sup> Amer. State Papers, Pub. Land, passim; Record-Books at Chester, Ill. When the United States accepted the cession of the Northwest from Virginia, it was agreed to reimburse the latter for all claims for necessary supplies to Clark, provided they were allowed before September 24, 1788. Many bills were presented and allowed before that time (Winsor, Westward Movement, 247); but many still remained in the hands of the French unpaid. (Smith, St. Clair Papers, ii., 168.)

in the southern village; for the inhabitants of the villages were of the same origin, and their experience had been practically identical except for the few years of the Virginia period.

We have already seen that many traders came into the Illinois in the spring of 1779 and others had followed them. Besides these several soldiers of the Virginia line made permanent settlements in the neighborhood. In the summer of 1779, Montgomery permitted a number of families to settle, "up the creek about thirty miles," and this probably marks the date of the beginning of Bellefontaine, the first village of Americans north of the Ohio River.<sup>1</sup> In 1781, after the abandonment of Fort Jefferson, several families which had established themselves around that post came to Kaskaskia and some two years later made a stockade at Grand Ruisseau, which was under the bluffs at the point where the road from Cahokia to Kaskaskia mounts the hills.<sup>2</sup> The leading men in these settlements were James Moore, Henry and Nicolas Smith, Shadrach Bond, and Robert Watts. The number of Americans scattered on the bluffs, in the villages, and on the bottom was over one hundred, most of whom were in or around Kaskaskia.<sup>3</sup>

If order was to be maintained, it was essential that these scattered communities should be brought into some relations with the courts of the French villages. On July 9, 1782, while the the justices were still holding sessions, fourteen of the Americans at Bellefontaine petitioned the court at Kaskaskia that they be permitted to maintain a subordinate court in their village and that either some one should be appointed justice of the peace or they should be allowed to elect one from among themselves to that office; and they expressed a desire to live under the laws of the county and to be united with the other villages. This petition was granted and an election was held, in which Nicolas Smith received ten votes and James Garretson five. The certificate of election was written by James Moore, who signed himself captain.<sup>1</sup> The organization of the village of Grand Ruisseau did not take place till the year 1786. Since it was in the district of Cahokia, the petition was sent to the court sitting in the village of that name. On January 2d the Americans were permitted to elect a commandant, subordinate to the commandant of Cahokia, and to name arbitrators to decide disputes, but they were to remain subject to the jurisdiction of the court. Robert Watts was appointed commandant.<sup>2</sup> It was not until the next year that Grand Ruisseau received a justice; but, since the permission to elect such an officer was dependent on of events which occurred in Kaskaskia, the account will be postponed to the proper place.<sup>3</sup>

The submissiveness of the Americans to the Kaskaskia court did not last long and in their attempt to gain the control of the government, after the abolition of that body by Winston, confusion and disorder reached a climax; and anarchy was made more complete by the drunkenness, insubordination, and lawlessness of the French couteur de bois and the voyageurs.

Affairs were further complicated by the presence of British merchants, who had rushed into the region to capture the Indian trade. The Michillimackinac company, which had a store at Cahokia, was particularly conspicuous in this competition. The British were able to undersell the inhabitants in their commerce with the Indians and, since this deprived the villagers of a trade which they thought rightfully belonged to them, it was the cause of several complaints.<sup>4</sup> All the British who appeared in the West were not simply traders. The British government, which looked with covetous eyes on these rich lands, sent agents into all parts to report on the disposition of the people. Some of these, although not authorized by their government, openly urged the French people to unite with England, an issue out of their troubles which would not have been altogether unacceptable to the Illinoisans.<sup>1</sup>

Over this turbulent population the Canadian nobleman, Jacques Timothe Boucher Sieur de Monbreun, had been appointed governor by Winston. He had been born in Boucherville about thirty-six years before. While still a young man, he had sought his fortune in the West and established himself at Vincennes. He there won the confidence of Lieutenant Governor Abbott during the latter's short stay in the village and was employed by him as a confidential messenger.<sup>2</sup> He had readily united with the people of Vincennes in acknowledging the sovereignty of Virginia, influenced by the persuasive eloquence of Father Gibault. He was appointed lieutenant in the militia of the village, and was one of the officers captured by Hamilton, when the British retook the place.<sup>3</sup> De Monbreun later enlisted in the Illinois battalion and received the commission of lieutenant, a position he held with honor until the fall of 1782, when the necessities of his family compelled him to ask for his discharge and pay. His letters to Clark show him to have been a man proud of his lineage and with a sensitiveness in matters of honor.<sup>4</sup>

Exactly what his party affiliations were, previous to his appointment, it is impossible to say. He was connected by marriage with the Bauvais family. He ran for office in 1782 and received only one vote. His appointment as deputy county lieutenant would indicate a close relation to Winston, particularly as the other official appointed at this time, the clerk Langlois, is known to have been of that party; yet his service in the army would show some association with the military party, with which Winston does not appear to have been on the best of terms; and his later actions connect him closely with John Dodge. thing considered, it is probable that his appointment was not favored by the French party.

On January 8, 1783, Winston issued to him the commission of deputy county lieutenant and gave him the following instructions for his guidance: "On every occasion that shall offer to claim your protection in behalf of the people as well as to support the cause of the States, you will act in concert with the oldest inhabitants in order to consider jointly with them the most proper measures to take concerning the affairs which may arise.

"For your direction I cannot direct you to a better guide than the 'Code of Laws and Articles of Right' which his Excellency the Governor has sent and which ought to be in the office of the court. These you will consult from time to time and mitigate as much as possible by the old customs and usages of this country. By adding to this your knowledge of jurisprudence you cannot fall into error. . . .

"As there is nothing else which occurs to me to call to your attention, I rely on your prudence and experience as to unforeseen cases. I wish for you a better success in preserving peace than I have had."<sup>1</sup>

The wish was almost ironical, for the conditions in Kaskaskia were growing steadily worse rather than better, and for this Winston was in part to blame. On account of the discontinuance of the sessions of the court through Winston's act, the deputy county lieutenant no longer had the moral support of the best citizens for the preservation of order. For the next few years De Monbreun was generally the only judge and at times he is satisfied to sign this less pretentious title to his name; but the petitions were addressed to him as county lieutenant. It is evident that the government in Kaskaskia had reverted to the older French type, wherein executive and judicial functions were exercised by one man. That there was a great deal of judicial business carried on is proved by the numerous petitions and other legal documents. The notary, Langlois, also found something to do, as is shown by the inventory of instruments drawn up by him. In 1783 there were indexed eighty-five titles and in the next year, eighty-seven.<sup>1</sup> In the year 1784, for a short time, Aimé Compte, the last president of the former court, reappeared and styled himself, "judge in the village and district of Kaskaskia". In a petition of June 16, there is mention of "De Monbreun, the late commandant". It is possible that this marks some political upheaval which for a time overthrew the deputy lieutenant. This may have been due to the assertion of the rights of the district against the village, for Aimé Compte was from Prairie du Rocher; but if that is the explanation, the revolution was not successful, for De Monbreun's activities as governor and judge can be traced up to the latter half of the year 1786.<sup>2</sup>

Besides attending to the legal affairs of the district, De Monbreun managed to maintain peaceful relations with the Indians. Raids were becoming more frequent and dangerous during these years. The county lieutenant held several conferences with the savages as did the commandants of the other villages. He spent the public money and private funds, furnished by himself and the militia officers, to satisfy their demands. By these means a partial treaty was effected, which in a measure protected the Illinois country.<sup>3</sup>

He was also called upon to maintain the honor of the United States against the infringement of her rights by Spain. In 1785 two deserters from St. Louis took refuge in American Illinois. Cruzat, the commandant of St. Louis, seized these upon the soil of the United States and carried them back to the Spanish village. The action of De Monbreun in the case shows him at his best. In a very dignified letter, dated October 12th, he pointed out to the Spanish governor of New Orleans the illegality of the act and the insult which had been offered to the United States.<sup>4</sup> On the whole, however, the relations between the officials of the Spanish possessions and those of the Illinois were most friendly.

Many letters passed between them on a variety of subjects, generally of a legal character. In fact, it was the policy of Spain at this time to propitiate the French and the Americans of the West, in order to persuade them either to revolt against the United States and unite with the Spanish colonies or to emigrate to the western bank. There has been preserved an interesting letter, the motive of which must be found in this policy. Shortly before the episode of the Spanish deserters, Cruzat wrote to De Monbreun that the merchants of American Illinois might have the protection of the Spanish convoy in sending down their merchandise to New Orleans.<sup>1</sup>

Where De Monbreun failed in his government was where Todd and Winston had failed before him, namely in preserving peace between the factions. In his memorial to Virginia he has recorded the policy which he adopted, "in quieting the animosities between the French Natives and American Settlers." He writes: "Without troops to oppose the hostile designs of the savages, without any coercive means to keep under subjection a country where a number of restless spirits were exciting commotions and troubles, the greater circumspection and management became necessary, and the Commandant was induced to temporize with all parties in order to preserve tranquillity, peace, and harmony in the country."<sup>2</sup>

The temporizing of De Monbreun meant that he permitted the American settlers, who had found in John Dodge a leader of force and ability, to control the village. These men understood better than the French the anomalous position of Illinois—no longer a part of Virginia and not yet under the control of the United States—and took advantage of it. Many of them had obtained concessions of land from the court and many more from De Monbreun, who was particularly free-handed in making grants.<sup>3</sup> It is very probable that the Kaskaskia government was not strong enough to deny or limit such concessions. A good example of the illegal occupation of land is offered by the case of this same John Dodge. He seized the old French fort on the bluffs, and fortified it with building materials and two cannon from the Jesuit building, known as Fort Clark, and was prepared from this vantage ground to defy what was left of the civil government in the village; for the site commanded the defenseless community below.<sup>1</sup> For this seizure of public property there was not the slightest authority, but no one dared to oppose the act. Dodge was so audacious and the fort so favorably situated that his influence was unquestioned in the village, and both the deputy county lieutenant and the people were compelled to do his bidding.<sup>2</sup>

He was far more successful than Winston in building up a party among the French by persuasion and intimidation. One of the former judges, Nicolas Lachance, became his chief supporter, and several of the others appeared ready to follow his lead. From the glimpses we obtain of the French people, they appear to have acknowledged the supremacy of the strongest and to have cringed in a most unmanly manner before the energetic American, or as a writer to Congress at a later time says: "But seeing they could not give any information of their unfortunate condition and consequently obtain any redress, they began the most shameful slavery, by flattering their Tyrant and serving him in the most humiliating manner."<sup>3</sup> Dodge, in turn, bullied the people, struck them with his sword, insulted them, and fought with them.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>4</sup> The fullest information in regard to Dodge is contained in the petitions to Congress of the year 1787. These were written by that faction of the French party which remained unreconciled after the visit to Kaskaskia of Colonel Harmer. (See post, p. cxxxvii.) The writers were Father de la Valliere and the clerk, Pierre Langlois. They exhibit such hostility and animosity against Dodge that their testimony should be suspected, were not some of the facts mentioned by them supported by other witnesses. Governor St. Clair wrote in 1790 that: "The Illinois regiment being disbanded a set of men pretending the authority of Virginia, embroiled themselves and a scene of general depredation and plunder ensued." (Amer. State Papers, Pub. Lands, i., 20.) The whole French party united on June 2, 1786, in a petition to Congress in which they made charges against Dodge similar to those of De

The people found difficulty in making their condition known; for Dodge was powerful and had many friends, so that his story was generally believed. He himself drew up a petition to Congress in June, 1784, asking that Illinóis be created an independent state, and found seventeen French inhabitants to sign it, most of whom belonged to the least intelligent of the community; eight were unable to sign their names, one was a woman, and of the other eight, only four had held office. They were not even all from Kaskaskia; one was an inhabitant of Vincennes, and the names of several of the others do not appear in any list of French inhabitants of the Illinois. The other signatures were those of Americans.<sup>1</sup> The French party, a few months later, appointed Major Lebrun called Belcour to present their grievances to Congress. Petitions were prepared in both Cahokia and Kaskaskia, but Dodge "prophetsyed, concerning him, be certain he shall never bear the west coat that he asketh." This prophecy was fulfilled, for the bearer of the petitions was killed on his way east near the Falls of the Ohio.<sup>2</sup> A copy of the petition from Cahokia finally reached Congress, but not until it had been somewhat disguised and changed.<sup>3</sup>

Dodge maintained his ascendancy in the village until 1786, in which year the inhabitants became thoroughly aroused and finally succeeded in overthrowing this representative of "Greek tyranny." The initial impetus to this action probably came from George Rogers Clark, who had always entertained a poor opinion of Dodge. In a letter he wrote to Congress in May, recommending that body to establish a government in the la Valiniere but without so many details. (Papers of Old Cong., xli., 113; see post, p. cxxx) In the placard of Commissioner Janis (See post, p. 495) there is an unmistakable reference to the seizure of building material from Fort Clark. In the record of the court held by De Monbreun the influence of Dodge is very evident and that in a case mentioned by De la Valiniere. (Kas. Rec., Court Record). Several papers in a suit brought by Madame Bentley against Dodge, give witness of his violence. (Kas. Rec.) There should be added to these the succession of events which occurred after the departure of Dodge and his later attack on John Edgar. (See post, p. cxlii.) For these reasons it seems proper to accept the testimony of the leaders of the smaller faction as that which would have been given by the prominent Frenchmen at an earlier date, had they had occasion to write about the same events.

Illinois, he says that he had advised the French to revive their former magistracy.<sup>1</sup> There is nothing to show, however, that any steps were taken in Kaskaskia at that time; but an opportunity was afforded shortly afterwards by the presence of Joseph Parker to send a communication to Congress.<sup>2</sup> On the 2nd of June a very earnest petition was drawn up asking for an immediate government, because of the wrongs the inhabitants were suffering from the British merchants, who threatened to take the country under the law of that nation, and who were supported by John Dodge and Nicolas Lachance. These last had made themselves commandants and were acting most tyrannically.<sup>3</sup> With this petition they sent a copy of the one which had been written by the Cahokians in 1784, but which had never reached its destination. This was now somewhat altered so as to give it the appearance of being also directed against Dodge.<sup>4</sup>

The petition from the French party was read in Congress on the 23d of August and caused that body to change its action, after it had supposed that two petitions from the French had already been considered. The first had been presented by Carbonneaux, former clerk and follower of Richard Winston, and had asked for some one with powers to govern;<sup>5</sup> the second was the petition prepared by Dodge on June 22, 1784, which, being accompanied by a letter from the county lieutenant, De Monbreun, had an official appearance. Action had been taken on these two in February and March, 1785, and it had been decided to send a commissioner to investigate titles, to have magistrates elected, and to reform the militia; but for some reason no commissioner was sent.<sup>6</sup> On December 28, 1788, three years later, the secretary called the attention of Congress to this omission, but the needs, for which the commissioner was to have been appointed, had already been supplied by the ordinance of 1787 and the appointment of Governor St. Clair.<sup>1</sup>

Upon the receipt of this third petition, Congress instructed its secretary to inform the inhabitants that "Congress have under their consideration the plan of a temporary government and that its adoption would not be longer protracted than the importance of the subject and a due regard to their interest may require."<sup>2</sup> In accordance with instructions the secretary sent the message, employing as messenger the same Parker by whom the Kaskaskians had sent their petition.

During this critical period the French party received an important addition. For some years the only priest in the region had been Father Gibault, whose assistance to Clark has made his name so well known in the West. He had taken up his permanent residence in Vincennes, and therefore the churches in the American Bottom were neglected.<sup>3</sup> Gibault had been sent by the bishop of Quebec, and his right to exercise his duties still rested on that earlier appointment. But now the Catholic Church of the United States had received a head in the person of the Prefect-Apostolic John Carroll, whose jurisdiction was extended to the Mississippi valley. The first priest sent by him to this district was the wandering Carmelite, Father St. Pierre, who undertook the charge of the parish in Cahokia in 1785 and continued there until 1789.<sup>4</sup> Sometime in the summer of 1786 the Rev. Pierre Huet de la Valiniere arrived at Kaskaskia with an appointment as vicar general of the Illinois.<sup>5</sup> He was the kind of man needed to draw the French out of the stupid timidity into which they had fallen. By nature he was impulsive and erratic, but full of enthusiasm for any cause to which he had given himself. In the year 1779 he had been expelled from Canada for his open espousal of the American cause;<sup>1</sup> later he came to the United States and served at Philadelphia and at New York. He was now sent to a region where his peculiar talents would have an immediate effect, and, since the French regarded him as a representative of the United States, to which the Illinois now belonged, his advice carried great weight.<sup>2</sup> It was undoubtedly his example and inspiration that encouraged the French to continue their resistance to the tyranny of Dodge.

In this magazine the editor, Mr. Griffin, has published the most important papers on the life of De la Valiniere, where may be found the various disputes between him and the other priests. It is impossible to discuss them here, but Gibault claimed to be vicar general under his appointment by the bishop of Quebec and was unwilling to acknowledge the superiority of the new appointee. The matter was peaceably adjusted by the Canadian bishop withdrawing his jurisdiction from this region. (Shea, Archbishop Carroll, 466.) De la Valiniere entered into a dispute with Father St. Pierre also, but the latter was supported by the Cahokians, who appealed to the bishop of Quebec.

Before the return of the messenger who had carried their petition to Congress the French people had themselves taken steps to gain control of their civil government. They first brought about, in July, the appointment of Maturin Bouvet of St. Philippe as civil and criminal judge. On August 14th Timothe de Monbreun, who had supported Dodge, resigned his office of deputy county lieutenant and appointed in his place a man who had consistently supported the French party, Jean Baptiste Barbau of Prairie du Rocher.<sup>3</sup> It is noticeable that neither of the two newly appointed officers was a Kaskaskian.

Barbau was a man well advanced in years, when he was called upon to lead the French in their struggle for political liberty. In 1746, when he married his first wife, he was over twenty-five, so that in the year 1786 he must have passed his sixty-fifth birthday. His parents were not Canadians, but had come directly from France to New Orleans, where he was probably born.<sup>4</sup>

The long expected reply from Congress was brought to Kaskaskia by Joseph Parker in January, 1787. The people were eager to learn its contents, and sent in haste to Barbau at Prairie du Rocher that he might come and open it. But the deputy county lieutenant being ill and unable to come gave his permission to the clerk to read the communication to the inhabitants.<sup>1</sup> There must have been some disappointment felt when they heard that the government for which they had so ardently hoped was not yet to be established, but was still to be determined upon. However, they had succeeded in communicating with Congress, which was some consolation.

At almost the same time an emissary appeared from a different quarter. George Rogers Clark had, during the fall of the previous year, led a force of Kentucky militiamen, without the authority of the United States, against the Indians in the Northwest territory. He then decided to garrison Vincennes, and now sent John Rice Jones to buy provisions in the Illinois, where some of the merchants had promised him assistance.<sup>2</sup> The name of Clark had always been honored by the French, for they still remembered the kind but firm rule they had enjoyed during that year when he held not only the military but the civil authority. They were therefore easily persuaded that Clark and this agent represented the United States. Jones was well received and his purchases were guaranteed by a prominent American merchant, John Edgar, whose relations with the French were far more kindly than those of his fellow countrymen.<sup>3</sup>

He then went into business at Detroit, where he was arrested on August 24, 1778, for corresponding with the Americans, and remained in prison until 1781, when he escaped. He had learned while in prison of the treasonable correspondence of the Vermonters with the British government and by giving information concerning it won the confidence of Washington, George Clinton, and Congress. In 1784 he went to Kaskaskia to establish himself in trade. The trying years which followed almost drove him to cross to the Spanish bank; but with the coming of Governor St. Clair conditions became better and he was appointed to important positions under the new government. For twenty-five years he held the office of justice of the Court of Common Pleas. During this time he purchased many of the land claims of the French for a few dollars and in the course of years became the richest land owner of the American Bottom. In 1798 Congress voted him 2240 acres of land in consideration of his losses in Canada during the Revolutionary War. He died in 1830. who, in this case, had right on his side, since Clark was acting in a most illegal manner in invading the territory of the United States, opposed the collection of supplies by Jones and was powerful enough to prevent any sales. Jones went to Vincennes, however, and returned with troops. The narrator's account of what then occurred is interesting. "Mr Jones seemed a fine gentleman who caused no hurt to any body, but entered in the above said fort on the hill occupied by John Dodge. he threatened him to cast him out from it if he continued to be contrary to America, as he was before. he stood there some days with his troops, during which time the wheat had been delivered peaceably and no body has been hurt."<sup>1</sup>

With the rising anger of the French and the promised assistance of Clark, Dodge began to feel that his position was becoming a dangerous one. He therefore collected his property and sometime in the spring crossed to the Spanish side, leaving a farmer to guard the fort and such of his possessions as he left there.

With the departure of Dodge all difficulties were by no means overcome. Since the expected authority from Congress to form a government did not arrive, the people began to clamor for some immediate form of judiciary, and they naturally turned to the government which had been established by John Todd. They knew no other nor was there any semblance of legality to be found except in the revival of their former civil organization. The final decision to revive the court came from the people and not from the county lieutenant, who, however, when consulted gave his unqualified approval.<sup>2</sup>

The clamors of the Americans, who numbered over one hundred, were heeded in this new establishment and they were given the franchise. Unfortunately for the French party the newcomers were more familiar with the use of the ballot, and by concentrating their votes were able to elect three of their own number to office. These were Henry Smith, John McElduff, and Thomas Hughes. The other three candidates elected were Antoine Bauvais, François Corset, and J. Bte. Bauvais.<sup>1</sup> These last had all held office before. Henry Smith was made president of the court. He was about fifty years old, and had come from Virginia to Illinois in 1780 and settled at Bellefontaine.

The first session was held on June 5, 1787, probably without the presence of the French justices, who were not willing to admit Americans to the bench. At this session no business was transacted.<sup>2</sup> On the 7th of July the French justices posted on the door of the church a memorial addressed to the people, in which they set forth their objections to serving on the same bench with the Americans. The chief difficulties they raised were the impossibility of the American and French judges understanding each other and the hopelessness of finding an interpreter capable of successfully performing his duties. The protest contained their definitive decision, and the two parties were compelled to separate. The result was that the Americans outside the village were turned adrift, and Bellefontaine, from this time, ceased to belong to the Kaskaskia district.<sup>3</sup> An agreement was drawn up the day after the protest, in which the signers promised that the court should remain French as it had been constituted by John Todd, and that the Frenchmen receiving the next largest number of votes should be added to the list of judges. These were Vitale Bauvais, Nicolas Lachance, and Louis Brazeau. The number of signatures was not large, but the presence of John Edgar's name gave some promise that his influence would be thrown on the side of peace.<sup>4</sup> The presence of the three members of the <sup>2</sup> Mason, John Todd's Record-Book, 308; Kas., Rec., Petitions. The government thus revived is probably the one to which Colonel Harmar refers, when he writes: "There have been some imposters before Congress particularly one Parker, a whining, canting Methodist, a kind of would be governor." (Smith, St. Clair Papers, ii., 35.) In a petition to Congress written by Tardiveau, who favored the American party in the Illinois, it is said: "That a simple report of a committee of Congress recommending the situation of the Illinois country has been by some designing persons palmed upon them for a frame of government actually established." Papers of Old Cong., xlviii., 209.

<sup>3</sup> See post, p. cxlviii.; In Mason, John Todd's Record-Book, 312, there appears a jury trial attended by several Americans from Bellefontaine. They were probably called in on account of an insufficiency of Americans in the village to form a jury.

Bauvais family among the justices may be explained by the fact that few important French families had remained in Kaskaskia during these trying years, for the majority had preferred to seek refuge under the Spanish government.

The question of the court had hardly been settled, when Colonel Harmar, who commanded in the Northwest, appeared in the village with some United States troops. He had been sent to the Illinois to make a general inspection of conditions, particularly to put an end to the anarchy at Vincennes due to Clark's garrison, and arrived at Kaskaskia on the 17th of August.<sup>1</sup> He was accompanied by Barthélemi Tardiveau, a French mercantile adventurer, who had had relations with the Kentucky separatists<sup>2</sup> and was a personal friend of John Dodge, with whose brother he had lived at the Falls of the Ohio.<sup>3</sup> Tardiveau had very little knowledge of the conditions existing in the Illinois other than what he had learned from the Dodges; but Harmar was persuaded that he was the best informed man in the country and made him his interpreter and chief adviser.<sup>4</sup> Dodge returned to his fort above Kaskaskia where he entertained the colonel, whose associates from this time were almost exclusively members of the Dodge party. Even after Harmar had visited the orderly village of Cahokia, his opinion of the French still remained somewhat affected by the influence of these men, so that he reported: "I have to remark that all these people are entirely unacquainted with what the Americans call liberty. Trial by jury etc. they are strangers to. A commandant with a few troops to give them orders is the best form of government for them; it is what they have been accustomed to."<sup>1</sup>

Although the majority of the French were ready to accept without question any disposition that might be made of them, some members of their party were by no means satisfied with the course of events. The leader of this faction was the Vicar General Huet de la Valiniere. His most important follower was the clerk, Pierre Langlois, who had been an adherent of Richard Winston and was an irreconcilable enemy of John Dodge. The priest, however, had lost all influence over the French by his own tyrannical methods. His was a nature to make enemies, and during the past year by his close adherence to the canonical law and his harsh and personal attacks in his sermons against individuals he had managed to stir up every community of the American Bottom against him.<sup>2</sup> He and his associates were not willing to give up the old issues against the Americans, and were particularly exasperated that Tardiveau, a friend of John Dodge, should be the spokesman for the villagers; for said they, "that frenchman who speaketh easily the English language is come lately here with Col. Harmar whom he inspired with sentiments very different from those which we could expect from a gentleman in his place. He deceived him in their way as he was himself deceived. He made him stay, live and dwell only in the houses of friends of Dodge, he accompanied him everywhere like his interpreter, but he could not show him the truth being himself ignorant of it, he gave allways an evil idea to every word proceeding from those who Dodge thought to be his enemies."<sup>3</sup> Tardiveau could not ignore this attack and declared that Langlois was opposed to any change in the regulations made by Todd. To justify himself Langlois, accompanied by the priest, presented himself before Colonel Harmar and said: "We desire and expect every day one regulation from the honl Congress, but now till it may come, having none,

<sup>1</sup> Smith, St. Clair Papers, ii., 32. A further proof of the influence of Dodge is given by Harmar's unfavorable opinion of Parker, who had carried the message of the French party to Congress. Harmar writes that he was very "unpopular and despised by the inhabitants." (Ibid., ii., 35.)

we did by common consent agree to keep the same brought by Mr Todd, till the other may come, and Mr Tardiveau would do better to deceive not others as he is deceived himself." The narrative continues: "Afterward the same Mr Langlois having shown the above said proofs against John Dodge who was present, the said Dodge was so much angry that in the presence of the Lieutenant Makidoul [Ensign McDowell] with several others in the yard he did cast himself upon the said Mr Langlois and putting his fingers in his eyes and hair he would have made him blind, if the officer had not cried against him."<sup>1</sup>

Harmar did not care to become mixed up in the local quarrel, which he probably regarded as beneath his notice, and gave his support to the government which had been established, so far as to tell the inhabitants to obey their magistrates.<sup>2</sup> Dodge, however, felt that the victory belonged to him, and after the departure of the troops assembled his friends in his fort and "fired four times each of his great canons, beating the drums etc."

Harmar brought discouraging news to the American settlers, who had received land grants from the deputy county lieutenants and courts. They were informed that such titles had no legal value, since Congress had forbidden settlements on the north side of the Ohio.<sup>3</sup> This affected the villages of Bellefontaine and Grand Ruisseau. In this condition Tardiveau saw his opportunity. He agreed with the settlers to represent their case before Congress and obtain for each of them a concession of land, in consideration of one tenth of all land thus granted. The agreement was signed by one hundred and thirty Americans. He also represented to the French that their sufferings merited payment in land and offered to obtain for each of them a grant of five hundred acres on the same terms. The French had begun to learn the American habit of speculating in land, at least they thought they saw their opportunity to imitate that example, and most of them took advantage of the offer. In all fifty-three signed the contract at Kaskaskia, as did also the most representative citizens of Cahokia. To Pierre Langlois this act seemed to be a surrender to the enemy and he realized that the French would never reap the benefit, as in fact they did not, for the majority were too indolent to cultivate the ground they already possessed. He therefore wrote a letter to Congress saying that the French had been deceived and were not in need of that form of relief.<sup>1</sup>

For the next year Tardiveau deluged Congress with petitions. They were long wordy affairs full of glittering generalities and flowery phrases. He had been given copies of all the previous petitions and other important papers, and out of these he wove a story to soften the hearts of the congressional delegates; but he was careful not to mention names or particular events of the last few years, for his constituents were of all the parties which had divided Illinois politics, and he wished to obtain lands for all. He painted the French as living in Arcadian simplicity, guided only by the dictates of conscience and innocently bowing to the hardships thrust upon them, but through all their troubles retaining an unbounded faith in the goodness of Congress and a faithfulness to the American cause. The Americans he pictured as making settlements with all faith in the power of the courts to grant land, and as being greatly surprised at the illegality of the titles thus obtained. He allowed himself to speak against Clark and his officers who, on account of the recent attack on the Indians and the garrisoning of Vincennes, were in little favor.<sup>2</sup> He found that George Morgan and his associates were attempting to obtain a grant of land for a colony in the same region and protected the interests of his constituents from them.<sup>3</sup>

Tardiveau was successful in arousing an interest in the French and gaining for them grants of land. Between the years 1788 and 1791 three laws were passed, either by the Continental Congress or the Congress of the United States, by which four hundred acres were given to every head of a family living in the villages in the year 1783, and a hundred acres to those enlisted in the militia in 1790; to satisfy the Americans they were granted titles to lands which had been taken up under concessions of a supposed authority and which had been improved.<sup>1</sup> The history of these land grants belongs to a later era; for twenty years were to pass before the many difficulties arising out of them were settled. Sufficient for our purpose is the fact that very few of the petitioners or their families were benefited by the concessions, for, long before the claims were settled, the rights of the original grantees were purchased by American land speculators. That story is but a continuation of the present one, the supplanting of the French by the more virile Anglo-Saxons.<sup>2</sup>

While Tardiveau was thus representing the misfortunes of the Illinois to Congress, the Court which had been founded with such hopes had, after a short period of innocuous existence, passed away.<sup>3</sup> The French of Kaskaskia were not experienced enough to inaugurate a new movement after the events of the past years. Had they been left to themselves they might have succeeded as well as the Cahokians with self government; but their spirit had been broken, and their natural leaders had taken refuge on the Spanish shore. Influenced by the example of the Americans, the French themselves gave no obedience to the court which they had established. In 1789 John Edgar summed up the character of the people of Kaskaskia in these words: "It is in vain to expect an obedience to any Regulations, however salutary in a place where every one thinks himself master, & where there is not the least degree of subordination. You know better than I, the dispositions of a people who have ever been subject to a military power, & are unacquainted with the blessings of a free government by the voice of their equals. To the commands of a Superior there are no people readier to obey; but without a superior there are none more difficult to be governed."<sup>1</sup>

The end of the court was without doubt hastened by the charge of illegality of its decisions made by the Kentuckians, who refused to recognize any civil organization in Illinois, saying that under the act of Congress, neither the people nor the commanding officer was authorized to appoint magistrates.<sup>2</sup> This reference is to the "Ordinance of 1787", which created a government for the Northwest and under which ordinance Arthur St. Clair was appointed governor in 1788; but, since the effects of this act were not extended to the Illinois till the spring of 1790, the people were without other authority than that which resided in themselves and were for the moment weakened by the ordinance itself, since it annulled all other jurisdiction than that which might be established in accordance with its decrees.

The history of the "Ordinance of 1787" does not fall, however, within the limits of this Introduction; but in one point it was to affect the Illinois seriously and immediately. It prohibited slavery in the Northwest. As soon as this was learned, the French supposed that the slaves which they had always owned would be set at liberty. This fear was used by the Spaniards to draw the inhabitants of American Illinois to their territory as settlers. In 1788 George Morgan, who was, as we have seen, well known in the lands on the Mississippi, was attempting to make a settlement at New Madrid. He had been disappointed in obtaining a grant of land for a settlement on the American side and so accepted the offer of the Spanish government for a large tract on the western bank.<sup>3</sup> He advertised extensively the advantages of the colony, where he had been accorded religious toleration and the free navigation of the Mississippi. One of the arguments he used was the action of Congress in making the land of the Northwest free soil. He attracted many French and Americans by this means in spite of the efforts of Tardiveau and Major Hamtranck, commanding at Post Vincennes, who tried to stop the emigration by assuring the French that Congress had no intention of freeing the slaves already owned in the territory, an interpretation of the ordinance which St. Clair later confirmed.<sup>1</sup>

Another cause of the emigration at this time was the danger to life and property from the Indians. Several tribes of the Northwest were on the warpath and had ceased to spare the villages, as they had previously been inclined to do, when the attachment of the French to the Americans was uncertain. The Miami, the Wabash, the Kickapoos, and the Pottawattamies were all accounted enemies and had made attacks on the unprotected settlements.<sup>2</sup> The villages in the Illinois suffered most, however, from the Piankeshaws of the Spanish bank, who were incited by the Spaniards to burn and murder until the inhabitants should be forced to take refuge under the Spanish government. A writer from Kaskaskia says: "It is well known that the minds of the Indians are continually poisoned by the traders on the other side, who set off America in the most despicable light possible, which has not a small influence with the Indians. Government may not encourage it, but surely if friends to us they ought to put a stop to it."<sup>3</sup> On October 8, 1789, John Dodge, who was glad enough of an opportunity to revenge himself, led a band of these Indians and some whites into the village of Kaskaskia and attempted to carry off some slaves belonging to John Edgar, the most prominent and one of the last Americans to cling to that village. Although he failed, the lives of Edgar, his wife, and John Rice Jones were for a time in the greatest danger.<sup>4</sup>

It is possible that the Spanish government did not send out such expeditions as that led by Dodge, yet the purpose accomplished by such a policy was in accordance with the instructions from the government, if we are to believe the report of Chouteau, who informed Edgar that "orders had been received from New Orleans by the Lieut. Gov<sup>r</sup> of St. Louis, for him to make every difficulty possible with the people of this side, so that they might thereby be forced to go to live on the other."<sup>1</sup> That they might be induced to change their allegiance, Governor Miro issued a proclamation offering land gratis and other attractions to all new comers.<sup>2</sup>

A further means of inducing immigration was the enticement of the French priests to the Spanish side. Father Le Dru, who had succeeded De la Valiniere at Kaskaskia, Father St. Pierre at Cahokia, and later Father Gibault were persuaded to take parishes in the Spanish territory. The cause mentioned was not the only one which affected the priests; for they found the French of the American Bottom very indifferent about religion and both unable and unwilling to pay tithes, thus making it impossible for the priests to live among them.<sup>3</sup>

The result of the hardships which the French had endured during these years and the long deferred fulfilment of their dreams of peace and independence was a striking decrease in the population of Kaskaskia. We have seen that in 1778, when George Rogers Clark occupied the village, there were about five hundred white inhabitants.<sup>4</sup> In 1783 there were 194 heads of families. As thirty-nine of these were newly arrived Americans, the figures apparently prove that the French population had remained about stationary.<sup>5</sup> By the census of 1787, there were 191 male inhabitants in the village.<sup>6</sup> Counting 150 women and female children, which is probably too high an estimate for a frontier community, the population was about 341, which would mean a decided decrease. The period of the greatest emigration occurred between the years 1787 and 1790, when anarchy reached its climax in Kaskaskia, and the Spaniards were holding out the greatest inducements to settlers on the western bank of the river. There has been preserved a list of the male inhabitants in Kaskaskia for the year 1790, in which the heads of families are enumerated. The number is 44.<sup>1</sup> This is a decrease of over 77 per cent in the French population of the village since 1783. This list is interesting on account of the names which are missing. Almost all the men who had been leaders of the French people throughout the period of the county of Illinois were no longer residents of Kaskaskia. We look in vain for the names of Cerré, Vitale, J. Bte., and Antoine Bauvais, Corset, Lasource, the elder Charlevilles, Morin, De Monbreun, Langlois, Levasseur, Lafont, Carbonneaux. They have crossed the river to seek peace and safety under the flag of Spain.

The picture of the village of Kaskaskia as described by its people in these last days in a petition to Major Hamtramck is one of utter misery and despair. They wrote: "Our horses, horned cattle & corn are stolen & destroyed without the power of making any effective resistance: Our houses are in ruins & decay; our lands are uncultivated; debtors absconded and absconding, our little commons destroyed. We are apprehensive of a dearth of corn and our best prospects are misery and distress, or what is more probable an untimely death by the hands of the savages.

"We are well convinced that all these misfortunes have befallen us for want of some Superior or Commanding authority; for ever since the cession of this territory to Congress we have been neglected as an abandoned people, to encounter all the difficulties that are always attendant upon anarchy and confusion. neither did we know from authority until latterly, to what power we were subject. The greater part of our citizens have left the country on this account to reside in the Spanish dominions; others are now following, and we are fearful, nay certain, that without your assistance, the small remainder will be obliged to follow their example."<sup>2</sup>

to send twenty soldiers with an officer to maintain order and to give them authority to establish a civil government. The petition was accompanied by a letter from John Edgar, who promised to furnish barracks and supplies for the soldiers at the very lowest price until the governor could make other arrangements.<sup>1</sup> This Hamtramck had no authority to do, nor could he afford to send the men; but he forwarded the petition, and so far exceeded his powers as to authorize the formation of courts of justice. These were never established, since justices without troops would have no means of enforcing the law.

The trials of the last year broke the courage of John Edgar, who had realized the possible greatness of the territory, and had used his influence to promote peace and to bring a government to the disordered and disheartened village. In November, 1789, he wrote: "The Spring it is possible I can stand my ground, surrounded as we are by Savage enemies. I have waited five years in hopes of a Government; I shall wait until March, as I may be able to withstand them in the winter season, but if no succour nor government should then arrive, I shall be compelled to abandon the country, & I shall go to live at St. Louis. Inclination, interest & love for the country prompt me to reside here, but when in so doing it is ten to one but both my life & property will fall a sacrifice, you nor any impartial mind can blame me for the part I shall take."<sup>2</sup> Edgar was not compelled to abandon the country of his adoption, for in the month designated Governor St. Clair arrived in the village of Kaskaskia.

The history of the village of Kaskaskia at which the county government had been established is the story of the prolonged suffering of the French population. Tyranny followed upon tyranny. After the Virginia troops had stripped the people, came John Dodge with his policy of terrorism, and when he had been overthrown and the French people had seized the power, their hands were too feeble to maintain order at home, and their village became the prey of the savages and Spaniards. From this picture, it is a pleasure to turn to the village of Cahokia at the extreme north of the American Bottom. Here the troubles were somewhat similar in kind as those at Kaskaskia, but never so virulent and the court of the district of Cahokia was able to establish itself and its authority so securely that even the abandonment by Virginia and the United States could not shake it. The letter from the state's attorney, Joseph Labuxiere, printed in this volume draws the contrast between the conditions existing in the two villages in the following words: "The misunderstanding of the magistrates of Kaskaskia and the extreme disorder of the business of the individuals, occasioned by some persons greedy for money, have compelled me to withdraw with my family to Cahokia, where I have found the inhabitants filled with the unity of peace and fidelity to the states, and a court which the justices are careful to administer with equity to those who ask its help."<sup>1</sup>

Another fact gives striking proof of the condition described by Labuxiere. At the beginning of the period the population of Cahokia numbered about 300 inhabitants.<sup>2</sup> In the year 1787 a careful census was made and there were 240 male inhabitants, which would make the total population over 400, and in 1790 Cahokia was capable of supporting three companies of militia while Kaskaskia had but one.<sup>3</sup> Thus while Kaskaskia was decreasing, Cahokia was growing both in size and in importance, and becoming the "metropolis" of the American Bottom.

As far as can be learned François Trottier was the commandant of the militia throughout this period and it is due largely to his efficient administration of the police that the village prospered.<sup>4</sup> The justices were elected annually by the assembly of the people until the passage of the Ordinance of 1787, when, in anticipation of a new government, regular elections ceased and the same justices continued in office. In August, 1788, there was an election of three magistrates to fill vacancies made by resignation. It was the last election held in the county of Illinois. The justices held their sessions with great regularity and their administration was admirable.

The relation of Cahokia to the county government was never very close. In fact the people of that village did not appear to have any very great respect for the Kaskaskians; for in their petition to Congress in 1786 they begged that body not to submit them to the jurisdiction of the southern village, because they knew "the incapacity, spite, and partiality of those who would exercise it."<sup>1</sup> The high sounding title of deputy county lieutenant meant little more than head of Kaskaskia. This at least was the feeling of the Cahokians, and the only hint that such was not the actual condition is the fact that Timothe de Monbreun made several journeys to Cahokia in order to negotiate with the Spaniards and Indans in the interest of the whole territory.<sup>2</sup> That he or any of the other deputies of John Todd really had the power to interfere in the affairs at Cahokia is not apparent from the records, and, in the absence of proof and in view of the actual powers exercised by the court of the village, it seems best to regard the county government as more formal than actual.

We have seen that the Kaskaskians complained of the establishment of the Michillimackinac company at Cahokia. From the year 1783 many British merchants found their way to the Illinois and established stores in the village. Among the names which occur are J. B. Perrault, representing Marchisseaux of Montreal, James Grant, Meyers, Tabeau, Guillon, William Arundel, John Askins, and others.<sup>3</sup> These merchants practically monopolized the fur trade of Illinois; but the Cahokians, finding that they interfered with the Indian trade as well, were strong enough to make regulations to protect their own interests and gave a limited monopoly of that trade to one of the citizens of the village and prohibited all sale of liquor to the savages by others.<sup>1</sup> When the Indian outrages reached their climax in the year 1789 and Kaskaskians were begging the military officer at Vincennes to send troops for their defense, the court of Cahokia still further regulated intercourse with the Indians and forbade all sale of liquor by any one.<sup>2</sup>

Exactly how the Cahokians were affected by the intrigues of the Spaniards in the later years, it is impossible to say. At the end of the record of the sessions will be found an unexplained punishment of a Frenchman from St. Louis who was evidently attempting to undermine the power of the court; but once again that body was equal to maintaining its authority and, from the complaint of the prisoner, it would appear that the support of the villagers was given to the government.<sup>3</sup>

Cahokia was not disturbed by the Americans in the same way as her sister village, for the American troops did not remain in the village after 1780 and very few individuals took up their residence there. Aside from the British merchants only four non-French names appear in the later years as actual citizens, Thomas Brady, Philippe Engel, Isaac Levy, and William Arundel, and of these the first three seem to have become completely gallicized and to have married French women. The American settlers who came in closest contact with the Cahokians resided at Grand Ruisseau, which fell within the district of the village. In 1786 they were permitted by the magistrates, as we have seen, to appoint a captain of militia, but they remained subject to the immediate jurisdiction of the court except in such cases as might be decided by arbitrators.<sup>4</sup>

Cahokia, however, was not to escape wholly without trouble from these neighbors. After the failure of the Americans in the spring of 1787 to capture control of the court of Kaskaskia the settlers of Bellefontaine and Grand Ruisseau determined to establish a rival and independent court, for which purpose they held an election and chose magistrates. If the movement had been confined to the first named village, which was in the district of Kaskaskia, the Cahokia government might not have made any opposition; but the inclusion of the village of Grand Ruisseau was an affront to the one French court which had proved its right to exist. Fortunately for the Cahokians, the leaders of the movement wished to supplant Robert Watts, their appointee, in his office of commandant. This aroused Watts to immediate action, particularly as his rival was James Piggott, a man who represented the more restless and impatient element among the Americans.<sup>1</sup>

Watts came to Cahokia and addressed the court in Ciceronian periods, pointing out the danger which threatened the law and order of the district by this innovation or revolution. The danger was not exaggerated. The court at Cahokia represented the only stable power in the Illinois at the time, and with a rival court of Americans at Grand Ruisseau and Bellefontaine, there would inevitably have followed disorders which might have taken on the character of a civil war between the two peoples. Certainly the two courts would not have acted together for the suppression of lawlessness. The action of the court of Cahokia was prompt and energetic. It prohibited the holding of any independent assemblies of the people or sessions of the court, and condemned the leaders of the movement to be put in irons for twenty-four hours and, in case they disobeyed the order of the court, they were to be driven from the territory. The magistrates of Cahokia were not weak. Their decrees were executed. In striking contrast to the timidity and inefficiency of the court of Kaskaskia is the action recorded by the hussier under that decree against the Americans: "The present decree has been executed the same day."<sup>2</sup>

This revolution occurred in August or early in September. The Cahokia justices now felt the need of taking some steps to satisfy the demands of the Americans. Those at Bellefontaine belonged by right to the Kaskaskia jurisdiction, but to expect from the Kaskaskia French the maintenance of law and order was hopeless. Therefore, when all the Americans of the region petitioned for admittance to the district of Cahokia and the right of electing a justice of the peace at each of the two chief settlements, the petition was granted at the October session of the court, and the election of a justice and a militia officer at Bellefontaine and of a justice at Grand Ruisseau was confirmed on November 2d.<sup>1</sup> Thus around Cahokia there centered all the forces which made for peace and order, and even the American settlers, who had assisted in the overthrow of the court of Kaskaskia, were able to escape the anarchy which their presence had produced only by submitting to the Frenchmen of the northern village.

As may be seen in the following pages, the court at Cahokia continued to maintain order in its district until other and more legal regulations were made. During the last years the court was constantly expecting the arrival of the governor, who had been appointed in 1788 under the law creating the Territory Northwest of the Ohio River; but Governor St. Clair was unable to reach the Illinois until two years after his appointment. Finally after long delay, on March 5, 1790, he actually arrived in Kaskaskia. This was the limit of time John Edgar had fixed to which he would wait for the inauguration of a government at that village. The Cahokia court held its usual meeting in the same month, and again on the first of April the court heard suits brought before it and adjourned to the first of May. Here the record of the sessions of the Court of the District of Cahokia of the county of Illinois ends, for on the 27th of April the county of St. Clair was instituted and two days later the appointment of the judges of the new courts was announced.

The history of these new courts is of a later date than the limit of the present Introduction, but the next period in the history of Illinois is a continuation of that which we have already reviewed. The French were not able to struggle against the Americans, who were now placed in the ruling positions, and a new exodus of the population began. To follow the destinies of the more energetic families named in these pages, it is necessary to cross the river. The descendants of J. Bte. Barbau, of the Bauvais, the Sauciers and the Trottiers are to be sought not in the territory or state of Illinois, but in that territory which for a few years remained under the dominion of Spain, where the French took refuge. The census of several old French towns of the western banks of the Mississippi reveals the presence of many families once inhabiting the American Bottom. The French have not figured prominently in the later history of Illinois, but the continuation of their civilization is found in the sister state of Missouri, where they still form an important element in the population; or else in the far West, where many descendants of the sons of Kaskaskia and Cahokia fled before the advance of the American settlers and followed the life for which they had been trained, that of trader, pioneer, and trapper.

In the foregoing history of the "County of Illinois" I have based the narrative upon the source material that has been preserved from that time, some account of which should be given, since several of the collections studied have been unknown to previous historians of the period and none have been used so extensively before.

1. Kaskaskia Records:<sup>1</sup> These were found by myself in the office of the circuit clerk of Randolph county at Chester, Illinois, in the late summer of 1905. They consist of 2804 eighteenth century documents of all sizes, ranging from the scrap of paper to a volume of 444 pages, and of all kinds of legal instruments, ordinances, and letters. The number issuing from the county of Illinois is 506. I have classified them according to character, i. e., certificates, land grants, political papers, etc. They are cited as follows:

Kas. Rec., Pol. Papers, etc. This collection belongs to the county of St. Clair and is kept in the fireproof office of the circuit clerk. Temporarily it is loaned to the library of the University of Illinois for my use. One document, which I failed to see at the time of the discovery, is still in Chester. Since it is of great value and no report has yet been made upon it, I give a description of it here. It is a court record of 256 pages. Pages 1-57 contain the records of the sessions of the court of judicature founded by Colonel Wilkins in 1768 and of the judgments of the military commandants, acting as judges after the abolition of the court, up to January 30, 1773. Pages 57-90 were used to record deeds, etc., from May 9, 1776, to June 23, 1778. The rest of the book contains the registrations for the next two years, made by the clerks after the occupation of the country by Clark. Several of the pages are missing.

2. Cahokia Records:<sup>1</sup> These belong to the county of St. Clair, Illinois, and are kept in a fireproof museum in the courthouse at Belleville. The most important of these documents are printed in this volume and need no further description. Besides those printed, there are a number of marriage contracts and other instruments in Belleville; and 170 documents, which were formerly in the county treasurer's office, are now in the library of the Chicago Historical Society.<sup>2</sup> The proper citation is Cak. Rec. in Chicago or in Belleville, Ill.

3. Menard Collection: This consists of the correspondence and letter-books of Pierre Menard, who settled in Kaskaskia in 1790. The majority of the letters date from the latter part of Menard's life; but in the collection are four large bundles of letters and documents which belonged to Barthélemi Tardiveau, agent of the Illinois people in 1787 and 1788. Two of these bundles are composed of copies of records from the Kaskaskia record-book and some original manuscripts, which he used for his information in drawing up his petitions to Congress. There are in all sixty-one selected documents emanating generally from the French inhabitants, which makes this collection one of the most valuable for the history of the county of Illinois. The majority of these documents were copied by the clerk of the court in the spring of 1781, at the time the people of Kaskaskia commissioned Prevost and McCarty to represent them at the capitol of Virginia.<sup>1</sup> They are all properly authenticated by Richard Winston, deputy county lieutenant.

4. Draper Manuscripts:<sup>2</sup> These are so well known that a description of them is unnecessary. They were collected by Lyman C. Draper during his long and useful life, which he devoted to the collection of material for the study of western history, and they form the most valuable part of the Wisconsin Historical Society's collection of manuscripts. For my purposes the George Rogers Clark Manuscripts, contained in sixty-five volumes, have been of the most use. They are cited as Dr. MSS. 52J50, the first number being the volume, the second the page and the letter (J) the library symbol for the Clark MSS. I went through these volumes and had copies made of all the manuscripts which would be of value to me. Most of the copies were from original documents, but, since on the copies it was not indicated whether they were from original manuscripts or copies, I have not dared trust to my memory to indicate this distinction in the footnotes. I have made some use of other collections in the Draper Manuscripts, particularly the Harmar MSS. These are copies made by Mr. Draper.

5. Haldimand Collection: Frederick Haldimand was appointed governor of Canada in September, 1777, and held this position until 1784. During this time his correspondence was large and this he carefully preserved. It is now in the British Museum and the Public Record Office in London. The collection contains the letters, reports made to him, and copies of important papers which were enclosed in these. The Canadian Archives has had transcripts of this collection made and has calendared it in its Reports. The copies I have used were made from the Canadian transcripts. These are cited as Can. Archives, B., etc. Many of these have been printed in the Michigan Pioneer and Historical Collections and the Illinois Historical Collections, Vol. I.

6. Papers of Old Congress:<sup>1</sup> Many petitions with enclosures were sent by the people of Illinois to Congress. These have recently been transferred to the library of Congress.

7. Collection of Virginia State Library: There is a quantity of unused manuscripts in Richmond, to which I have had partial access; but, since they have not been catalogued, there are many important documents which I have not seen.

8. Miscellanies: I have used letters and documents in the possession of other institutions and several private individuals, to which references are made in the proper places.

It is to be regretted that I have not seen several important collections, which might have thrown light on the subject. They are the following: Private library of C. M. Burton of Detroit, Michigan; collection of documents from Vincennes in Vincennes University and Indianapolis Public Library; private library of Colonel R. T. Durrett of Louisville, Kentucky; and the Bancroft Library of the University of California.

The printed sources for the history of the county of Illinois are numerous, and an effort has been made to see everything. Those used will be found listed in the bibliography at the end of this volume.

After considerable study of the problems of transcription and translation, I determined to make the former as similar to the manuscript in every particular as the printed page will permit. For this reason the superior letters and repetitions have been retained, as being very characteristic of the methods of the writers. All erasures, however, have been omitted, after a careful consideration of each case had made it certain that no information of value would be lost thereby. Insertions made by the clerk in the margin have been included in their proper places in the text.

The punctuation and paragraphing have been copied as in the original, with the exception of the periods placed at the end of each paragraph. These are not always found in the text. There were numerous cases of doubtful paragraphing, each of which has been decided in accordance with what seemed to be the intention of the clerk. In order to save space the list of judges is printed in double instead of single columns, as is the rule in the record. Occasionally I have inserted a word in brackets which had been omitted by accident or torn out. Brackets throughout the volume indicate insertions by the editor, the word or words being in roman letters, where an evident omission or mistake by the original writer; in italics, when merely an explanation. Assurance of the correctness of the transcription in cases of bizarre spelling, etc., has been indicated by the conventional sic, which has been used only when the mistake appeared very extraordinary or might be thought an oversight in the proof-reading. The writers of these records, like many of their contemporaries, preferred the phonetic to the historic spelling. The most common mistakes are made in the vowel before the nasals and in the endings é and er, these latter being spelled in any way that will produce the sound. Frequently the pronunciation of an unrecognized word will lead to its identification. To the duplication and transposing of letters are due such forms as deffendeur, effest, deffucnt. In transcribing I have followed this principle, that, when there was a legitimate choice between an apparent bizarre spelling and a possibly correct one, preference should be given to the latter. I feel quite confident that the number of mistakes in the transcription is very small, for, in the preparation of the manuscript and in proof-reading, Mrs. Alvord has collated it twice with the originals and I have made five such comparisons. This is true of all the transcriptions except those of the Cahokia records in Chicago, for which I have had to trust to my original copies.

The translation of the records has offered many difficulties, due largely to the haste with which the clerk was obliged to write the testimony as he heard it. The sentences are frequently involved, abbreviated, or not finished. The French is on the whole good, by no means a patois,<sup>1</sup> and the legal phraseology excellent, particularly that of Joseph Labuxiere, who was a well-trained notary. In making the translation I have had in mind the needs of the many readers who do not understand the original language. The first requisite in such a work has seemed to be a faithful and clear interpretation, which should follow closely the original rather than the production of a piece of finished English. Since the translation may be used by the reader of French as a running commentary, it has obviated the need of numerous footnotes to the text. All proper names have been spelled in the translation in accordance with the following principle: in all cases where I have found a signature, that spelling has been adopted; in all other cases, the modern form as found in Canada has been used, provided identification was possible.

<sup>1</sup> I would not undertake to pronounce upon the character of the written French without the support of other authority. A French traveler to the village of Vincennes in the eighteenth century was surprised to find that the language of the people was not a patois as he had been led to expect (Volney, View of the United States, 373; see also Flagg, Far West, in Thwaites, Western Travels, xxxvii, 55.) Mr. Benjamin Sulte, who has read the proof of this book, writes that the French is next to the best and the legal phraseology excellent. My colleague, Professor Thomas E. Oliver of the department of modern languages, who has given me great assistance in the translation, laid down the principle for guidance in the interpretation of difficult passages that aside from misspelling and abbreviated sentences, the writers follow the correct usage. By the application of this principle many difficult problems of translation have been solved.

<sup>3</sup> Richard McCarty came from the colony of Connecticut. He was living in Cahokia before 1776, and built a mill there on some land he had preempted. See pp. 465, 529. At the coming of Clark, he joined the Illinois battalion and took part in the Vincennes expedition. In the fall of 1779 he was appointed commandant of Fort Bowman at Cahokia and made himself very unpopular with the inhabitants by his tyranny. Later he joined the French party and was killed in the spring of 1781 while carrying a petition from the inhabitants to the governor of Virginia. See Introduction, pp. lxxiii., xcvi., ciii.; also post, pp. 543, 549.

He remained in command of the village till the Vincennes expedition and seems to have won the hearts of the French. After his return from Vincennes he remained in Cahokia for a short time. He established the first popular court of justice in the Illinois and was himself elected to the position of president of the same. For further particulars see Introduction, p. xlvii. <sup>2</sup> For the convenience of repeated reference, all biographical notes on those who were living in Cahokia in the year 1787 will be found with the census of that year, p. 624. Notes on others will appear in their proper place and may be found by consulting the index.

The full name of Turanjeau was Pierre Godin called Turanjeau. He died in 1779.

The parents of Charles Gratiot were French, but on account of their Huguenot faith were dwelling in Switzerland, when their son Charles was born in the year 1753. Charles Gratiot received a mercantile education, and before he reached his majority went to Canada to engage in the fur trade. In 1777 he was in Cahokia and in August of the next year opened a store in partnership with some British merchants from Canada, although in the month before Illinois had submitted to the Virginians. From letters of his it appears that he maintained relations with his uncle in Canada and probably with his partners as long as he remained in Cahokia. He gave financial assistance to Clark, as did all the other French inhabitants. Gratiot was elected a justice of the court established by Clark and later of the court at Cahokia under the county of Illinois. Finding the conditions on the American bank too stormy for his business interests, he moved to St. Louis in 1781, where he became wealthy and prominent. His sons held many important positions in public life. Charles Gratiot was a cultivated man, traveled extensively both in this country and Europe and was favorably known both for his business capacity and social qualities. *Wisconsin Hist. Soc. lib.: "The year 1778, the 20th day of December at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, in virtue of the order of Don Fernando de Leyba, lieutenant governor of the Illinois, which was given me this day, I, Bernard Gibbins, physician at this post, betook myself into the house of the woman Laurant, inhabitant of this post, in order to examine her negro. I found the said negro in bed, and after a careful examination, I perceived that the sickness, by which he was attacked, proceeded from a violent poison. His body was in convulsions and his limbs rigid on account of the corrosive poison, which had insinuated itself into all parts of his body. The negro is in danger of death and it will be only the result of chance, if he recovers; in which case the use of his limbs may be lost for the rest of his days. In faith of which I give the present report, which I affirm to be true, to you, M. Lieutenant-Governor. At St. Louis the said day, the 20th of December, 1778. B. Gibbins."

ACT CREATING THE COUNTY OF ILLINOIS<sup>1</sup>.

AN ACT for establishing the County of Illinois, and for the more effectual protection and defense thereof.

WHEREAS by a successful expedition carried on by the Virginia militia, on the western side of the Ohio river, several of the British posts within the territory of this commonwealth, in the country adjacent to the river Mississippi, have been reduced, and the inhabitants have acknowledged themselves citizens thereof, and taken the oath of fidelity to the same, and the good faith and safety of the commonwealth require that the said citizens should be supported and protected by speedy and effectual reinforcements, which will be the best means of preventing the inroads and depredations of the Indians upon the inhabitants to the westward of the Allegheny mountains; and whereas, from their remote situation, it may at this time be difficult, if not impracticable, to govern them by the present laws of this commonwealth, until proper information, by intercourse with their fellow citizens, on the east side of the Ohio, shall have familiarised them to the same, and it is therefore expedient that some temporary form of government, adapted to their circumstances, should in the meantime be established:

Be it enacted by the General Assembly, That all the citizens of this commonwealth who are already settled, or shall hereafter settle, on the western side of the Ohio aforesaid, shall be included <sup>1</sup> Hening, Statutes at Large (Virginia), ix., 552. A committee was instructed by the Virginia assembly on November 19, 1778, to prepare a bill for the formation of the county. This was presented to the assembly November 30, 1778, and passed in its final amended form on December 9th. It was signed by the speaker of the senate on the 17th and subsequently, if at all, by the speaker of the house of delegates. On the 12th of December Governor Patrick Henry issued the instructions in accordance with the provisions of the act.—Jour. H. of Del. (Va.), Oct. Sess., 1778, p. 106; Jour. of Senate (Va.), Oct. Sess., 1778, p. 52; Rowland, George Mason, i., 307; Boggess, Immigration into Illinois, 1778-1830 (a thesis in manuscript). Dr. Boggess was the first to work out the history of the act, and I am greatly indebted to him for the loan of the thesis, from which this note is taken. No writer had previously determined the exact date of the passage of the act and all but one (Rowland, George Mason) have been indefinite or incorrect in giving it.—Winsor, Westward Movement, 122; Poole, in Winsor, Nar. and Crit. Hist., vi., 720; Thwaites, How George Rogers Clark Won the Northwest, 64; Boyd, in Amer. Hist. Rev. iv., 623; Roosevelt, Winning of the West, ii., 168; and many others.

in a distinct county, which shall be called Illinois county; and that the governour of this commonwealth, with the advice of the council, may appoint a county lieutenant or commandant in chief in that county, during pleasure, who shall appoint and commission so many deputy commandants, militia officers, and commissaries, as he shall think proper in the different districts, during pleasure, all of whom, before they enter into office, shall take the oath of fidelity to this commonwealth and the oath of office, according to their own religion, which the inhabitants shall fully, and to all intents and purposes enjoy, together with all their civil rights and property. And all civil officers to which the said inhabitants have been accustomed, necessary for the preservation of peace and the administration of justice, shall be chosen by a majority of the citizens in their respective districts, to be convened for that purpose by the county lieutenant or commandant, or his deputy, and shall be commissioned by the said county lieutenant or commandant in chief, and be paid for their services in the same manner as such expenses have been heretofore borne, levied, and paid in that county; which said civil officers, after taking the oaths as before prescribed, shall exercise their several jurisdictions, and conduct themselves agreeable to the laws which the present settlers are now accustomed to. And on any criminal prosecution, where the offender shall be adjudged guilty, it shall and may be lawful for the county lieutenant or commandant in chief to pardon his or her offense, except in cases of murder and treason; and in such cases, he may respite execution from time to time, until the sense of the governour in the first instance, and of the general assembly in the case of treason, is obtained. But where any officers, directed to be appointed by this act, are such as the inhabitants have been unused to, it shall and may be lawful for the governour, with the advice of the council, to draw a warrant or warrants on the treasury of this commonwealth for the payment of the salaries of such officers, so as the sum or sums drawn for do not exceed the sum of five hundred pounds, anything herein to the contrary notwithstanding.

And for the protection and defence of the said county and its inhabitants, Be it enacted. That it shall and may be lawful for the governour, with the advice of the council, forthwith to order, raise, and levy, either by voluntary enlistments, or detachments from the militia, five hundred men, with proper officers, to march immediately into the said county of Illinois, to garrison such forts or stations already taken, or which it may be proper to take there or elsewhere, for protecting the said county, and for keeping up our communication with them, and also with the Spanish settlements, as he, with the advice aforesaid, shall direct. And the said governour, with the advice of the council, shall from time to time, until further provision shall be made for the same by the general assembly, continue to relieve the said volunteers, or militia, by other enlistments or detachments, as herein before directed, and to issue warrants on the treasurer of this commonwealth for all charges and expenses accruing thereon, which the said treasurer is hereby required to pay accordingly.

And be it farther enacted, That it shall and may be lawful for the governour, with the advice of the council, to take such measures as they shall judge most expedient or the necessity of the case requires, for supplying the said inhabitants as well as our friendly Indians in those parts, with goods and other necessities, either by opening a communication and trade with New Orleans, or otherwise, and to appoint proper persons for managing and conducting the same on behalf of this commonwealth.

Provided, That any of the said inhabitants may likewise carry on such trade, on their own accounts, notwithstanding.

This act shall continue and be in force, from and after the passing of the same, for and during the term of twelve months, and from thence to the end of the next session of assembly, and no longer.

The evidence of these records is very interesting, for they explain the two warrants for execution of these two negroes to be found in John Todd's Record-Book in Chicago Hist. Soc.'s Publications, iv., 302 and 303. According to the Record-Book, Manuel was condemned to be burned to death, a punishment against negroes which was permitted the county courts of Virginia.—Chitwood, Justice in Colonial Virginia, in J. H. U. Studies, Series xxiii., No. 7, p. 101. Although Todd issued the warrant, he repented the next day, crossed the copy of the warrant out and issued a new one, in which the penalty was hanging.—Kas. Rec. Mason in his Chapters from Illinois History, 264, suggested without sufficient authority that the crime for which the negroes were punished was voodooism, and he is followed by Roosevelt in his Winning of the West, ii., 175, where he compares the prosecution of the negroes in Catholic

Catherine, a negress belonging to Bte. Saucier, after having been summoned and examined, said that last year her husband had asked of his master permission to walk to Kaskaskia and when Manuel and Moreau, negroes belonging to MM. LeComte and Beaulieu, knew that he was going, they brought him a pint of tafia<sup>2</sup> saying that it was for his journey; and that he had no sooner drunk of that liquor than he felt sick and that he is still sick up to the present; and that the day on which the said negroes were arrested on the accusation of having poisoned several persons, these same negroes confessed to her that they had poisoned her husband; she declares that the named<sup>3</sup> Moreau told her that Manuel, when he gave him the medicine, wished to make her husband die suddenly, but that he had answered that it was better to make him die slowly; and she said that since that time her husband has been pining. The said negress declares also that Moreau had said to her that Manuel positively wished to poison M. Martin and his wife and that the negress of the said gentleman was in this plot; and that another negro named Guanga belonging to the said M. Martin, having had news of this, had said to them that if they didn't take away the poison, which they had Illinois with that of the white witches of Puritan New England. The denial of sufficient proof for this explanation of the warrants was made in Shea's Life of Archbishop Carroll, 190.

<sup>2</sup> Tafia was a cheap rum, which formed the staple liquor of the West. The word eau-de-vie is used throughout the record as the equivalent of liquor, without reference to any particular kind.

thrown into his master's house, he would denounce them, which caused them to dig up a poison which they had buried under the threshold of the door.

Paul, a negro belonging to Madame Lapancé, after being summoned and examined, said that he had heard all the negroes, who have already given their testimony, say that the named Manuel and Moreau had poisoned all the persons mentioned in the declaration which has already been made by them.

The named Sasa, a negro belonging to Mademoiselle Buyat, after being summoned and examined, said that he was in the cottage of M. Martin to ask for a pipefull of tobacco from his negress, named Janette, and that she had told him to go to the head of her bed and he would find some, and that when he looked he had found a horn in which there was boiling blood; and as he was surprised, he had asked the negress what it was; that the negress told him not to touch that, and that it was Manuel who had given it to her to put her master and mistress to death; and that Moreau, when he knew that, had said to her: "What! Can you keep a thing like that in your house? Do you not know that it was this horn that Manuel used to poison Monsieur and Madame Nicolle?" He declares furthermore that a negro, named Samba belonging to M. Quenel, took this horn and had shown it to Moreau and that he said that it was the same horn that Manuel had given him to put to death Monsieur and Madame Nicolle.

Fr. Saucier, Clerk.

First cross-examination of the negro called François belonging to M. Jaquet. After having been summoned and examined, he said that the negro, named Moreau, had told him in conversation that he had made the negro of M. Laurant of St. Louis, sick on account of the negress of M. Martin, named Janette, since both had some intercourse with her, and that this was the reason he had given him poison. The said negro declares, also, negre de M<sup>r</sup> Laurant a Santi malade Et quil sut bien Etre Empoisonné, il vint trouvé ledit maurau et luy dit, mon paÿs, ote moi donc le mal que tu ma fait, a quoy ledit maurau a repondu quil n'etoit plus tems, Ce nest pas a mon pouvoir de te l'oter, Celuy de Mon<sup>r</sup> laurant luy repeta encore que si il vouloit le guerir quil le payeroit Bien a quoy ledit maurace repondit quil ne le pouvoit pas. et que neanmoins celuy de m<sup>r</sup> Laurent en partant luy lessa un quatine Et un mouchoire et luy promettant que Si il ne mouroit pas quil le Satisferay plus Eplement.

a une autre interogation Le dit negre du Sieur Jaquet declare quapres que le negre du Sieur Laurant Eut Eté traversé quil mourut peu de tems appres Et quil fut reprocher au deux negre Soupsoné Empoisonner En leurs disant; Comment Voila Encore un negre mort que lon dit que vous aviés Empoisonné a quoy ledit maurau luy repondit que Si il lavoit fait il netoit pas Seul que Cetoit manuel qui Etoit le chef de la medecine et quil luy en fournissoit Lorsqu'il en avoit Besoin.

Declare encore ledit negre que maurau ayant demandé quelque faveur a la negresse de Mons<sup>r</sup> Nicol quil luy promit que Si elle le luy accorderoit quil luy Donneroit de la Medecine pour adoucir sa maitrise Comme Setant plain a luy quelle Etoit trop Mechante Et en donnat pareillement au mari de laditte negresse pour Son maitre Et qu' apres la mort de feu m<sup>r</sup> nicol et sa dame ledit maurau demanda ce qu'on luy avoit promis, La negresse particulierement ne voulut point luy accorder ce quelle avoit promis ce qui fit led<sup>t</sup> maurau L'empoisonna et quelle en mourut.

A dit encore led<sup>t</sup> negre que lorsque laditte negresse de feu sieur nicol Est tombé malade que plusieurs negres du paÿs de laditte negresse furent trouver maurau pour le Soliciter a guerir laditte negresse a quoy ledit maurau repondit quil n'etoit plus a Son pouvoir de luy oter ce quil luy avoit donner.

that as soon as the negro of M. Laurant felt sick and he surely knew that he was poisoned, he came to find the said Moreau and said to him: "My countryman, take away the sickness which you have given me," to which the said Moreau answered that, it was too late "It is not in my power to take it from you"; and that the negro of M. Laurant said again that if he would cure him he would pay him well, to which the said Moreau answered that he could not do it; but, nevertheless, the negro of M. Laurant in going away left him a basin<sup>1</sup> and a handkerchief and promised him that if he did not die he would satisfy him more fully.

At another cross-examination, the said negro of M. Jaquet declares that, shortly after the negro of M. Laurant had been sent across the river, he died; and that he had reproached the two negroes suspected of poisoning and said to them: "What! There is another negro dead, whom they say you have poisoned"; to which Moreau replied that if he had done it, he was not alone, for it was Manuel who was the medicine-chief and had furnished him poison whenever he had need of it.

The said negro declares also, that Moreau had asked some favor of M. Nicolle's negress and promised her that if she granted it to him, he would give her medicine to make her mistress gentle, as she complained to him that the latter was very bad, and he gave some likewise to the husband of the said negress for his master; and that after the death of the late M. Nicolle and his wife, Moreau demanded what had been promised to him, and the negress did not particularly wish to grant him what she had promised; and for this reason the said Moreau poisoned her and she died therefrom.

The said negro said also that when the said negress of the late M. Nicolle fell sick, several negroes of the country of the said negress went to find Moreau to beseech him to cure the said negress; to which the said Moreau answered that it was no longer in his power to take from her that which he had given her.

Cupidon, a negro belonging to Bte. Saucier, after being summoned and cross-examined, declared that, when M. and Madame ou tu voudra, a quoy le mari de lad<sup>te</sup> negresse dud<sup>t</sup> sieur nicol luy repondit nous ne tavions pas Demander de Les faire mourir nous ne voulion seulement que tu Les adoucissent un peu, maurau Demanda a la negresse de luy accorder ce quelle luy avoit promis, la negresse luy repondit quil Etoit trop Vieux, et quelle ne Le Vouloit pas. ha [sic] dit led<sup>t</sup> maurau tu me trouve trop vieux et bien tu t'en repentira Et que peu de tems apres il l'empoisonna la negresse Suivant la declaration dud<sup>t</sup> negre.

There are your master and mistress dead and you can take a walk and go where you wish;" to which the husband of the said negress of the said M. Nicolle, answered: "We did not ask you to make them die. We wished only that you make them a little gentler;" and that Moreau asked the negress to grant him what she had promised and the negress replied to him that he was too old and that she did not wish to; that the said Moreau said: "You find me too old, and well shall you repent of it"; and that shortly after he poisoned the negress according to the declaration of the said negro.

These depositions made by the negroes aforesaid were made in the presence of MM. Trottier, Touranjeau, Beaulieu, Martin, and Bte. Saucier, who have said that the depositions were made by the said negroes aforesaid, and that it was their opinion, after having heard it said by divers negroes, that this said Manuel and Moreau had done that of which they were accused, and that they should be found truly guilty. #### THE ARRAIGNMENT BY THE STATES ATTORNEY.<sup>1</sup>

I, State's Attorney of Virginia, for the District of Kaskaskia, hereunder signed, have the honor to set forth to the honorable Court of Kaskaskia that from the testimony of different negroes of Cahokia it appears that the negroes, Moreau and Manuel, are really guilty of the horrible crime of which they are accused; and that from all the declarations and testimonies it appears that the negro Moreau is more guilty than the other, since he has administered the poison which the other had given him.

From which poisons several of the good subjects of this Republic and soldiers of the garrison have died.

This is the reason why in the name of the State I think, gentlemen, that if you find the said negroes guilty, you should

As a matter of fact, he was in that country the year before Clark's expedition; for on March 17, 1777, he purchased a piece of land in Cahokia from Father

The number of pages is 348, of which 48 are blank, 43 of which are at the beginning, when the clerk used only one side of the sheet. A petition presented by Augustin Racette, plaintiff, who demands that M. Sansfaçon prove to him that he is a rascal and his wife a thief, as he has been accused and called by them [the defendant and his wife.]

Antoine Harmand<sup>2</sup> produced his defence against Augustin Racette and accused the said Racette of coming to his house to assault him.

Pierre Gatient, having made oath to answer all questions which the court should ask him, said that on coming from the field he heard Madame Racette call Madame Sansfaçon a thief; to which Madame Sansfaçon replied that she had never stolen lard from the Lacroix' house. And he further said that he heard M. Sansfaçon say that in any case if the said Madame Racette was a thief, she only took after the family.

This additional name was very common among the French in America, and sometimes the surname and sometimes the second name has prevailed in the family. The correct spelling of his surname, Harmand, is obtained from his signature.

Gabriel Constant, having made oath to answer all questions which should be put to him, said, that being at the house of Butau he had heard Racette ask Gabriel Baron, where he had heard that they were stealers of lard and chickens, to which the said Baron answered that he had heard it said at Sansfaçon's.

Antoine Lussier, having made oath to answer all questions which should be asked him as witness for the defendant, said that, while Madame Sansfaçon was at the house of Madame Racette in search of a chicken, which she claimed belonged to her, Madame Racette called her a thief and said she lived on other people's poultry. The plaintiff shows the Court by a petition that the defendant should be condemned to pay him a sum of three hundred pounds of deer-skins for the amputation of the leg of Jean Racette which he performed, as he had been summoned by the said gentleman; and the said M. Gratiot had promised to pay the surgeon on condition that the named Parisien to whom the accident had happened, reimburse him what it cost therefor. This was said in the presence of Bte. Alarie.

Bte. Alarie appeared on summons and, after having made oath, proved that he was not in Cahokia when the accident happened to Jean Racette.

The defendant offered as his defence, wherefore he should not be condemned to pay this sum of three hundred pounds, that the said Racette, although the accident happened at his house, was a total stranger to him, and that in such circumstances it was his duty to send somebody to seek a surgeon to relieve an unfortunate man without being obliged to pay the costs.

Since the Court cannot unconditionally condemn M. Charles Gratiot to pay M. Reynal the sum of three hundred pounds for the amputation of the leg of Racette, it decided that it was necessary to await the arrival of the named Parisien, to whom the accident happened.

A petition presented to the Court by Pierre Roy against Madame Courville, praying that she be forbidden to sell any land, until she has caused an inventory to be made and has recognized her son's share.

The Court authorizes the said M. Pierre Roy to hold an assembly of relatives and friends to make an inventory of the property left by the late Courville and decrees that an equal division of the property between the widow, Madame Courville, and her son be made, and that there be elected a guardian.

Where were present MM. Charles Gratiot, Michel Beaulieu, Bte. Saucier, Pierre Martin and Ant. Girardin, all five magistrates of the said Court — assembled to interrogate the Peorian about the evil speech, which he said he had heard used by another nation.<sup>1</sup>

The said Peorian said that he had heard the Chief Wolf reproach the other savages in regard to a medal<sup>2</sup> and a red belt which they had. He said that later he was at the lodge of his savages with Charloc and that a woman asked him what he had come for, since the French Big Knife<sup>3</sup> was charged with having killed one of their people. Thereupon the said savage told Charloc to go home. This latter answered that in case<sup>4</sup> he was in danger the Master of Life would save him.

The said Peorian savage said that the Chief Woif had taken Charloc and placed him in the men's camp and that there another chief named The Flee seized the gun from the hands of the said Charloc and said to him, "Weep, for my heart is red and bloody". The said Peorian said that a woman had asked him why he came to their lodge, since there was nothing good going on among them and that every day there were held councils and that nothing good was said. He said further that, when the woman had finished speaking to him, a young man started for the door and, upon seeing that, he had made his escape; and that immediately all the other savages began crying, "There is one who is escaping". On several different occasions, the Peorian said that in escaping he has had only time to take his gun and had left his blanket.

The said Charloc said that he asked the said Peorian if he wanted to come with him to see the savages, and that the Peorian answered that he was very willing. He further said that in going to see the said savages they met a man and a woman and that the man was intoxicated, and that he made him mount on the horse with him and the woman continued the route with the Peorian. The said Charloc said that on arriving he told the Peorian to unsaddle his horse and to enter the lodge with him, whereupon the Peorian answered that he did not wish to enter. This was said in the presence of the Peorian who said, "Why do you want me to enter who understand the evil talk in this lodge". The said Charloc said that when he entered the lodge, he had in his hand a bottle which the savages wished to take from him, and that he said to them, "Take it. I do not care for it". The Peorian said that they snatched it by force.

The Court adjourned until two o'clock in the afternoon the 17th of the present month.

On account of the report and testimony which have been given in Court about the evil-intentioned savages, the Court decreed that the officers of the militia shall give orders that there be made a general inspection of all houses to see if everybody has arms in condition and the necessary ammunition for defence, if occasion arises, and that orders be given to those, who have neither, to provide themselves therewith without any excuse, because, to all appearances, there are in the neighborhood of the village nations who are holding hostile talks and are very evilly disposed, according to the report of some other savages.

Colonel Montgomery shows [?] the Court that, as the other villages have furnished supplies of provisions for the troops on the credit of the States, he hopes that this village according to the capacity of the inhabitants will be willing to furnish some provisions, as the inhabitants of the other villages have.

The Court showed the Colonel that it had already been informed of the complaint brought against M. The defendant shows that he has proposed on several occasions the payment of the said note in peltries and that the plaintiff refused it, saying that the defendant had promised him wheat.

The defendant had in fact promised him wheat, yet only in case that he should not be able to obtain peltries at the maturity of the said note.

JEAN BTE. LACROIX, Plaintiff, vs. M. LEVY, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant for two cart-loads<sup>1</sup> of corn, which he bought on the account of their partnership at the auction of the goods of the late Lapierre.

The defendant states that he, in partnership with the plaintiff, bought the two loads of corn at the auction of the goods of the late Lapierre, which was held by M. Trottier.

The plaintiff and defendant sue M. Trottier that there be furnished them a certain quantity of corn, which was lacking in two cart-loads knocked down to them at the said auction.

M. Trottier reports that the plaintiff or the defendant should have had the corn, which was adjudged them at the said auction, removed and should not have left it three or four months in the granery to the discretion of the rats, and that during that time there could easily have been eaten what is lacking.

The Court found that MM. Lacroix and Levy were very negligent in not having the corn, which they bought at the said auction, carted away; and that, since they had not left it under the care of anyone and had left it for so considerable a length of time, the rats had caused all the damage of which they complain.

CHARLES DUCHARME, Plaintiff, vs. PIERRE ROY, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant for a cart-load of corn which had been knocked down to him at the auction of the goods of the late Alexis Courville and which was not delivered to him, since it could not be found.

The defendant reports that, at the time of the auction, it was said that in case the quantity of corn cried out at the said auction was not found, he, to whom it should be adjudged, would be held to pay only in case that the estimated quantity should be found there.

The Court found that the plaintiff delayed too long in having the corn carted away, and that no one is bound to furnish it to him, since he left it in the care of nobody; and furthermore that it

The plaintiff sues the defendant for a plowshare<sup>1</sup> which he owes him.

The defendant answers that he ought to give a plowshare or thirty livres in peltries to the plaintiff; and besides he was to pay the thirty livres to M. Trottier, since the plaintiff had assigned it for what he owed at the auction of the goods of the late Lapierre. This the defendant had done, but M. Trottier had said to him that there was no hurry and had accepted the assignment for that sum.<sup>2</sup>

The defendant made oath that he had agreed to pay the plaintiff ten écus<sup>3</sup> in peltries or a plowshare, and not being able to give the plowshare he is condemned to pay the ten écus in cash. The plaintiff is condemned to pay the costs.

An application made by M. Ant. Harmand, asking that an . . . The Court demanded of the said M. Harmand some writing or other proof that he was intrusted with the execution of the last will of the late Vadeboncoeur.

François Alexandre appeared and made oath in regard to what he heard said by the late Vadeboncoeur to M. Girardin. He said that some time before the decease of his father-in-law, the latter sent him to bring M. Girardin, and that in the course of their conversation the late Vadeboncoeur begged M. LOUIS LOUGAUD, Plaintiff, vs. JAMES FINNEY, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant for the payment of a horse, which he killed by running it in the Prairie du Pont,<sup>1</sup> according to the petition which he has presented in Court.

The defendant says that he took the horse by order of Colonel Montgomery in order to catch another for the need of the state.

Thomas Brady having made oath on the Holy Gospels of Almighty God to answer the question which was put to him, said that he was a witness, when M. James Finney took Louigaud's horse, and that they were together in the Prairie du Pont, but that James Finney did not run the said horse; and that after catching a mare belonging to them, he let the horse loose and that then it fought with another horse for a certain time; and that, after noticing that the horse was very sweaty, somebody told him that he ought to bleed the said horse, which he immediately did; that nevertheless it died shortly afterwards.

The Court unanimously condemned M. James Finney, for having taken the said horse without any order, to pay M. Louigaud the value of his horse.

Pierre Gagnon has been named by the Court syndic to inform himself of the affairs of the late Michel Bellau, and to administer them afterwards in a manner, which he shall believe

And he also produced an acknowledgement by M. Durand for the journey of a man, whom he furnished, to Michillimackinac, and for a copper kettle, which he lent him.

M. Sanguinette prays the Court to condemn M. Durand to pay him interest on the loan of the peltries, since the time for returning them has expired, and also for the wages of the man, whom he furnished for the journey to Michillimackinac.

The Court granted M. Sanguinette that M. Durand shall pay interest on the peltries, which he loaned him, and also on the wages of the man whom he furnished, since he has need of his property now, and that the interest shall be payable from this day.

M. Isaac Levy presented to the Court a draft drawn on M. Cerré<sup>1</sup> by John Conn for thirty piastres gourdes,<sup>2</sup> which M. Cerré refuses to pay; and this same draft was given him by Joseph Lapancé in payment for a horse, which he sold him.

Joseph Lapancé having appeared said that he had sold a horse to John Conn for the sum of thirty piastres gourdes paid by a draft drawn on M. Cerré.

The Court condemned M. John Conn to pay the note for thirty piastres gourdes, which he drew, and to pay the costs; and likewise condemned Joseph Lapancé to pay M. Levy the same sum, subject to making such arrangements between themselves as they wished.

The plaintiff offers to pay his notes; and prays that the defendant be condemned to pay him for the rifle the one hundred piastres which it cost.

The Court decided that the value of the plaintiff's rifle shall be appraised by three competent persons and that the defendant be condemned to accept the rifle at the appraised price and to deduct the amount from the notes, which are due him from the plaintiff; and to pay the costs of justice for having used the rifle, reserving the right to the plaintiff to take back his rifle if he wishes and to pay his notes.

The defendant declares it is true that he called the plaintiff a rascal; but it was only when the plaintiff was on the point of leaving him and because he could not find anyone to take his place.

The plaintiff further declares that after being called a rascal and a slave, he found it demeaning to remain in the service of the defendant and demands that his property amounting to about the sum of a hundred livres in peltries, which the defendant has retained, be given back to him and his wages paid.

<sup>1</sup> During the summer of 1782 there were many rumors of expected attacks by the British, and here by the day in May another attack on the Illinois villages was actually made on July

Alexis Brisson appeared and made oath to tell the truth and said that it is true that they called the said plaintiff a rascal; but it was only after the threat, which he made, of quitting at a time when there was great need of him.

The Court, after having heard severally the two parties, condemned the defendant to restore accurately to the plaintiff all the property belonging to him, and condemned the plaintiff to pay the costs.

M. Gabriel Cerré, a resident of the Spanish bank of the river, requests the Court on behalf of the commandant of the Spanish territory to furnish twenty-five men to join with a like number, which he will furnish, for the purpose of placing a guard at a place, which will be found most convenient, to watch and so avoid any surprise by the enemy; and which guard will be relieved every fortnight.<sup>1</sup>

The Court decided that between now and Monday next it will make arrangements for this expedition, since it is very expedient to undertake it.

Pierre Gagnon produced in Court the account of the payments, which he had made to the creditors of the late Bellau after the auction, which he caused to be held; and it was approved.

And for this purpose it was decided unanimously that each inhabitant shall keep at his house provisions necessary for himself and the soldiers, whom he shall have with him, for a fortnight, so as to be ready to start at a minute's notice, when the reconnoitring party gives news of our enemies, since all desire to go to meet the enemy rather than allow them to make the attack or even to approach too near the village, in view of the loss to the country, if they are allowed to reach it. Accordingly the whole assembly hopes that by the unanimous succour of both bank they will be able by this means to thwart the plans of their enemies.

And in order not to be embarrassed by want of boats, it was decided that all the boats in this village shall be secured and guarded until it is certain that there is no need of them.

The Court and the whole assembly have agreed that it would be expedient to ask Major Williams<sup>1</sup> to interest himself in obtaining as large a force as possible from Kaskaskia, on condition that they furnish themselves with the provisions and boats necessary to join the people of the village on the expedition, since it is for the good of the whole country; and that for this purpose he shall give them similar orders to be ready to set out as soon as news from the reconnoitring party is received.

<sup>1</sup> Proof by oath was a survival from the primitive German law, and was modified by the influence of the canon law during the Middle Ages. This method of reaching a decision was resorted to only in case of lack of sufficient proof by witnesses. The procedure was not without formalities. It was decided by agreement between the parties which of the two should

The defendant says that he had agreed to pay him either peltries or flour, but finding himself short of flour offers sixty livres in peltries to the plaintiff for his wheels.

The plaintiff says that the defendant offered peltries, but he had said that it was not peltries that the latter owed, but flour.

M. Ant. Harmand produced the person of George Hait as witness, who, after making oath, said that he was present when MM. Harmand and Trottier made a bargain for a pair of wheels and that M. Harmand told the plaintiff that he had no flour to give before the harvest, but that after the harvest he would give him flour or sixty livres in peltries.

The Court decided that, since each party offered to give the other his oath,<sup>1</sup> the defendant should pay the plaintiff half in flour and half in peltries, and that each should pay his part of the costs.

François Saucier brought complaint against Ignace Chatigny for an insult which he had offered to the Court, having said that all the magistrates were fools.

Ignace Chatigny appeared and said that it was true that he had said it, but he had not thought it would be repeated.

The Court decided that on account of the insult, which had been offered it by the said Ignace Chatigny, it will make application to M. Trottier, commandant in said place, to have him put in prison for a week; and that he shall pay fifty livres fine to the church and the costs.

The Court adjourned to Thursday, September 7.

the Court that the defendant prove that which he accuses him of having done.

The defendant declares that it is true that he said to the plaintiff, at a time when he had a quarrel with him up to the point of coming to blows, that he had made one die and that he wasn't going to make him. He further said that it is true that before the quarrel, which the said Dubois had had with the plaintiff, the former was in good health and that after that time he went to bed and never got up again and every one knew that.

Pierre Gatient having appeared made oath on the Holy Gospels of Almighty God to tell the truth and said that it is true that Dubois told him that Brisson had given him a rap and that he had not struck him with his gun; and furthermore he had never summoned Fr. Saucier to tell him what the latter had deposed in the Court on his account.

Fr. Saucier made oath on the Holy Gospels of Almighty God and said that he had been summoned by M. Lionet and M. Lonval and that, when he was at the house of the said Dubois, the latter told him that M. Brisson had been at his house and had struck him, had broken his gun on him and given him a kick in the side and that he had spit blood on account of the blow.

M. Lionet having appeared made oath on the Holy Gospels of Almighty God and said that he was sent by the late Dubois to summon M. Saucier so that he might tell him about the quarrel, which he had had with Brisson; and that he told M. Saucier that Brisson had beaten him and he feared that he would not recover.

The Court decided that, on account of the depositions which have been made against the said plaintiff, he shall be apprehended, arrested and put in prison in order that within a week he should give greater proofs to the contrary of that with which he has been accused, in default of which there shall be held a meeting of jurors to decide his case.

M. ORTIS, Plaintiff, vs. M. HENSON, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant for advances, which he made him, according to his obligation and note.

The defendant answers by a letter addressed to the Court that in view of the conditions of the times he prays for a stay of execution till next Christmas and in default of payment at that time he offers to sell his property himself without further delay.

It was decided and granted by the Court that M. Henson shall give good and sufficient surety to M. Ortis for what he owes him and he shall have the term till Christmas and no longer in which to pay what he owes; and he is to pay the costs amounting to twelve livres ten sols.

ANT. HARMAND, Plaintiff, vs. JOSEPH RELLE, Defendant.

The Plaintiff sues the defendant on a note made by him to the order of Baptiste Bellan and with which the plaintiff is charged, as it has been assigned to his order.

The defendant produces a letter in which the said Bellan begs M. Sansfaçon to return to Joseph Relle the note with which he was charged.

The Court, not being able to condemn the said Joseph Relle to pay the said note, condemned the plaintiff to return to the defendant his note, which amounts to the sum of sixty livres in peltries, and to keep the letter which Bellan wrote him in order to have recourse against the same, since the said note was assigned to his order. The Court condemned the plaintiff to pay twelve livres ten sols for costs.

M. LEVASSEUR, plaintiff, vs. PRENOUVAUX, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant on account of a difficulty between them in regard to an exchange of a gun barrel, which he changed with the defendant in consideration of five livres in peltries to boot for the barrel and fifteen livres for making a stock for it; but since the defendant refused to pay him the five livres to which he agreed for the exchange, he had returned his gun barrel and demands that the defendant pay him for the stock, which he had made for the barrel, because he is not able to use it on another.

The defendant says that he agreed to give the plaintiff only one ecu to boot.

Since both parties offered to take oath and they had no witnesses, the Court dismissed them, ordering each to pay half the costs and the plaintiff to lose half of what he demands for the gun stock.

The Court adjourned to Thursday, October 5.

DuCharme, Pres.

The Court being still assembled received the oath of the twelve jurors, who were named in accordance with the order of the Court of the 14th of the present month, to judge the case between Brisson and Angers. And they now demanded that the declarations, which were made, be read to them, and this was immediately done. After a careful examination they decided that the affidavit of Pierre Gatient made under oath proves the contrary of the accusation of Dubois himself which was made to others also;<sup>1</sup> and since there is no other proof to the contrary, they return this verdict: "We the undersigned jurors, in virtue of the order given us by the Court to decide the cause of Brisson and Angers, have not found any proof sufficient to condemn the said Brisson on any count whatsoever; and recommend that the Court condemn whomever it judges proper to pay the costs etc."<sup>2</sup> as has been frequently said.—Kas Rec., Edict of Colonel Wilkins. In this edict Wilkins gave the court of judicature, established by him in 1768, jurisdiction in criminal matters, but he said that the people were not sufficiently familiar with English law to permit trials by jury. The use of trial by jury in the courts of the county of Illinois was due to the influence of the Virginians.—Introduction, p. lxiii.

September 21, 1780, The Court reassembled to examine the opinion of the jurors above named, President Charles DuCharme, Jean Bte. Lacroix, Clement Langlois, Ant. On the petition of several persons of this village for permission to go where their private business calls them, the Court assembled to consider this subject, and decided that permission shall be given to some persons of recognized reputation and character, and that it shall be very expressly forbidden everybody to import with them any intoxicating liquor, and that those to whom permission to go is given shall present bondsmen who will be responsible for all misdemeanors on their part.

Pierre Gatient made oath on the Holy Gospel to do nothing and to cause nothing contrary to the interests of the State and presented the person of M. Fr. Trottier for bondsman. He was granted permission to go on the Mississippi, where his business calls him.

PIERRE DORION, Plaintiff, vs. CH. DUCHARME, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant for having given bond for the named Joseph Desloges, from whom the plaintiff won four hundred livres at cards<sup>1</sup>. He says that he played with Desloges only because of the assurance of his money which the defendant gave by his surety.

The defendant declares that he acted as bondsman to Joseph Desloges up to the sum of four hundred livres, but says that the said Desloges told him that he had not lost that amount.

The Court continued the present suit to be decided at the next Court and ordered that the said Desloges be sued by the plaintiff before suit is brought on the surety of the defendant.

BTE. SAUCIER Plaintiff, vs. JOS. ASSELIN, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant because he was not able to go one day and draw off the lime from a kiln which they had made together without any contract or agreement except their word; and he says that the defendant made him pay a bill for work, which he had ordered done on the kiln after it was fired, without informing the plaintiff of the work he intended to have done on it.

The defendant declares that he went one time to tell the plaintiff to go and draw off the lime, since he was not able to go himself.

The plaintiff repeats that he told the defendant that day that the kiln might go to ruin before he would leave the work he was doing; and that he could get a man to send in his place and that he would pay him.

The Court condemned the defendant to give the plaintiff half the kiln, and both to pay the expenses which had been made for the preservation of the kiln, and to pay equally the costs of justice.

PIERRE MARTIN, Plaintiff, vs. CH. LACROIX, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant for a pig, which he had taken in the Prairie du Pont and shut up at his house and demands that it be returned to him.

The plaintiff further says that M. Pierre Roy told the defendant at the time he captured and carried the pig away to his house that it didn't belong to him but to the plaintiff, to which the defendant answered that he who claimed it might come to fetch it.

The defendant says that he really believed the said pig his, when he took it; but if the plaintiff gives proof that it belongs to him, he would consent to return it.

The plaintiff produced two witnesses, who have inspected the said pig. Pierre Roy and Louis Chatel made oath on the Holy Gospels of Almighty God to answer the question which was put to them; and said that, after examining the pig, they recognized that the brand was that of the plaintiff, although it appeared to have been somewhat disguised either by frost or some branch, but that in spite of that their opinion is that it is the brand of the plaintiff.

The Court unanimously condemned the defendant to return to the plaintiff a pig similar to the one he had taken, subject to inspection by him, who saw the pig when it was taken, and to pay the costs.

Jean Bte. LaCroix prays the Court to be permitted to have sold some goods belonging to M. Sills for a sum of eighty odd livres which the latter owes him.

The Court permitted M. LaCroix to hold the sale of the said goods of the said Sills Sunday next.

BTE. BERGERON, Plaintiff, vs. ALEXIS TABEAU, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant in regard to an act of donation of all his goods made on condition that the defendant should fail in nothing, to which he was bound by the said donation.<sup>1</sup> Contrary to the agreement the defendant has left the plaintiff's house without giving notice and without the plaintiff's knowledge of the cause. He now demands that the defendant pay him a compensation or that the donation continue in force.

The defendant answers by petition alleging that he left the plaintiff's house to avoid any future disagreeable accidents, because the plaintiff tried his hardest to extend his excessive licentiousness and subornation to the defendant's wife; and he demands the annulment of the said donation and that he be free to go forth from the plaintiff's house with his property and that the plaintiff be condemned to pay his board, lodging and washing, since he is bound to support him.

The Court granted M. Tabeau, in accordance with his prayer, the annulment of the said donation and ordered M. Bergeron to return to the said Tabeau whatever he might have belonging to

BTE. BERGERON, Plaintiff, vs. MICHEL CHARTIER, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant for the rent for land, which he occupied for the cultivation of tobacco. The rent, which the defendant was to pay the plaintiff, was fifteen pounds of tobacco, which he refuses to pay to-day.

The defendant answers that some time after he had rented the land of the plaintiff and had set out his tobacco, the plaintiff brought into his own house a man, whose horse had done the plants considerable damage; and when he told the plaintiff about it, the latter had answered that a horse did not eat tobacco. The defendant says that the plaintiff ought not to permit any one to put an animal in a field after he rents it.

The plaintiff answers that he permitted the man, who was at his house, to put his horse in the field; but that he had forbidden him to let it loose.

The Court condemned the plaintiff to pay the costs of justice and to lose the fifteen pounds of tobacco, which the defendant was to pay.

JEAN LAPANCÉ, Plaintiff, vs. JOS. PELLETIER, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant for six sets [?] of spokes, which he had taken in the woods of the Big Mushrooms; and, since the said spokes have been found at the defendant's house, the plaintiff demands that they be returned to him, or paid for, according to an appraisement, which shall be made by workmen.

The defendant declares that it is true that he took some to make a pair of wheels and that the named Lemay took some also without knowing the quantity.<sup>1</sup>

The named Lemay appeared and declared that he took a score.

The Court condemned the named Lemay and Pelletier to return the spokes or to pay in equal parts for the quantity, which the plaintiff declares to have been taken, and to share the costs.

The plaintiff sues the defendant for a sum or one hundred and sixty-nine livres in peltries, which the defendant still owes on his note, which the plaintiff produced in Court.

At the same Court M. Clement Langlois presented another note for one hundred pounds of beaver skins due by the same.

Since the Court knows that the defendant has in his possession a horse and some pigs, he has been condemned to pay the two notes, which have just been presented; and there has been granted the plaintiff a seizure on all the possessions of the said Neveux, which are to be sold in default of payment.

Nicolas Chabot took the oath of fidelity and of office and took his place as sheriff for the district of this village.

In view of the times and the present circumstances, the Court decreed that Bte. Bergeron should be imprisoned twenty-four hours for this time, and in the future, if he makes similar speeches, he will be severely punished; and he was also condemned to pay all costs and expenses.

On the demand of M. Fr. Trottier in the name of the public MM. Langlois and Mechante were condemned to find bondsmen, who will be personally answerable for them during the time they shall be here.<sup>2</sup> cause, when he wished to have him conducted to the said prison, the said Bergeron disobeyed the orders, which were given on this subject, and had insulted him in particular; and in consequence he prayed the Court that the said Bergeron be punished more severely than he had been condemned.

The Court condemned the said Bergeron to two weeks' imprisonment, out of consideration for M. Trottier, who thinks he will be sufficiently punished after this time, and to pay the cost both of justice and imprisonment before leaving prison, under penalty of remaining there a longer time.

The Court adjourned to July 5.

The plaintiff sues the defendant for the repayment of a sum of one hundred and forty-nine livres and five sols in peltries for a note which he drew to the order of Fr. Ivont for the balance of his wages and which the plaintiff's clerk, M. Lerou, paid at Michillimackinac, of which the plaintiff produces proof.

Joseph Clermont appeared and, after having made oath on the Holy Gospels of Almighty God, said that he went up to Michillimackinac with the plaintiff's canoe and that on arriving he was witness that the said note was paid by the plaintiff's clerk and that it is negligence on the part of his clerk not to have withdrawn it.

On the testimony which Joseph Clermont gives that the said note was paid by the said plaintiff's clerk, the defendant is condemned to repay to the plaintiff the amount of the note aforesaid.

M. Fr. Trottier prays that all the goods belonging to Jean Marie Trottier, which are at the house of M. Lefevre, be sold to pay him a sum, which the said Trottier owes him. The Court decreed that Charles Lefevre shall deliver under oath all the effects belonging to the said Jean Marie Trottier, which are at his house, in order that they be sold to satisfy his debts.

ANT. HARMAND Plaintiff, vs. JOS. CESIRRE, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant for a payment, which the latter made him in peltries. The plaintiff says that when he was at the defendant's house to get the said peltries, he asked the defendant, if the peltries were of good quality, and that he answered that he had received them for good ones.

The defendant says that it is true that he said to the plaintiff that he had received them for peltries of good quality and that he might have the receipt made for them, and if they were not worth anything, to send them back to him; but the plaintiff kept them six days and he no longer wished to take them back.

The Court condemned the plaintiff to keep the payment which the defendant made him, because he did not send the peltries back immediately, since he was not content with them, and to pay the costs.

The defendant answers that the mare, which the plaintiff claims, belongs to him, as he brought it from the Post;<sup>2</sup> and that the said mare was stolen from him at the Little Village<sup>3</sup> by the savages; and he produced several certificates that the said mare belongs to him, and offers to produce other proof both from people of the Post and of Kaskaskia.

The Court dismissed the said parties to have their cause decided at Kaskaskia seeing that the mare is there and they can produce greater [proof] to terminate their differences.

JOS. ASSELIN, Plaintiff, vs. PIERRE DUBOIS, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant, demanding that he give him proof of the injury that the plaintiff did him in not keeping the agreement, which they had made, to go down to New Orleans.

The defendant answers that he refused forty piastres to go to New Orleans, offered by M. Motard, in order to keep the engagement which he had made with the plaintiff.

The Court condemned the defendant to restore to the plaintiff the mare, which the latter had given him in advance, deciding that the service, which he had had from the said mare, would do for damages. The Court decreed that the plaintiff shall be free to engage himself to another, if he so desires, and condemned him to pay all the costs.

JEAN BTE. LAURINS Plaintiff Jos. DUBÉ Defendant

The plaintiff sues the defendant for six hundred pounds of flour, which the defendant owes the plaintiff for a horse the latter sold him, of which said quantity the plaintiff has received fifty pounds.

The defendant answers that he had agreed with the plaintiff for six hundred pounds of flour or one hundred and twenty pounds of deer-skins, in default of flour.

The plaintiff produces three witnesses, who say that they heard the defendant say that he owed six hundred pounds of flour for a horse, which he had bought of the plaintiff.

Since neither has proof to offer, the Court put them to oath; and since each refused to take the other's oath, the Court dismissed the present cause, not being able to pass judgment, and both have been condemned only to pay the costs.

JOS. PLANTE, Plaintiff, vs. JOS. VAUDRY, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant saying that the latter engaged him to hunt while going down to New Orleans, and that in consequence he had sold many of his goods, which were very useful to him, and even his corn, which was a great resource to him, and that now the defendant has backed out of his agreement, which does the plaintiff a considerable injury and he prays that the said defendant be condemned to pay him damages.

The defendant answers that he informed the plaintiff the evening before he was going to start that it was not possible for him to continue his journey.

The plaintiff says that he had asked the defendant for five days to finish some little jobs, which he had for different persons, and that during this interval he had asked the defendant, if he was very sure of making the journey which they had agreed to make, to which the latter always replied that he should consider himself engaged and that he would start. In consequence he had given up several jobs, which he could not finish, and sold what he had here as well as in a canoe, corn, salt and other things, which would be of great assistance to him to-day.

The Court condemned the defendant to reimburse the plaintiff sixty livres in kind for damages and to pay the costs.

The Court adjourned to Thursday, November 8.

ISAAC LEVY, Plaintiff, vs. MICHEL BUTEAU, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant saying that he treated the defendant for a sickness for the sum of four hundred livres and after some time the defendant assured him that he no longer felt any symptoms of his sickness. He ceased caring for him and afterwards, when he asked for his pay, the defendant refused, saying that he had not cured him entirely.

Bte. Dumay, after having made oath to tell the truth concerning the agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant, affirmed that the plaintiff was bound to cure perfectly the defendant and that he heard the defendant say that he was not cured, but only relieved.

The defendant says that the plaintiff was obliged to cure him perfectly and that he was not and is not cured; that he only felt some relief from the first treatment of the plaintiff.

Augustin Angers, after having made oath to tell the truth according to his knowledge, says that the defendant was intending to go to Kaskaskia to be attended, and that he had said that the plaintiff had stopped him, saying that he was capable of curing him; and that he [Angers] had advised him to put himself under the care of the plaintiff; that some time afterwards, when he asked the defendant about the sickness, he answered that he was getting along very well; but later the defendant had told him that he was sick and that the plaintiff had ceased attending him.

The defendant declared on oath that he had not known any women from the time the plaintiff began taking care of him up to the present time.

The Court condemned the plaintiff to continue attending the defendant until he should be cured, on condition that the defendant acts according to orders and does nothing that can counteract the medicines of the plaintiff, under penalty of paying the sum demanded and of being abandoned by him.

The Court condemned the defendant to pay the sum of one hundred and sixteen livres fifteen sols, a bill for which in accordance with his current account the plaintiff has produced.

The Court condemned the plaintiff to pay all the costs of justice.

The Court adjourned to February 7.

JOSEPH MOTARD, Plaintiff, vs. AUG. ANGERS, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant that he may know the reason why the latter has forbidden M. DuCharme to pay him and to settle his accounts with him.

The defendant answers that if he did it, it was only because the plaintiff seized a canoe in which he was going away, saying that the defendant was in debt to him, which the defendant denies and offers to prove.

The plaintiff answers that he sold sixty jugs of tafia at two piastres the jug and that M. DuCharme paid him for fifty jugs of this, for which he had held himself responsible; and since the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff twenty piastres for the ten remaining jugs and had refused to pay after many demands, he had, by order of the commandant of St. Louis, caused the seizure of the defendant's canoe only until some judge should decide, and he produced his account according to which the defendant is indebted to him for the sum of one hundred livres.

The defendant answers that in the present affair with the plaintiff there was no agreement on any quantity of tafia, that their agreement was for a half-cask at five hundred livres, and that there was no agreement on any price per jug.

The plaintiff answers that if he had promised the defendant sixty jugs of tafia for a half-cask he would not in the presence of the defendant have measured [?] the said barrel, which contained sixty jugs; and that the defendant should have objected thereto, if he had understood that he was receiving sixty jugs instead of fifty.

The defendant presents Antoine Lamarche as a witness of their agreement.

Antoine Lamarche appeared and made oath on the Holy Gospels to answer the question, which is put to him, and said that he had no other knowledge than that he had heard M. Motard say that he was giving M. Angers a half-cask of tafia for a hundred piastres.

The plaintiff made oath to his account.

After having carefully examined the prayers and the defences and considering the witness and his testimony, the Court condemned the defendant to pay the plaintiff for the surplus above the fifty jugs of tafia, which were in the consignment of firewater which he received from the plaintiff, at the rate of two dollars a jug, since it was measured [?] in the presence of the defendant, and condemned the defendant to pay the costs of justice.

ISAAC LEVY, Plaintiff, vs. MICHEL BUTEAU, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant, saying that at the last Court he had been condemned to continue to treat the defendant until his perfect cure in order to obtain the payment, which the defendant was obliged to give him; but he proves that the defendant has not followed his prescriptions nor even taken the remedies, which he gave him; for, he says, he gave him one day sixty pills, seven of which he was to take the first day and to increase the number by one each succeeding day until all were taken; but the plaintiff says that on the next day he went to see the defendant and asked if he had taken the pills that day, and the defendant answered, "No", and said that he did not know what had become of the said pills; but that he believed that the children of the house had lost them. The plaintiff further says that on the following day he returned and brought fifteen more of the same pills; and he requested M. Bte. Alarie to watch and see if the said defendant did not deceive him about the medicine he had given him; and in the afternoon the defendant said to the plaintiff, after having told him that the children had thrown away the said sixty-seven pills, that he had taken them all, which is impossible, the plaintiff maintains, because that was enough to kill him. Madame Bte. Alary appeared and said that the defendant aforesaid did not wish to take any of the said pills, which the plaintiff charged him to take.

The defendant appeared and said that he had taken all the pills that the plaintiff gave him; but since the remedies did not cure him as quickly as he had wished, he took them all in two days.

The Court condemned the defendant to pay to the plaintiff the price which he had agreed to give him, since he has not followed the prescriptions, and also to pay the costs.

The Court decreed that one of the witnesses, who declare that the pigs passed through the fence of the said LaCroix, should make oath thereto, and the defendant will then be condemned to pay the plaintiff for the said pig and the costs.

He shows, furthermore, that he will not serve liquor in this village to savages.

At the prayer of M. Jean Bte. LOUIS PILLET, Plaintiff, vs. JOS. ASSELIN, Defendant, Louis Pillet presents an agreement entered into by himself and the defendant for work, which the latter was to do on his house, because the defendant refuses to keep it.

The defendant explains that he has not done the work as said, but not through his fault, but because he has never been comeur de Le faire, Et que Comme il y a Cinq ans que Led<sup>t</sup> marché Est passé il trouve que le prix Est trop mediocre il demande augmentation.

La Cour a Condanné Le demendeur a rembourser a deffendeur La Somme de Soixante Et dix Livres pour n'avoir pas obligé Le deffendeur a faire Son ouvrage au tems Echus Et a payer Les fraix Entre Eux.

m<sup>r</sup>. Granmon dit queeffectivement quil la pensé mais quil ne L'en accusoit pas positivement n'en Etant point Sure.

La Cour a renvoyé Le Demendeur Et le deffendeur Sans aucune Dessision puisque le demendeur nest pas Juste dans ces demandes Et pour Les Sotises quil ce Sont Dit Sont Condanné a payer tous Les deux Les fraix.

<sup>1</sup> There was no prison in Cahokia, and the fort was sometimes used for that purpose, but not always. A prisoner was more often placed in the custody of an officer. Since no case in which Lemay was sentenced to imprisonment occurs in the Record, the imprisonment pelled to do it by the plaintiff; and that, as it was five years ago that the bargain was made, he finds that the price is too low and demands an increase.

The Court condemned the plaintiff to reimburse the defendant the sum of seventy livres for not having compelled the defendant to do his work in the expired time and both to pay the costs.

G. CONSTANT, Plaintiff, vs. ANT. HARMAND, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant, saying that under the alleged pretext that his child had put a slight upon the defendant, the latter had assaulted him and said: "Go, my son, and tell your father that he ate Grandmont's pig"; and the plaintiff prays that this, of which he is accused, be proved by the opposing party.

The defendant says that he heard M. Grandmont say that he thought that the plaintiff might have done it.

M. Grandmont says that in fact he thought it; but that he did not positively accuse him thereof, because he was not sure.

The Court dismissed the plaintiff and the defendant without passing judgment, since the plaintiff is not just in his demands; and for the abusive language they have used, they are both condemned to pay the costs

LEMAY, Plaintiff, vs. JOS. CESIRRE, defendant.

At the same Court a petition was presented by Louis Lemay, inhabitant of St. Phillippe, for a plowshare, which had been taken from his plough by M. Cesirre under the alleged pretext that the said Lemay owed him fifteen francs. This put him out of condition to do his sowing, and the cost of having it done, according to the certificate of M. Ch. Cadron, was one hundred francs.

Joseph Cesirre says that it is true that he took the plowshare, but only because the said Lemay owed him fifteen francs for his imprisonment at his house and that, if he had paid him, he would not have done it.<sup>1</sup>

The Court condemned M. Cesirre to repay to the plaintiff what it had cost him to have his sowing done, after retaining the fifteen

GABRIEL CERRÉ, Plaintiff, vs. ANT. HARMAND, Defendant

The plaintiff sues the defendant for a sum of one thousand and forty-six livres, according to his obligation given for a negro and a plantation which were adjudged him at the auction of the late M. Nicolle's property; and the plaintiff further shows that he has already notified the defendant to pay his obligation and, since he has refused to pay, he demands interest for the two years since the demand was made.

The defendant answers by a petition in which he affirms that the said negro, three months after purchase, was arrested and convicted of having poisoned his master and mistress; and that he had been compelled by order to deliver the said negro to justice, and therefore he ought not to pay for him.<sup>1</sup>

The plaintiff answers that when the negro was sold, he had been known for a person of good character; and that, if the defendant had not bought him, some one else would have done so.

The Court, after examining the prayers, the defence and the obligation of M. Ant. Harmand, condemned him to pay to the plaintiff his obligation and the interest, since its maturity, and the costs.

The Court adjourned to Thursday, September 5.

GABRIEL CERRÉ, Plaintiff, vs. ANT. HARMAND, Defendant.

The plaintiff shows the Court that in virtue of the decree which was rendered against the defendant at the last Court, he had served notice of the said decree on the said defendant; but since he refused to pay his obligation, he prays for a writ of seizure on all the goods of the defendant and an execution in order to obtain full payment.

The defendant answers that as to the item of a plantation which was adjudged him, he was ready to pay for that; but that he wishes to appeal to Virginia in regard to the negro, and prays that he be permitted to do so.

Since the defendant was condemned at the last Court to pay his obligation, as was explained in the decree; and since he has not done so, the Court granted the plaintiff a writ of execution on the goods of the defendant in order that they be sold up to the sum of the obligation, interest and costs, saving to the defendant the right to appeal wherever it shall seem best to him.

The Court adjourned to Thursday, October 8.

The plaintiff sues the defendant for a pig of his, which was killed in the prairie, and declares that it passed through the defendant's fence.

The defendant answers that on the same day that the pigs passed through the fence there were two other breaks in other fences, one in L. Trottier's and another in Cadien's and points out that it might have happened that the pigs passed through another gap than through that in his fence. The plaintiff made oath that nothing passed through the gap in his fence. M. Gagné, who made the inspection that day, appeared and made oath that he had not seen the pigs pass through other fences than that of Jean Bte. LaCroix.

The defendant answers that the said pig profited by the moment that the negro opened the gate for a cart which goes and comes, and yet the negro had done his best, as had also the son of Jos. Maisonneville, to hinder the said pig from passing, in which they had not succeeded.

The defendant produces a certificate by Madame Laflamme, in which she declares that the negro and also the children of the said plaintiff did their very best to drive the pig back; and that she had heard Madame Trottier say: "Come back, the sow will return this evening".

Considering the demands, the defence and the certificate, the Court condemned the plaintiff to lose his pig, seeing that what had happened could not be foreseen, and furthermore that his wife ought not to have recalled the children, and ought to have acted so that they might, perhaps, have brought the said pig back.

RENÉ BOUVET, Plaintiff, vs. LOUIS GAUD, Defendant.

The Plaintiff sues the defendant for having struck his negro, without having made any complaint against him, so severe a stroke on his head with a club that he could not work; and he prays that the negro be cured at the defendant's expense and that the latter pay him for the injury to his work, which that loss of time did him.

The defendant answers that he had struck the negro after having told him several times to leave his house, when he demanded of his brother what the latter was owing him; and that, when the negro was unwilling to obey, he struck him.

The plaintiff shows that the defendant ought not to have struck his negro so dangerous a blow, and that, if he had come to make complaint to him, he would have given entire satisfaction.

The defendant answers that the negro should not have taken in his absence two raccoons in spite of his wife, under pretext that the defendant's brother, who was in debt to the plaintiff's negro, had trapped them.

The negro appeared and said that Madame Louis Gaud had told him to take them, and that he would not have taken them otherwise.

Madame Louis Gaud appeared and made oath to tell the truth, and said that the negro came to her house and asked where her brother-in-law was, to whom he had let his horse in exchange for meat; and that having found on her table only two raccoons, which her brother-in-law had given to her, he took them in spite of her; and when he returned a second time, after she had told her husband of the action of the negro in his absence, her husband told the negro several times to leave; and, when he wouldn't do it, he struck the said negro.

The Court decreed that the defendant should pay the plaintiff fifty francs for having maltreated his negro in the way he did;

A petition presented by M. Fr. Trottier, in which he prays the Court, since he had been named with MM. Beaulieu was the testamentary executor, that the said Court be willing to name another to examine the accounts of the said M. Trottier prays the Court very humbly that, since he is obliged by his private affairs to leave the village for some time, the said Court will take his place as commandant of the said village in order to maintain good harmony and union, such as has always reigned.<sup>2</sup>

The Court named with a view to the execution of the last will and testament of the late Portemay MM. Bte. Lacroix, G. Blin, and Bte. Saucier, in accordance with the prayer of M. Trottier, and granted him also his other prayers.

TRAVERSY, Plaintiff for M. REYNAL, vs. Madame HENSON, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant for the sum of one hundred and eight livres according to an account for medicine for the sickness of her late husband and for herself.

The defendant was summoned to appear and defend her cause; and not appearing, the Court ordered that the said defendant shall pay the plaintiff according to his account.

BTE. DUMAY, Plaintiff, vs. PIERRE MALLET, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant, saying that the latter had caught a colt at the end of the Eagle Prairie pretending that he believed it wild; and since this colt had been reclaimed by no one and the plaintiff had lost one of the same age and color, he produced in Court two certificates from persons, who said that they had seen following the plaintiff's mare a similar colt of the same age and color as that which the defendant caught.

The Court ordered the defendant to deliver to the plaintiff the said colt, since it appeared to belong to him, and forbade the defendant to take in the commons any unmarked animal which he was not sure belonged to him, as he had no right to take this one; and ordered the defendant to pay the costs.

At the same Court a petition presented by Gabriel Baron and his wife, in which they pray for the execution of the judgment rendered by the said Court at the bottom of a petition demanding the right of lineage repurchase of the landed property, which was sold by M. Buteau, their father, to M. Lacroix.<sup>1</sup>

Accordingly the Court decreed that notice shall be given M. Turgeon to give up the possession of the said house without delay, in return for which the repurchasers shall furnish him lodgings for three months, such as the said Baron offers in the said petition dated this day. It is our opinion it is not necessary to name arbitrators, since the law decides clearly in this case.<sup>2</sup>

The following printed in this volume several documents in regard to the settlement of Prairie du Pont. The right of the settlers to the land rested on a concession made to the Seminary of Eastern Africa on June 12, 1822. The settlers were obliged to defend their rights against several other claimants, but finally the land was returned to them by the United States.

At a special session of the Court, June 11.

The Court was assembled in the name of the public in order to have each establish the boundaries of a quantity of land in the Prairie du Pont according to his needs for cultivation, and also to lay out the commons. The Court decided unanimously that there shall be drawn up an act of assembly signed by the inhabitants, in which the limits of the lands and other agreements shall be written.<sup>1</sup>

The plaintiff sues the defendant for a sum of one hundred and fifty livres in peltries for a trip to Chicago, for which he was hired by M. Brisbois, the defendant's clerk, according to a draft drawn on the defendant by the said clerk.

The defendant answers that he did not authorize his clerk to engage any one, since he had furnished him the men necessary for the journey; and that the said plaintiff should have recourse against his clerk for the said sum of fifty ecus, except thirty livres in cash, which the plaintiff has agreed to pay him for going to Payssa.<sup>2</sup>

The Court condemned the defendant to pay the plaintiff fifty ecus, in accordance with the agreement with the plaintiff made by M. Brisbois, the defendant's clerk, for conducting his boats to Chicago, reserving to the plaintiff the right of recourse against his clerk, if there was wrong in making the agreement, and to pay the costs.

CLEMENT ALARIE, Plaintiff, vs. JOSEPH CESIRRE, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant saying that he has had the latter's child at his house, and that his wife gave it all her care for the space of six months and at the end of that time the defendant had taken his child away without being willing to pay what is right for their trouble.

The defendant answers that if he gave his child to the defendant's wife, it was only because of her earnest request to take the child, saying that the last service she could render its mother was to bring up her child; and she said that it would cost him nothing; and yet he said that it was not his intention to leave his child at the plaintiff's without satisfying those who took care of it.

The Court condemned the defendant to pay six hundred pounds of flour for the six months that his child was at the plaintiff's and to pay the costs.

MARIE DURAND, Plaintiff, vs. FR. ARNOUX, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant, saying that he had engaged the defendant to go to the Illinois river in return for a horse, which he gave him upon his return; but that he had received one, with which he was content, at the Illinois River; and that after he had said to the named Laforce, who was commissioned to conduct the trade for the plaintiff, that if he wished to trade for a horse, which the savages had brought them, that he would trade it with Durand and get something to boot, the said horse had been bought by the said Laforce in consequence; and afterwards the latter had ordered the said François to go and tie it with withes and return immediately to the canoe and to his business; and that during this time the said horse had been stolen by the savages; and he demands that he be paid for the horse either by the said François or Laforce.

<sup>1</sup> I have found no explanation for the ce-sation of the meetings of the court between September and January. President Quenel died during this period.

Durand, if he wished it, but as Durand was not there, they have not made any certain trade; and that he had in these matters executed the orders of the said Laforce, and had put the said horse, where he was ordered; and after he returned to the canoe, the said horse had been retaken by the savages, as it appeared, since he could not find it; and he said that he could not be held responsible, since he had done what they ordered.

The Court decreed that each inhabitant, who has taken up land in the Prairie du Pont, should build his fence there between now and the end of April; and, in order to avoid all difficulties, that it shall be decided by the plurality of the votes of the inhabitants, who have land in the cul de sac, in regard to removing the old fence.<sup>1</sup>

BTE. DUMAY, Plaintiff, vs. PIERRE MALLET, Defendant.

The plaintiff makes his representation to the Court against the defendant, in which he says that, by virtue of a decree rendered the 5th of June last against the said defendant, he had been condemned to deliver to the plaintiff a horse, which afterwards the latter had exchanged for a cow; but that a few days ago the said defendant came to his house and took the said cow in spite of him and had led it to Thomas Brady's.

The Court decreed that the plaintiff's cow be brought back within twenty-four hours by the defendant to the place from which he had taken it; and condemned him to pay all costs, expenses, damages and interest; and furthermore that he should be responsible for the cow until it was returned.

J. BTE. GAFFÉ, Plaintiff, vs. THOMAS BRADY, Defendant.

<sup>1</sup> The method of arbitration for ending litigation was very common under French law, and frequent examples of the procedure occur in the Records. The great majority of civil suits might be arbitrated, exceptions being such as the spiritual rights of benefices, the status of persons, validity of marriages, etc. It was required that both parties agree to submit their dispute to arbitrators, who were obliged to render their decision within a determined time. One or more persons were chosen by the parties to act in this capacity. These were empowered, if the number of arbitrators was even, to choose another. All free males of sound mind and of age might act, but judges in whose court the suit was pending were debarred. As far as the persons of the litigants and the question in dispute were concerned the arbitrators had the same powers as judges; but they could not constrain witnesses to appear before them. They might base their decision on other considerations than exact three loads of hay in Bte. Saucier's barn; and that after 40 or 45 days he had brought the horse back to him, saying that he had no more hay. Accordingly the plaintiff shows that it is impossible that his horse could have eaten in so short a time all that hay; and furthermore that this cause would have been already arbitrated by MM. J. Bte. LaCroix, Pascal Pillet, Henry Biron and Joseph Bissonette, if the defendant had not been unwilling to appear. Furthermore he says that the defendant could have taken three and a half loads of hay in the two loadings, judging by the time it had been in the barn and considering the difference there is between such and that coming from the fields.

The defendant makes no other answer than to request that he be permitted to name arbitrators, as well as his opponent, to decide their difference. The Court granted his request and ordered that the one losing by arbitration should pay the costs of justice.<sup>1</sup> justice. They might, also, make either of the litigants take oath and permit their decision to turn thereon, as did the judges. They had no power to put their verdict into execution. This was done by the judge who confirmed it. Appeal was permitted to either party, provided he had not signed the verdict. Jousse, Traité de l'administration de la justice, II., 683 et seq.

This method of deciding suits, to which the French were accustomed, was adopted by the British commandants in the Northwest, who were empowered by their government to take charge of both the military and civil matters in their localities.—Howard, Local Constitutional History of the United States, I., 430.

<sup>1</sup> A note for peltries was worth half as much as one for a similar amount of money. The connection of the oath with the case is not clear, but no proof was needed, since the note was made out for peltries.

At the same Court a petition presented by Madame Lepage, widow, praying for her discharge from the guardianship of the minors Barsalous, with which her deceased husband had been intrusted.

The Court having inquired and learned that the said minors Barsalous have no relative closer than M. Ant. Boyer, decided that he be charged with the said guardianship, and that Madame Lepage be discharged.

At the same Court a petition presented by Madame G. Blin praying that there be named some one to put into execution the will of Michel Guadimcire, with which her deceased husband was intrusted.

The Court, after inquiry, decided that there was no person more fitted to be substituted for M. Blin than M. J. Bte. Lacroix, and therefore appointed him to put into execution the said will.

PIERRE ROY, Plaintiff, vs. JOS. LEMBER, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant for a note to which he has consented over his mark, and which is made out for peltries; but as the defendant [plaintiff?] believes that the debt is in money, he demands that the defendant make oath that the goods which the plaintiff sold him were sold for peltries. The defendant not wishing to make oath has diminished his note by half.<sup>1</sup> The defendant was condemned to pay the costs.

At the same Court Fr. Saucier brings complaint that many persons refuse to pay the costs of justice, and he therefore prays the Court that he be empowered to make the party bringing any suit pay, if he is better able to pay, or be empowered to exact surety from the parties to answer for the costs and that all costs be paid in peltries according to the former rate.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> The practice of making the most responsible party pay the cost of the suit caused great criticism at Vincennes, but in Cahokia the rule, which commonly prevailed from now on, that the successful litigant pay the costs and be reimbursed by the loser seems to have worked without friction, or, at least, did not hinder litigation.

The plaintiff sues the defendant for the sum of twelve livres fifteen sols for his share of a cask of wine, for which several others have paid their shares; and, as the said defendant was present, the plaintiff demands an equal share from him.

The defendant answers that if Paul Poupar had not invited him to be present without telling him what it would cost him or even saying that it was going to cost him anything; and that is the reason that he said he would pay nothing.

The Court decreed that, since Paul Poupar had invited the defendant to supper at M. LaCroix's, he shall be held accountable for the sum claimed by the plaintiff. The defendant was condemned to pay the costs.

At the same Court Joseph Billet called Grolet, plaintiff, sues Charles Lefevre, defendant, for the sum of fifty livres for wages for work on a kiln, which the defendant made for him.

The defendant answers that the plaintiff did not fulfill the agreement, which they had made; and since there are no proofs to present, they pray that their difference be decided by arbitrators. The Court granted their prayer and ordered the loser to pay all costs.

At the same Court Joseph Cesirre sues Pierre Grandmont in regard to a little orphan girl whom Prenouvau left at his house, with the verbal agreement that he was to keep her until she could support herself, and whom the said Grandmont has withdrawn from his house.

Pierre Grandmont appeared and said that the said Prenouvau left him the authority to withdraw the said little girl, if she was not well treated at the said Cesirre's, and offers to produce the said authority and the proofs of bad treatment, which the plaintiff gave the little girl.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The history of the United States is a story of growth and development. It begins with the first settlers who came to the continent, and continues through the years of exploration, settlement, and the struggle for independence. The story is one of a people who have built a great nation out of a wilderness, and who have fought for the principles of liberty and justice for all.

dant of St. Louis to have repaired a boat<sup>1</sup> belonging to M. DuCharme, which he had taken without permission into the Illinois River, or to pay for it, if it was beyond repair; but that when he came to do it, he had not found the said boat; and, since he has learned that the said Lafleur had taken it to carry stone, likewise without permission of anyone, the said Prevost prays that the said Lafleur be condemned to repair the said boat or pay for it, if it is beyond repair, and to pay all expenses.

Pierre Lafleur answers that it is true that he took the boat; but that it was with the permission of Bte. Baron and because he believed that the boat was M. L. DuCharme's.

Bte. Baron appeared and said that he had not permitted the said Lafleur to take it; that he had only told the said Lafleur to ask permission from Charles Lefevre, who had been sent to him here. But since Lafleur persisted in saying that the said Baron had given him permission, and the said Baron persisted in saying, "No", the said Lafleur demands of the said Baron his oath, and says that then he will agree.

Bte. Baron appeared and made oath that he had not told the said Lafleur to take the said boat, since it belonged to M. DuCharme; but that he had only told him to ask permission of Charles Lefevre, who had charge of it.

The Court condemned the said Lafleur to put the said boat in condition for use, or to pay for it, according to the petition of the said Prevost. And the said Prevost shall pay the costs of justice for having made use of the boat without permission.

At a Court of the 6th of May last, it was decreed that Pierre Grandmont should produce his proofs to justify his withdrawal of Prenouvau's little daughter from the house of Jos. Cesirre.

ANT. LAMARCHE, Plaintiff, vs JOSEPH CESIRRE, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant saying that the former acted as bondsman for Ant. Harmand for the sum of two thousand and some hundred livres, which he owed Madame Beausoleil; but that he had done it only on the promise, which Joseph Cesirre had made to pay him a sum of seven hundred and some livres, which Cesirre owes to the said Ant. Harmand. Therefore he begs the Court to compel the said Cesirre to pay the said sum, so that he can satisfy the debt of the said Ant. Harmand

The plaintiff [defendant?] answers that it is true that he owes that sum to Ant. Harmand; but that he had agreed with the latter to pay him in work, and that if he had not agreed to that, the defendant would not be so greatly in his debt.

Considering the defence of the defendant against the said Ant. Harmand, who is absent, the Court ordered Jos. Cesirre to pay the plaintiff three hundred livres in money for the present, while waiting for the return of Ant. Harmand to terminate the agreement, which they have made together.

The Court adjourned to September 2.

M. MOTARD, Plaintiff, vs. JOS. VAUDRY, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant for the sum one hundred and eighty-eight piastres gourdes and four escalins<sup>1</sup> according to his note of the month of December last, which has fallen due, and demands a mortgage on the defendant's goods, if he gives him two months for the payment; in default of which payment he prays that there be granted him permission to have the said mortgaged goods sold.

The defendant answers that because he could not come down into the village, he has been unable to pay his bill; but he offers M. Motard the mortgage on his house, two arpents<sup>2</sup> of land in the Prairie du Pont and a barn with its yard on Fox Hill; and that M. Motard may have them sold, if he does not pay within the time he gives him.

The Court is of the opinion that M. Motard should accept the offer which Vaudry makes him and that he may make the latter sell the said property, which he offers him in mortgage, in default of payment.

The defendant answers that a few days ago he had killed some animals for which he had not yet been paid, which put him till now out of position to satisfy his note; and he prays for a delay of of fortnight to make an instalment of a thousand livres.

The Court granted the defendant a fortnight to pay the plaintiff one thousand livres in money, as he prays, and these terms were accepted by the plaintiff, who promises to give credit for the balance. But in default of payment within the said fortnight, the plaintiff is authorized to have goods of the defendant's sold up to that sum.

At the same Court M. Sarpy produces an account assigned to him by Madame Lepage, widow, against Charles LaCroix for the sum of nineteen hundred and forty livres seven sols, saving the deduction of the instalments, which he may have paid since the 22nd of this month, the date of this account; and prays that the said LaCroix be condemned to pay him the balance of the said account without delay.

The said LaCroix was summoned to appear to-day, which he failed to do. And after three summonses by the huissier and when neither his person nor anyone representing him was found, the Court condemned him to pay his account without delay and to pay all the costs of justice.

At the same Court M. Charles Sanguinette presents two notes amounting to the sum of four hundred and forty-seven and a half pounds of deer-skins, which the named Joseph Langlois owes him; and consequently he prays that the Court grant him a writ of seizure on the goods of the said Langlois until he should have made arrangements with him for the security of what he owes him.

The Court granted to M. Ch. Sanguinette the writ of seizure which he prays for against the said Langlois and orders the said Langlois to make such arrangements as the said M. Sanguinette shall demand to secure what he owes him; and in default of doing so condemns him to pay without delay.

J. BTE. GAFFÉ, Plaintiff, vs. ANT. HARMAND, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant for a boat, which the former had loaned him to go to the Ohio and which he was bound to return to the plaintiff with its equipments in the condition that it was, and subject to inspection to determine the repairs necessary to put the said boat in the same condition that it was, when the plaintiff loaned it to him.

The defendant answers that the plaintiff had agreed with him to take a bark canoe for the said boat.

The plaintiff answers that it is true that he said to the defendant that he would take a canoe, if he was in need of it before the return of the said boat, and brought forward M. Girardin as witness.

M. Girardin appeared and made oath to tell the truth and said that he was a witness at the time of the arrangement between MM. Gaffé and Harmand, and that he understood that M. Gaffé loaned his boat to the said Harmand on the condition that he would take a canoe, if he found himself in need of going to Michillimackinac, before the latter's return, and that afterwards, if the canoe suited him, he would keep it.

Fr. Saucier made oath to tell the truth in answer to the question put to him, and made exactly the same declaration as M. Ant. Girardin.

J. Bte. Becquet also appeared and made oath to tell the truth and said that he was one day at the house of M. Ant. Harmand, and, having noticed that the canoes were in ruins, asked the named Gassien why he did not put them in a place of safety, to which the latter replied that he was expecting M. Gaffé to choose one in order to safe-guard the other.

The said Harmand brings forward Pierre Gassien, who, after having made oath to tell the truth, said that he had summoned M. Gaffé and told him to choose one of the two canoes belonging to M. Ant. Harmand, upon which M. Gaffé had pointed out the one, which he would take; and that he, the witness, had said to M. Gaffé that it was at his risk, to which M. Gaffé made no answer.

M. Ant. Harmand brings forward a certificate of Fr. Duchenu, in which he declares that he knew that M. Gaffé was at the said Harmand's with Dubois, one of his men, and that they had chosen a canoe for the pirogue without, however, taking it away.

The said Harmand brings forward the named Dubois as a witness; and after having made oath to tell the truth, the latter said that it is true that M. Gaffé took him to M. Sansfaçon's to choose a canoe and that he had chosen the one which he believed the better; but that M. Gaffé had said that he would take it, if he had need of it; but that he had made no use of it.

The Court decreed that, in accordance with the agreement between MM. Gaffé and Harmand and since it is apparent that M. Gaffé did not use the canoe, his boat should be returned to him in the same condition, and condemned the said Harmand to pay the costs.

M. LEVY and CHARTIER

At the same Court M. Levy sues Michel Chartier for having seventeen planks which the named Charpentier had sold to M. Marchessaux and which the latter had transferred to the said Levy; but the said Chartier had resold these same planks on pretext that the said Charpentier was in partnership with him and owed him money. The Court decreed that the said Chartier be condemned, as it does condemn him, to return the planks aforesaid to the said M. Levy, and to pay all the costs of justice.

BISSONNETTE and QUENEL

At the same Court Jos. Bissonnette sues Pierre Quenel for a pig which was killed in the grain and which had passed through the said Quenel's fence; and he says that the said pig was appraised by Pierre Roy and Fr. Courier at the sum of one hundred livres; and PIERRE PREVOST, Plaintiff, vs. ANTOINE HARMAND, Defendant.

The plaintiff sues the defendant and concludes<sup>1</sup> by his petition of this day that the said M. Harmand should be condemned to pay without delay or to deliver to him one thousand and ninety-five pounds of flour for the balance of his matured notes, and sixteen hundred and forty-six livres in money on his matured mortgage obligation, and for which judgment has been already rendered against the said Harmand.

The defendant was also heard in his defence and brought to the notice of the Court that in so evil times as the present, when the crop has totally failed, he was not in a position to pay without exposing his family to dire need, and that all his present property was already mortgaged to the said M. Cerré; and he begs the Court to grant him a delay till the month of April, at which time he offers to pay the said sum carried in his note and also the flour with interest according to usage.

After considering everything and viewing the documents produced before us by the parties and after carefully examining the circumstances of the time, the Court granted M. Harmand, the defendant, the delay until during the course of April of next year to pay the sum entered in his mortgage obligation and also the seventeen hundred pounds of flour, which he shall deliver at the said time, in default of which he shall pay for it at the rate of seventy livres the hundred in money and besides the interest since the maturity of the notes, the whole without vitiating the mortgage which the said M. Cerré has on the property of the said M. Harmand, which we sufficiently authorize by these presents; and in case that the said M. Prevost, who is acting for the said M. Cerré, does not find the property of the said M. Harmand sufficient to be answerable for the said sums and flour, he is permitted to demand surety from the said M. Harmand for his greater security, and we condemn the said M. Harmand to this, and furthermore to pay all costs and expenses of the special session, which shall be advanced without delay by the said M. Prevost according to the memorandum which will be furnished him by the clerk, reserving to him recourse for his reimbursement against the said M. Harmand.

house and taken it, under pretext, he said, that the negro [of the] said plaintiff owed it to him, and that when he went to the defendant's house to get the said coat that the defendant had told the said plaintiff that he never mixed himself up in these affaires.

The defendant answers that his negro had sold some cloth to the plaintiff's negro in exchange for some cotton; and that since the latter did not keep his agreement, his negro went and took the coat to hold until he should be paid.

The Court decreed that the coat of the plaintiff's negro be returned by the defendant's negro, and that the masters take a hand and see that the bargain, which the two negroes have made, is carried out; and the Court condemned the defendant to pay the costs.

At the same Court M. Ant. Girardin shows the Court that he has already measured a certain piece of land at the Sugar Loaf Spring for the purpose of making a dwelling there according to his petition, which was granted.

The Court adjourned to Thursday, February 3.

<sup>1</sup> It is said that James Piggott was born in Connecticut and was engaged in the privateering service during the American Revolution.—Reynolds, My Own Times, 64. He was commissioned captain of the military associates of Westmoreland Co., Pa. on April 6, 1776, and in October of the same year, captain of the 8th Pennsylvania regiment, and served under General Arthur St. Clair until October 22, 1777. His commissions are in Dr. MSS., 1236-72. Why, and when he came to Illinois rests on traditions handed down in his family, and may be found both in Reynolds and the Dr. MSS. According to these sources, he joined Clark's expedition to Illinois as an independent volunteer and served through the Kaskaskia campaign. He then became a colonist at Fort Jefferson, where he was in command during the siege by the Chickasaws in 1781 (etc.). He then moved to Kaskaskia and in 1783 built Piggott's fort at Grand Ruisseau. Unfortunately for this story of his prowess, his name does not appear in any list of Clark's soldiers.—English, Conquest of the Northwest, ii., 1067. His command at Fort Jefferson is not mentioned in any of the letters of his contemporaries, nor is he mentioned moned and refused to appear. The said Becquet declared that money was owing the said Grandmont by M. Labadie. The Court is of the opinion that seizure shall be made of the sum of one hundred and fifty livres in the hands of M. Labadie for the sum claimed by Bte. Becquet and for the costs.

A petition presented by Jacob Groot, in which he prays that, in order to end the disputes between himself and James Piggott<sup>1</sup> over the land they have taken up at Grand Ruisseau the Court permit them to name arbitrators to draw the line between them.

The Court decreed that the parties shall name arbitrators, whom they shall choose themselves, to draw between their lands the line which is in dispute, for which there will be execution.

Labuxiere, Clerk.

B. Saucier.

At the same Court a petition in satisfaction of honour was presented by François Camus against the named Hardouin. After the parties on both sides produced the certificates of witnesses, which are found to be contradictory, the two parties were heard in their prayers and defences and all were carefully considered and examined; and after the said Hardouin declared in the presence of the Court that he regarded the said François Camus as an honest man and that in the conversation he had held, he had not intended to say that Fr. Camus had stolen a heifer, but that he believed that the one he had seen in the yard was his, we have denied all the demands of M. Camus against the as officer or soldier by any one. This is not absolute proof, for the name of the commanding officer of Fort Jefferson during the siege is not given anywhere, as far as I can find. Captain George was in command in October, 1780.—Va. State Pap. i., 382. It is to be noticed that both the quoted authorities in favor of Piggott name 1781 instead of the correct year, 1780, as the date of the siege. This is interesting, since in 1787 Piggott declared that he took up his residence in Illinois in the year 1780. Pap. of Old Cong. xlvii., 177. As later pages of this volume will show, he was not the principal resident at Grand Ruisseau. See post pp. 280, 500, 605. When Piggott's old commander came to Illinois as Governor St. Clair, Piggott became the prominent man, he had longed to be during the rule of the French court, and was appointed to the position of justice of the court of St. Clair County. — Smith, St. Clair Papers, ii., 165. In 1797 he established a ferry from Cahokia to St. Louis. His daughter described him as a little short of six feet with black hair, blue eyes and fair complexion.

<sup>1</sup> The flood of 1785 was one of the severest in the history of the Mississippi. The water extended to the bluffs on both sides. The people of Cahokia and Kaskaskia were obliged to seek shelter on the higher ground. At Kaskaskia many houses were swept away. The western bank suffered no less severely, and the old village of Ste. Genevieve was deserted for a site more protected from the river.—Dodge to Wm. Clark, Oct, 18, 1785, Dr. MSS. 1M126.

The magistrates being assembled and the Court in session, after carefully deliberating on the unhappy conditions of the time, when there are neither crops nor money; and considering furthermore the loss of the cattle occasioned by the inundations and contagious disease;<sup>1</sup> and considering that the inhabitants of this district on account of all the troubles, which have occurred, are backward in paying their debts and that their creditors without heed to their miseries are having their goods and cattle sold for a low price at three fourths of their value, which is ruining the said inhabitants totally; and wishing to remedy an evil so dangerous and so ruinous to the public, the Court has decided and decides that no creditor can have the property of his debtor sold, as at present, because of the lack of money and peltries, which puts the debtors out of position to pay; but that the goods of the said debtors, which shall be seized, shall be appraised by arbitrators and appraisers and the creditor shall be obliged to take them at the appraised price, if he does not prefer to allow the debtor time on condition of paying interest.

Heard the said Bouvet in his defence, who said that M. Motard had delivered him a boat without tholes and oars and that he had not been able to use it, and that on account of the delay and the decrease there was in the corn he had sold it, and that he did not deny that he owed the said sum. After all was considered, the Court decided that the said M. Bouvet shall pay the sum of five hundred and forty-six livres five sols which he owes M. The Court assembled to remedy the continual abuses, which are daily committed in this village through the liquor which is served to the savages, from which there results effects very dangerous and penicious to the welfare and the tranquillity of the public.

The Court has forbidden and does forbid very expressly all persons, of whatever quality and condition they may be, to give any intoxicating drink, even a draught, to the savages under pretext of social visit, of acquaintance, by way of trade or otherwise, either on their arrival or their departure, on pain of three hundred livres fine and confiscation of the business they have made, and of greater punishment in case of second offense; in regard to which the savages shall be believed on their affidavit without need of greater proof, and the savages shall be held until they have made their affidavit. We reserve, however, to M. M. JEAN DUMOULIN, Plaintiff, vs. PIERRE TROGE, Defendant.

The Plaintiff produced a note against the defendant for the sum of seven hundred and eighty-one livres fifteen sols in money, which is matured, and demands payment.

The defendant acknowledged the note and said that he did not have wherewith to pay at present and demands delay for a week to make arrangements with M. Caillot with whom he had some accounts. The plaintiff replied that until that time M. LaCroix ought not to dispose of forty-five sacks of corn, which he had, belonging to the said Troge.

The Court justly granted the delay of a week to the said Troge and until that time attached for security the forty-five sacks of corn in the hands of M. LaCroix, that orders may be given as may be fitting, when that time is passed.

The plaintiff produces a note for the sum of eight hundred livres in money due by the defendant and which has matured, and prays that the said defendant be condemned to pay to him the amount thereof.

Heard also the defendant, who acknowledged his said note, but says that it was agreed verbally with M. Levy, at the time that the latter made him these advances, to take some notes of the inhabitants in payment; and that this is his agreement, without which he would have taken nothing at M. Levy's.

M. Levy made rejoinder and said that there was no agreement of that kind and persisted that the defendant should be condemned to pay him the said sum without delay, since he did not intend to take bons<sup>1</sup> of the inhabitants in payment.

The said Charles LaCroix maintained that the said M. Levy made a verbal agreement to take the said bons of the inhabitants and it was his convention.

Neither party has been able to give any proof and since the note makes no mention of this agreement, after the parties were heard and all considered and examined, the Court decreed and does decree that there shall be given Charles LaCroix a month's credit to procure from the inhabitants what is due him either in cash or commodities at the price current, which payments in the same kind shall be delivered to the said M. Girardin and Dubuque, magistrates for the fences of the meadows of this village, since the said defendants had refused to make it in the fixed time.

Heard the defendants who said that they had no land in the meadow of this village and that they had made their fence in the Prairie du Pont and that these fences in the common field belonged to some persons of the village who had not made them.

The plaintiff replied that he had made them for the defendants by order of MM. Dubuque and Girardin and that the former had promised him to make them pay. Heard M. Dubuque, magistrate, who has admitted the fact. All considered we condemn the said Lambert and Vaudry to pay each the sum<sup>3</sup> of thirty livres to the said Jean Bte. <sup>2</sup> This probably means the fence, but it might mean any other structure built by the community. The use of the feminine pronoun, however, would point to the idea of la cloture being in the clerk's mind.

The WIDOW BEAULIEU, Plaintiff vs. ANTOINE GIRARDIN, Defendant.

The plaintiff produced a petition containing what follows:

To MM. the Magistrates and President holding the Court of the District of Cahokia.

Gentlemen:

Madame Beaulieu, widow, has the honour to show you that for the space of twenty-three years or more she has been proprietor of a sugar-farm conceded to her by MM. the Missionaries from whom she has all the title deeds therefor; and that some months ago when M. Girardin presented himself at your Court to demand it from you anew, you granted it to him upon the misinformation which he made to you; and that I and also several citizens of this village, having had knowledge of this and judging that this could be only prejudicial, we have shown M. Girardin that he could not take away a property which belonged to us so legitimately and that it would be a great wrong to have work done upon it, seeing that it could only occasion him loss. He resisted us saying that we were too ignorant to judge of that and that he knew the extent of the seignior<sup>y</sup> better than any inhabitant living in this village.

When the time to work on our sugar-farm came, we went thither and found M. Girardin, who forbade us to work or even to go there, and said that if it was necessary to come to extremities he would fight and would prefer to be killed on the spot, and that he had no reserve to make in dealing with rascals.

This report having been made to us we concluded to make our report to you; but M. Girardin, having recognized his fault as

All considered the Court referred the-said petition of Madame Baulieu as follows:

In view of the petition presented to the Court and the pleadings by all parties, and also of a deed dated November 19, 1763, from the vicar or curé of Cahokia, by the terms of which he gave to M. Beaulieu the section of woods which his predecessors had reserved for making sugar, and which was exhibited this day by the widow Beaulieu; and also of our concession made to M. Girardin, dated October 1, 1783: the Court not being able to decide on the validity of either deed, because, when we gave the said concession to M. Girardin, he himself notified Madame Beaulieu on the preceding day to exhibit to us her deeds, if she had any, in default of which he said that he was going to ask for his concession, and she constantly refused and did not wish to produce the deeds in Court; considering the said refusal we believed that we ought to grant the said concession to the said M. Girardin, inasmuch as he had farmed the said land and had had work done on it for three years with the knowledge of all the inhabitants of Cahokia and of Madame Beaulieu without opposition or prohibition by anyone: therefore it is our opinion that, since we do not wish to annul either of the said concessions, we remit this decision to the government which we are expecting, and which will render justice to whomsoever it belongs. Given at Cahokia at the session of the Court, the 14th of February, 1786; and signed on the copy of the present judgment which is written beneath the petition returned to Madame Beaulieu.

<sup>1</sup> Jean Dumoulin was a native of Switzerland. According to Reynolds (Pioneer History, 1773), he was a man of good education and gentlemanly bearing. He must have settled at Cahokia about this time, although his name does not appear as a resident in the census of 1787. See post p. 624. In 1795 he was appointed a justice of the Court of Common Pleas, and from that time on he held many important positions. Like many others, he became wealthy by purchasing from the French their claims to land granted by Congress in various acts to the inhabitants of Illinois. Since the United States was dilatory in settling these claims, the poorer Frenchmen were compelled to part with their rights for a song. Dumoulin died in 1808. Smith, St. Clair Papers, ii., 165.

<sup>2</sup> It is difficult to say anything about this man, since so much that is inconsistent and false has been written. In the Record, his name is written Mailhet; Reynolds calls him Paulette Maillet; in Amer. State Papers, Public Lands, his name is given as Jean Bte. Maillet; and Tassé is sure that his name was Jean Bte. Mallet. This last must be wrong, since Colonel Sargent, secretary of Governor St. Clair, writes it J. Bte. Mayet, evidently a phonetic spelling. Smith St. Clair Papers, 167. The following is possibly true. About 1778 he settled without authorization on the site of the present city of Peoria and soon became the prominent said Chatel gave therefor to the said M. LaCroix this day aforesaid.

On the same day was granted to M. Jean Dumoulin<sup>1</sup> a writ of privileged seizure of all the peltries, other effects and house, accruing from the proceeds of the merchandise, which he advanced to the deceased Bte. Leduc. The said writ of seizure was addressed to M. Mailhet, commandant on the Illinois river.<sup>2</sup>

At the same Court Jacob Groot, American inhabitant, presented a note against John Sullivan by which he claims either thirty minots of corn or that he be paid the price that it is worth to-day.

Heard the said Sullivan, who acknowledged that he owed the thirty minots of corn; but said that he could not deliver it at present.

All considered the Court decided that the said Sullivan shall pay the said Groot, in the course of October next, the corn at the rate of seven livres ten sols the minot, which is at the present time its value and which amounts to the sum of two hundred and twenty-five livres, and that the payment shall be made either in money, lard, flour, corn or wheat at the current price of the month of October, and not in other commodities. In default of payment of this sum at the said time the effects of the said Sullivan shall be sold; and we condemn the said debtor to pay the costs.

trader there. From him the village was called the Ville de Maillet. He had relations with the Cahokia traders and the magistrates of that village regarded Peoria as being a dependency of their district and Mailhet as the commandant of the post. See pp. 389, 417. In Reynolds' time the tradition was preserved that he led a successful expedition against St. Joseph in 1778 as a retaliation on the British for their defeat of the Cahokia expedition of the previous year. This attack by the Cahokians occurred in 1780 and was inspired by Colonel de la Balme. If the tradition in regard to Mailhet is correct, he must have accompanied the Spanish and Cahokia expedition against the British post at the beginning of the next year. See Introduction, p. xcii. Mailhet appears to have extended his trading ventures as far as the Rocky Mountains. He was killed in 1801.—Reynolds, Pioneer History, 97; Tassé, Les Canadiens de l'ouest, i, 241 et seq.; Amer. MM. Jean Bte. LaCroix, President. François Courier.

Jean Bte. Dubuque. Charles DuCharme.

FRANÇOIS CAILLOT, trader of the Spanish bank, Defendant, vs. M. JEAN DUMOULIN merchant at Cahokia, Defendant.

The plaintiff asks that M. Dumoulin be condemned to deliver to him twenty-five sacks of corn.

The said Dumoulin says in defence that the plaintiff by account and agreement promised him a heifer, and that he offered to give him his corn, if he delivered the said heifer, and that he (the defendant) has already delivered two minots of it.

After the parties were heard in their prayers, answers, replies, and rejoinders, the Court decrees that M. Dumoulin shall deliver to M. Caillot thirteen minots of corn and he shall be constrained to do this without delay; and we condemn the said Dumoulin to pay the charges and costs.<sup>1</sup>

At the same Court M. Dumoulin produced an account for the sum of one hundred livres for the wages of one of his men whom M. Caillot engaged.

Heard M. Caillot, who answered that the said employé had worked only eight days at the rate of forty livres a month and that at the end of that time he had left him; that he offered to pay him on the scale of forty livres. The parties heard, we condemn M. Caillot to pay for the eight days' work at the scale of forty livres a month agreed between them, and to pay the costs and expense.

rail fence and prays that he be compelled to deliver the same quantity of rails to her.

The defendant says that he wished to make an arrangement with the plaintiff and that she was unwilling to listen to any settlement. We condemned M. Lecomte to deliver the same quantity of acceptable rails that he burnt, and the plaintiff shall have her fence made at her own expense; and we condemn the parties each to pay half of the costs.

HENRY BIRON, Plaintiff, vs. MICHEL CHARTIER, Defendant.

The plaintiff claims a whip-saw which he says he lent the named Charpentier, and that the latter, when he set out for New Orleans, said to him that he had left the saw at M. Chartier's and that the plaintiff had only to ask the latter for it and he would return it or that he would pay him for it. The plaintiff says that he demanded it of the said Chartier at the time, and that the latter said to him that he would not lose it, that he had it; that a few days ago he asked for the saw again from the said Chartier and that the latter answered that he had made no clear bargain.

Heard the said Chartier, who said that he had no other knowledge than that M. Biron had spoken to him about it and that he did not remember about it; and that he paid the said Charpentier for the saw, and that he could not pay for it a second time.

The Court having asked them if one would accept the other's oath, the said Chartier tendered the oath to M. Biron. Thereupon having caused the latter to make oath on the Holy Gospels, he said and declared that he notified the said Chartier on the departure of the said Charpentier and that the latter promised to pay him for the saw. Whereupon we condemn the said Chartier to pay to the plaintiff the sum of eighty livres in money, and to pay the costs, which shall be advanced by M. Biron and reimbursed to him by the said Chartier; and we order the said Biron to give a month's credit to the defendant.

The said M. Levy presents a petition by which he claims the sum of fourteen hundred livres according to the obligation assured by mortgage of the said Sansfaçon, due since the month of November of last year; and demands that the things mortgaged be sold up to the perfect liquidation, or that there be made an appraisement of the mortgaged property to be delivered to him in payment. These consist of his house, three cows, two of which have calves, and two horses. Whereupon in view of the legitimate claim of M. Levy and the delay of M. Sansfaçon, the Court decreed that the mortgaged property be appraised by arbitrators, and that M. Levy shall take them in payment at the price of the appraisement up to full liquidation of the debt, interest, costs and charges. For the purpose we have named Henry Biron, Bte. Dumay and Philippe Gervais as arbitrators to appraise the mortgaged effects, and these shall make their appraisement this Monday, the fifth of this month, in order that there may be execution; and we condemn the said Harmand to pay the costs, which shall be advanced by the said M. Levy this said day and year.

JACQUES LARDOISE, Plaintiff, vs. GABRIEL BARON, Defendant.

The plaintiff claims two hundred and fifty livres in money for the payment of a horse which he sold the defendant last autumn, which sum he was to pay M. Cadien and has not paid; the plaintiff says that he himself paid Madame Cadien, and he demands costs.

Heard the defendant, who pleaded that he offered to deliver a horse to the plaintiff and that he had no money at present; that he had bought the horse for only forty piastres, which was acknowledged by the plaintiff.

Whereupon the Court after careful deliberation decrees that the defendant shall render to the plaintiff the same horse, on condition that it shall not be maimed or sick or that he shall pay for it the forty piastres, the price of the sale agreed upon between them. We condemn the defendant to pay the costs, which we have set at fifteen livres, for which there will be execution.

The Court adjourned to July 1, 1786.

LOUIS MARCHAND, Plaintiff, vs. LAURENT HAMELIN, Defendant.

The plaintiff demands of the defendant five horses which the latter is retaining and two hundred and thirty-two livres in peltries, according to his account, which he affirmed before the Court.

The defendant says that he agreed at Peoria to give him forty jugs of tafia for a horse; but that the said Marchand was unwilling to take them and that he offered him a horse.

The plaintiff rejoins that the defendant refused him the forty jugs of tafia and that he traded horses with [him]. As to the account produced by the plaintiff, the defendant says that he had no knowledge about the contestations. Hereupon the plaintiff brought forward the named Lacouture for a witness, who, after he had taken the oath before the Court, said that he knew that the forty jugs of tafia had not been delivered by the said Hamelin to the said Marchand; and that he knew that one part of the bill produced had been furnished by the said Marchand to the said Hamelin; and that he knew that the latter had received a horse which he had used last winter.

The plaintiff produced Claude Paneton as second witness, who, after he had made oath, said that he knew that the said Marchand was pledged to M. Duchenaud to go from the Mauvaise Terre<sup>1</sup> to Peoria for 60 livres, and that the said Hamelin summoned Marchand to go for him, and that the former made two journeys for the said Hamelin.

Whereupon the Court, having carefully reflected, non-suited the parties, and the costs are to be divided, that is to say, each one half, for which there will be execution. The said judgment was rendered by agreement between the parties.

LOUIS PILLET, Plaintiff, vs. CLEMENT ALARIE, Defendant.

The plaintiff claims an ox belonging to him, which passed through the defendant's fence and was impaled on the pickets of M. LaCroix's fence, and prays that there be rendered an ox of the same value and that the defendant be condemned to pay the costs.

Heard the defendant, who said in defence that they should not have killed the ox; that they should have waited his return from the hunt and that he would have cured it; that, since they had killed it and sold the meat, he prayed that he be discharged from payment for the ox and that his opponent be condemned to pay the costs.

In view of the bargain made by the said Clement Alarie with the church-wardens of the vestry-board of this parish, according to the terms of which the said Clement Alarie was only bound to repair the interior of the house, which was rented to serve for a parsonage, and of the fault of the church-wardens in not having had the fence repaired, we have decided that the vestry-board shall render a similar ox to the plaintiff, or shall pay the value thereof at an appraised price; and that the church-wardens shall have rendered to them an account of the meat or proceeds therefrom, in order to account for it in the profits of the church, for which there will be execution. We condemn the vestry-board to pay the costs.

Whereupon, after the parties were heard and all examined, the Court decreed and decided that M. Gabriel Baron shall render the little girl to M. Heard M. Motard in his defence, who said that M. St. Jean<sup>2</sup> should have wintered in order to await M. Trudeau or to go and join him in the spring, and that he had engaged him on these conditions; but that he had not been willing to wait, although he had merchandise for sufficient provisions; but that of his own accord he had redescended and abandoned the interests of M. Considering the agreement of the said St. Jean, the two certificates of the named Rivet and Deschamp, all produced by the plaintiff, and other certificates given by the said Rivet to the said defendant, after all were examined, the Court has condemned and does condemn M. Heard M. Todd who said that he brought action personally against the said M. Reilhe and produced in Court a note due by M. Guillon jr. for twelve hundred and five pounds weight of beaver guaranteed by the deceased M. Camp under date of September 23, 1785, without demanding the payment therefor.

Whereupon the Court asked him if he wished to have the cause decided now on this bank or elsewhere, saying that he was free to have it decided by the four arbitrators, as was agreed with M. Reilhe, or by jurors.

To which the said M. Todd answered that he would abandon it for the present and have it decided at another time, that he had only an affair with M. Reilhe.

Whereupon M. Todd having conformed to the order of the Court written below the petition of M. Reilhe, under date of this day and to the prayer of M. Reilhe, the Court condemned M. Reilhe to pay all the costs and charges of the special session. Given at Cahokia at the session of the Court the said day, the the twelfth day of September, 1786.

M. MOTARD, Plaintiff, vs. LAURENT HAMELIN, Defendant.

M. Motard demands of the defendant the payment of his note for the sum of one hundred and four livres sixteen sols in peltries, which is matured. The defendant said that peltries were worth at the time only twenty sols in money and that he never meant to make a note except for one hundred and four livres sixteen sols in money, that he offered to pay the said sum of one hundred and four livres sixteen sols in money and not in peltries.

The said M. Motard answered that it was true that peltries were not worth more than money at the time that the note was accepted; but that, on account of the delay in payment, he demanded that the payment should be made according to the note, and that besides it was for equipment; and that he had sold to the said Hamelin, what he had taken, for peltries and not for money. After considering all, the Court condemned the said Hamelin to pay his entire note for the sum of one hundred and four livres sixteen sols in peltries and this without delay, and to pay the costs, which shall be advanced by M. Motard and reimbursed to him by the said Hamelin.

Le demandeur requiere que le defendeur luy paye le restant de Son Billet Echû duquel il y a Eu ci devant condamnation.

The defendant produced an account of work and of day's labor done at the charge of M. Motard.

Since these accounts could not instruct the Court sufficiently to make it possible to render a just judgment and after examining all, the Court dismissed the parties to plead before arbitrators, before whom they shall produce their accounts.

And in regard to the wheat and crops which they have in partnership, the Court decided that all shall be accounted for in the mass and that the said wheat shall be thrashed at the common expense, that is to say, M. Motard shall furnish a man with his keep and wages and the said Turgeon shall furnish himself with his keep, for the time of the whole thrashing. Without anyone whomsoever meddling with it, the grain shall be divided as follows, one third to Turgeon and two thirds to M. Motard. Yet the seed of the nineteen minots deducted previously by M. Motard, and all the expense of the said crop, as well as some three minots which M. Motard has had sown, and the four minots which Turgeon sowed, shall all be paid from the whole quantity of grain. The threshing-floor of the barn shall be repaired by the said Turgeon and M. Motard at common expense, equally divided.

And for the repairs of the house, which M. Motard demands of the said Turgeon and which the said Turgeon has not made, we condemn the said Turgeon to pay fifty livres to M. Motard for the said repairs. And each shall pay half of the costs of the suit, which shall be advanced by M. Motard, and one half shall be reimbursed to him by the said Turgeon.

MM. Lonval, Deslonchamps and Joseph Lapancé demanded damages for the fences of the church lands, the leases of which were sold Sunday, the 25th of this month. The Court dismissed the case to the next Court for decision, not finding itself complete.<sup>1</sup>

The Court adjourned to April 1, 1787.

J. B. H. LaCroix.

To-day, the first of March, 1787, there appeared at the office of the Court in the presence of the magistrates, Marie Louise Lemire, widow of the deceased Groslé, who was killed by the savages about a week after their marriage; and since the said Groslé, before being married to the petitioner and entering into a community of goods with her, had contracted divers debts, and there is found nothing from which to refund her dower, declared by her contract of marriage, except the sum of two hundred livres, which are in the hands of François Biguier called Groslé, father of the said deceased, and which she claims for her dues, which are for a greater sum; this is the reason why, after examining the affairs of the said deceased and the obligations which he contracted as well before his marriage as for the expenses of the marriage and after the marriage aforesaid, and seeing from the death of the said deceased Groslé Biguier, her husband, that the community of goods which exists is more burdensome than profitable for her, she declared before the said Court and declares that she renounces, as in fact she has renounced, the community of goods, which existed between the said deceased François Biguier called Groslé and herself, on account of the wrong which she would suffer and is suffering from it; and now she declares that she abandons the said community of goods; and that the said deceased contributed nothing, neither gains nor work, thereto; the said widow declares furthermore that she has not entered upon possession in any way either by paying or receiving any thing which may have belonged to the deceased; and that the said François Groslé, father of the deceased, has taken and withdrawn all that which could belong to his said son, and that she claims only the sum of two hundred livres, which the said François Groslé has in his possession, belonging to the deceased, her husband, and

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a general discussion of the problem of the existence of a solution of the system of equations (1) for arbitrary values of the parameters  $\alpha$  and  $\beta$ . It is shown that the system (1) has a solution for arbitrary values of the parameters  $\alpha$  and  $\beta$  if and only if the condition  $\alpha + \beta = 1$  is satisfied. In this case the solution is unique and is given by the formula munity, this caused complexity in the property rights of the families. In the above case the widow found that the succession to the community of goods would be more burdensome than profitable, and therefore she appeared before the Court and made formal renunciation thereof. She thus escaped from all responsibility for the debts of the community. This, however, did not annul her rights in her husband's property, for by the renunciation of her rights to the community, she had revived her dower rights, amounting to a half or a third of her husband's property. Since the parents of her husband participated in making the contract of marriage by giving their consent thereto, the widow acquired a life interest in their property to the amount of her dower. Whereupon the Court condemned the defendant to pay to the plaintiff the amount of what he owed the said M. He said that it was just, if the partition had not been returned, as M. <sup>1</sup> Note in margin by the clerk.

2. The second part of the paper is devoted to a study of the properties of the solution of the system (1) for arbitrary values of the parameters  $\alpha$  and  $\beta$ . It is shown that the solution of the system (1) is a function of the parameters  $\alpha$  and  $\beta$  which is continuous and differentiable with respect to the parameters  $\alpha$  and  $\beta$ .

Heard the defendant, who took exception to the certificate and who said that he owed only for his note; that one had only to present it to him; that he offered to pay it; that he declared he could not pay it otherwise; that it might be presented to him at Michilimackinac or elsewhere and that he would be bound to pay it; that he had given orders to M. Louis Gaud to withdraw money or peltries from M. Mailhet; but that Mailhet had answered that he had to give particulars of the debts to the said Bienvenu, and that perhaps that is the said note in question; that he owed nothing to the said Mailhet otherwise.

The Court denied the prayers of the plaintiff until he should have exhibited the note in question; and condemned him to pay the costs and charges, which were set at fifteen livres. Given in Court the said day and year.

M. MYER MICHAELS, Plaintiff, vs. PIERRE TROGE, Defendant, who was unwilling to appear after having been summoned.

The plaintiff presented two notes due him by the defendant, one for the sum of two hundred and fifty-two livres ten sols in money and the other for one hundred and fifty, the two amounting to four hundred and two livres. After deduction for the installments made, there remain three hundred and fifty-six livres seven sols, which the plaintiff demands that the said Troge pay him without delay, with costs and charges.

The Court, considering that the said Troge did not wish to appear after having been summoned three times at the door of the audience chamber, condemned him to pay to the plaintiff the said sum of three hundred and fifty-six livres seven sols, and that without delay, reserving to the said Troge the right to give surety to the plaintiff, if he wishes to obtain terms; and condemned him to pay costs, which were set at fifteen livres, which shall be advanced by the plaintiff and reimbursed to him by the defendant. Given in Court.

Magistrates.

M. JEAN DUMOULIN, Plaintiff, vs. AUGUSTIN DUBUQUE, Defendant.

The plaintiff claims a sum of two hundred and nineteen livres ten sols in money for several items carried on the account which he exhibited to the Court and he concludes that the defendant should pay him the said sum with costs and charges; and he prays that he be released from the payment for closing up the accounts, which the purchasers made on the lands of the mission, inasmuch as the said lands have been taken back by the vestry-board.

The defendant answers that the agreement with M. Dumoulin was to give him ten per cent on all the sums which he received from the sale of the property, on condition that he pay the costs of the auction; and that this ten per cent was to be divided between the said M. Dumoulin and M. Labuxiere for the deeds which the latter should make, but since he had made none, M. Labuxiere demanded nothing; and that since the vestry-board had taken the property of the said mission, the defendant demanded that he be released from the payment which M. Dumoulin exacts for his renunciation.

Whereupon, because of the contests of the parties and since they are unwilling to submit to an arbitration, the Court named the following jurors to decide their cause. to wit:

widow Giroux some wood to finish his house; and that he was to return some to finish the house of the said widow up to the roof.<sup>2</sup> Whereupon the Court in default of sufficient proofs dismissed the parties to sue before M. BTE. CHARTRAN, Plaintiff, vs. PIERRE TROGE

The plaintiff lays claim to the sum of two hundred and fifty livres due him by Pierre Troge according to his note, which is due, with costs and charges. The defendant said that he did not have the means to pay, that he offered to pay and demanded credit until after harvest and would give surety.

Whereupon the Court granted the said Troge delay until Monday next to have time to sell his mare in order to pay; in default of which the said mare shall be seized and sold to pay the plaintiff, and in case that is not sufficient there shall be seized other goods to complete the payment. We condemn Troge to pay the costs, which shall be advanced and paid by the said Chartran.

M. COURTOIS, Plaintiff, vs. FRANÇOIS RENOUX, Defendant.

The plaintiff lays claim to the sum of one hundred and twenty livres according to the note, fallen due, which is owed him by François Renoux, with costs and charges.

The said François Renoux said that he did not have means to pay at present. The Court condemned the defendant to pay, unless he prefers to bind himself out for the payment at the current wage. We condemn the said Courtois to pay the costs.

The Court adjourned to the first of June, 1787.

JACOB GROOT, Plaintiff, vs. JAMES PIGGOTT, inhabitant of Grand Ruisseau, Defendant.<sup>1</sup>

Declaration of the said Jacob Groot.

Said that on Monday last, the thirteenth of April, while he was in the field with his wife working, his oldest son came to him and said that the child of M. Piggott had been bitten in the face by a dog; that a moment after he went to the blockhouse<sup>2</sup> with his wife to see the child; that his wife had said to him that it would be better to have something to eat; and after that he might go to see the child. On entering into the blockhouse he had heard some women or children, he is not certain which, say that it was his dog which had bitten the child; that after having eaten, he and his wife wished to go out and see the child; that after he went out of his door he saw M. Piggott with his rifle in his hand; that M. Piggott upon seeing them stopped short with fire in his eyes and changed color two or three times, and finally trembling with anger uttered: "What do you intend to do with your dog?" M. Groot answered that he did not know; but that if it was true that his dog had merited death, he would have him killed. The said Piggott answered: "If you kill him that will spare me the trouble of killing him", and at the same moment turning around he saw the dog and wounded it with his rifle so that it died a few days after. M. Piggott stopped where he shot the dog and reloaded his rifle. The wife of the deponent, upon seeing that, went out of the door to make her children enter the house, and she said, "May the — confound you! Why didn't you kill the dog stone dead, and why didn't that hussy of a woman who lives at your house make her bastards remain in the house? If her children had been legitimate, God would not have punished her in this fashion." Groot upon seeing that took his wife by the hand and made her sit on a chair. He deposes that Piggott answered: "God damn you! You call my children bastards, En disant ces propos Piquet avoit Sa Carabine la Crosse apuyée sur le costé droit avec une main sur la platine Et lautre sur le Canon, le Bout tourné Sur le Sain de M<sup>de</sup> Groot, que luy deposant a Entendu les ressort de la Carabine faire du bruit mais quil nest pas sur sil a raté Et dans linstant quil a entendû Craquer les ressorts de la Carabine piquet Setoit retourné Et a pris Sa Corne et a Ramorcé de frais Sa Carabine, luy deposant luy a dit p<sup>r</sup> lamour de dieu de ne pas tuer Sa femme et de prendre garde a ce quil aloit faire Et de Sortir, dieu vous damne Sacré Coquin Bien Souvant vous mavez affronté je vous serviray de même, En disant cela piquet a tourné la teste du costé de la porte et a apercû un homme qui est le S<sup>r</sup> Izaak West assis dans Sa porte qui Etoit vis a vis la porte de luy deposant. Et luy deposant layant suivy. et luy a dit Croyez vous que cela merite Satisfaction. si vous le croyez metez votre carabine a part. mais que piquet navoit pas voulû. quil luy avoit repondu que de ce moment jusques au soir je penseray a ce que je feray. que voyant quil Etoit En danger de Sa vie luy et sa femme ne pouvant pas sortir de Sa maison Sans En craindre les suites il etoit venû pour en demander justice a la Cour. qui est tout ce quil a a dire que cest la pure verité. I will send your soul to Hell." He entered the house with his rifle in his hand, all in a tremble. M. Groot told him not to enter the house with his rifle and to think what he was going to do and to put his rifle outside the door; and he prayed him for the love of God not to kill them in his house. Piggott responded in answering the words of the deponent's wife: "God damn you! I'll send your soul to eternity." While saying these words Piggott had his rifle with the butt supported on his right side with one hand on the screw-plate and the other on the barrel, and the end pointed toward the breast of Madame Groot; and he, the deponent, heard the spring of the rifle make a noise, but he is not sure that there was a flash in the pan, and at the moment he heard the spring of the rifle crack, Piggott had turned and taken his horn and primed his rifle anew. He, the deponent, told him for the love of God not to kill his wife and to take care what he was going to do and to go out. "God damn you, you damned rascal, you have attacked me often enough, I will serve you the same way." In saying that Piggott turned his head toward the door and saw a man, M. Isaac West, seated in his doorway which was opposite the deponent's door; and that before turning his head he had raised his rifle and aimed at the deponent; that as soon as he perceived West, he lowered his rifle and went out of the house and started for his house; and that he, the deponent, followed him and said to him: "Do you believe that this deserves satisfaction? If you believe it, put your rifle down." But Piggott was not willing. That he had answered him: "From now till evening I will think of what I shall do." That he, the deponent, seeing that he and his wife were in danger of their lives and that they could not go out of their house without fear of the consequences, he had come to demand justice of the Court. This is all that he has to say and it is the simple truth.

Jacob Groot.

We summoned the said James Piggott, who said that his intention was to kill the dog, if M. Groot didn't take it upon himself to kill it; that there came a woman of the neighborhood who told him that Groot was not two hundred paces from his house, when the dog bit the child; that he had been about two hours in coming; that the dog had bitten off a piece of the child's nose; that when Groot arrived at his house, he went there to see what Groot was willing to do with his dog, and that Groot had answered that it was just that his dog should die, since it had bitten his child; that he had already notified Groot that his dog had bitten two or three persons before this one; that this time was not to be disputed; that when he shot the dog, he called it outside the blockhouse, and that he wounded it; that there were some children outside and they had opened the door of the blockhouse, and that when the dog entered, he loaded his rifle to try to kill it; that when he was at the door of the blockhouse, he met Madame Groot who reproached him severely for having wounded the dog; that at the time he was not able to give satisfaction to Madame Groot; that he had said to her, "Finish killing it yourself;" that his intention was to kill it and that he believed that the dog had entered into its master's house; that he had entered there to drive it out and finish killing it; that if Groot had not chased the dog out, that it was his intention to kill it himself in the house without harming anybody; that Madame Groot had used bad words in speaking to him of it and in throwing his bastards in his teeth. He had said that his character was better than hers; and he had said to Madame Groot that she was a damned slut and he would send her character to Hell. He says that when he had said that, M. Groot and his wife had understood the thing quite differently, and that the former had imagined, because he had his rifle, that he wanted to kill them; that Groot had badly understood the thing; that he believed, without being very sure of it, that John Sullivan was most of the time at the door; that he never threatened to do any harm to M. Groot or any one of the family; that it was never his intention; which is all he has to say.

We summoned Isaac West as witness produced by M. Groot, who after taking the oath to tell the truth, said that when the dog bit the child, he was in his field, and that he arrived as Piggott was going out of Groot's house to shoot the dog; that Piggott called the dog out of the door of the blockhouse, where he shot it; that he, the deponent, asked Piggott why he had not killed the dog and that Piggott answered: "I have sufficient satisfaction now and I did not wish to kill it;" that Piggott had reloaded his rifle and was in Groot's house and that he, the deponent, was seated at his door opposite Groot's; and that he only saw that Piggott had his gun raised in his hands and was making several movements with it and he heard words of violence, but he could not distinguish what was said; and that he expected to hear the gun fired at any moment; that he was beside himself on account of the fury of the said Piggott; that he really believed that Piggott was going to kill some one; that after all these movements he saw Piggott turn, cock the hammer of his rifle and pour powder into the pan and he reprimed it; and after he had reprimed it, he heard some words which he could not understand, and that Piggott went out immediately. He adds, furthermore, that when Piggott went out, Groot followed him and said to him: "Because of the insult you have done me in coming to my house with your rifle, put it on the ground and we are going to have satisfaction;" but Piggott had refused; that Groot had said: "Since you are unwilling, I am going to see what I shall do between now and evening," which is all that he said he knew. Reading of his deposition was made to him and he said that it contained the truth and persisted in it, and he has signed.

Isaac West.

After consideration of the above affidavits, together with the deposition of the witness, Isaac West, by the assembled Court, the said Court decreed and does decree that the said James Piggott shall find good and sufficient surety to the satisfaction and demand of the said Jacob Groot, and that the bondsman shall be answerable in his person and his property for all wrongs, malefaction, concealed tort, and criminal attempts, which the said James Piggott may practise, plot or incite against the life of the said Groot, of that of his wife and of his family, or against his property, and for this the said solvent bondsman shall be received before M. In view of the petition presented to the Court by M. Louis Lorimier, demanding damages for the seizures which have been made at Ste. Genevieve and at Cahokia by M. Hugh Heward and for that made at Cahokia by M. Dumoulin intrusted with the power of attorney from the said M. Heward.

Heard M. Dumoulin who said that M. Lorimier was still in debt to the partnership and that the latter should be able to have the damages allowed, which he would agree to. As for himself he was not intrusted with the business nor with the attachment, which had been made at Ste. Genevieve before his attorneyship.

Whereupon the Court dismissed the parties to sue before arbitrators, whom they shall choose from either side of the river, in regard to the prayers contained in the said petition so that all be examined by the arbitrators that they may decide what they consider just as well as the costs and charges. Heard the said M. Jean Bte. After all was examined and the Court had complete knowledge of the house, which was blown up, from the testimony of witnesses, the Court decreed and does decree that the estate of the said M. Dubuque shall pay by preference its cost price, sixteen hundred livres in money; that there shall be made a sworn statement by the said Lafleur of the goods and chattels, which he lost, and an appraisal of those which are broken in his house, which was blown up, by two arbitrators named by the Court, all of which is to be paid by the said estate; that there shall be paid the bill of the surgeon as well for his as for his wife's care until their perfect cure; that there shall be allowed him for his day's wages, for the loss of his time since his house was blown up, the sum of three hundred livres, and for all rent of houses and other claims the sum of one hundred and fifty livres, in full satisfaction for all damages up to the present time. <sup>1</sup> The settlement of the estate of Augustin Dubuque occupies the attention of the Court for many sessions. See pp. 313, 323, 371, 375, 378, 393, 429, 513. Dubuque was a trader from Canada and was probably from the same family as Julien Dubuque, the first settler in what is now Dubuque, Iowa.—Tassé, Les Canadiens de l'ouest, i, 239. From the records of the various cases against his estate, it appears that Augustin Dubuque died on November 8, 1787, from the effects of an explosion of a keg of gunpowder. His wife, Archange Pratte, was living in Canada at the time of the accident, and in later cases her rights in the estate were carefully safeguarded by the Court.

which was blown up with all its materials and land and all that which is attached to it, with the exception of the fences which Lafleur shall clear away, shall stand to the account of the estate of the said M. Dubuque. And as regards Tom Brady the Court allows him from the said estate ten livres a day for two months counting from the day that the house was blown up and the payment of the clothing which he had on his body, when he was blown up, on an appraisal by experts and furthermore the cost of the surgeon for bandages, treatment and medicine, in full satisfaction. The Court condemned the estate to pay all the costs of the present special session, for which there will be execution. And permission is given to the said plaintiffs to take as installments or for the whole amount, if they judge it expedient, goods at the auction of the estate, when sale shall be made thereof to the highest bidder. And up to the said time all the estate shall remain in the state it is under the administration of M. Labuxiere and he shall act according as he shall be ordered by the Court. JEAN BTE FELIX, Plaintiff, vs. FRANÇOIS LAPANCÉ, Defendant.

The plaintiff presents a petition against the named René Bouvet, in which he shows that he made an exchange of property with the named René Bouvet, who has gone to Canada in order to receive and put himself into possession of the property which the said Felix exchanged with him; and the said Felix has had certain news that it had been delivered to the said René Bouvet from a letter which he has received from his guardian, who informs him that he is to go and receive his property; and he presents the said petition joined here opposite, in which he demands that François Lapancé should be obliged to deliver into his hands the notes, obligations and other claims, which the said Bouvet left with him on deposit to be delivered to the plaintiff in exchange for the property which the said Felix transferred to him at Sorel in Canada, since it is certain that the said Bouvet has received the property exchanged.

In view of the agreement made between the said Bouvet and the said Felix at the bottom of their contract of exchange according to which the said Bouvet pledged himself to write in the autumn of 1787 from Michillimackinac to François Lapancé, if he received the property or if he did not receive it or if there was likelihood of receiving it, a thing which the said Bouvet has failed to do up to the present—he has only written a letter to Fr. Lapancé asking the latter to deliver him some notes due last Christmas—the Court is of the opinion that the said Bouvet has taken possession of the property exchanged, judging from his neglect to give

The defendant answered that he had been unable to compel the millers to grind his wheat so as to satisfy this claim and that he had enough wheat to satisfy it in flour as he had pledged himself to do. He prays that there be accorded him a longer delay until the millers can make his flour and says that the extra amount of wheat belonging to the public in the said mills is the cause of his being unable to make his payment up to this day.

The Court, having examined the conditions and learning that the mills were not able to supply the need of the public, granted fifteen days delay to the defendant to make complete payment, after which time he is condemned to pay without other delay. The plaintiff replied that he had told him to come and get them before the flood, a thing which the defendant denied. The plaintiff offered proof. He now summoned Michel Pelletier called Antaya, who took oath on the Holy Gospels to tell the truth in regard to the business in question, and he said he knew that they had made agreement together for sixty livres and that Brisson was to make joists for the plaintiff's thrashing-floor for that sum, which is all that he said he knew. said decree shall have its full and entire effect only for the principal sum and for the costs made before the said M. Smith for the said decree. The Court denied and does deny the account of the said Chisholm's expenses, which he has made run up to sixty piastres, and enjoins him from receiving his pay from the hands of the said Clark or from his depositaries. We condemn the said Clark to pay ten livres for the costs of the present affirmation. Given in Court the said day and year. And the Court denied the account of costs of the said Chisholm as being exorbitant and as not being put in due form to justify said expenses; and the said Clark shall pay the costs of the seizure, for which there will be execution.

ROBERT JONES, Plaintiff, vs SAMUEL MORRIS, Defendant.

The plaintiff said that day before yesterday he met at the house of the named Thomas Brady the named Samuel Morris, who was owing him and from whom he demanded his payment; that the said Morris and the said Jones quarreled, used abusive language and made threats; that the said Morris had a stick with which he struck the plaintiff and that he revenged himself by seizing the said Morris by the hair; that the said Morris bit his thumb with his teeth, from which he was maimed; that he demands from the said Morris damages for the loss of his time, since he could not work at his trade of hatter.

The said Morris replied that it was Jones who began the quarrel and that he had thrown at him a rock weighing four or five pounds; that if he had been struck with it, he would have been killed; that the said rock struck the door or the post of the house and made a deep dent in it and that the said Morris saved himself by going into the said house; that it was when he came out of the house that they caught hold of each other and <sup>1</sup> In the morning of July 10, 1788, Alexis Brisson made a brutal attack on Thereze, the widow of John Henson, former trader of Cahokia. The said Court summoned before it the named Jean Bte. Colin, who dwells at the house of Madame Brisson, and who is suspected of having participated in the removal of the effects of the named Brisson and his wife.<sup>1</sup> The said Colin was held in irons. When he was in the presence of the Court and had made oath on the Holy Gospels, we asked him if he had knowledge of the removal or concealment of the effects of the said Brisson and his wife, and if he had not participated therein. He answered that he had no knowledge thereof and that he had not removed nor aided in the removal of any animals or effects; that he did not know who had taken them away; he declared only that Madame Brisson made him carry a whip-saw into the garden. Yesterday at the inventory we asked where this saw was and when nobody showed it to us, we sent to seek it in the garden, having noticed that it was hidden there bound up with a baker's shovel ready to be carried away. The witness now declared to us that it was Madame Brisson who made him carry it into the garden; and he did not wish to confess anything else to all the questions which we put to him.

We asked him what day they had told him to carry the saw into the garden.

He said it was day before yesterday.

We asked if he knew anything else.

He said, "No."

MADAME LACROIX, Plaintiff, vs. LOUIS GROSLÉ, Defendant.

The plaintiff produced a note against the said Groslié for the sum of one hundred and fifty-three livres twelve sols, which the defendant acknowledged; and he said that he did not have means to pay at present, and that he had paid an instalment of six minots and a half of wheat and two fowls amounting to forty-nine livres, which the said lady also acknowledged; therefore there remains a balance to be paid of one hundred and four livres twelve sols, which the Court condemns the said Groslié to pay within a week on pain of seizure; for which there will be execution. The said Groslié is to pay fifteen livres for costs.

The defendant answered that she had no knowledge of the purchase of the horse mentioned in the said note, and that she approved the said account only. Whereupon the Court decided that M. Dumoulin shall wait a month for the return of the said Brisson, and when the month is passed, he shall be free to sue on the most tangible goods of the said Brisson, which he can find, or on those of the said Desjardins, who is equally liable. The said Janot Lapancé having said that he could not pay, and since he does not have the means to satisfy the claim, the Court condemns François Lapancé, reserving to him recourse against his brother, to pay without delay the said sum into the hands of the said Lachanse, and to pay the costs and charges.

The Court set aside the account for damages and condemns the said Clark to pay without delay the forty-two and a half minots of wheat; in default of which it is permitted to seize and sell sufficient for perfect payment with interest and costs, for which there will be execution.

At the same Court.

M. Clamorgan became a party to the above judgment, and he exhibited two notes due by the named Francis Clark, matured since last year, and which amount to the quantity of eleven hundred and forty pounds of tobacco; and he prayed us, as older creditor, to be given preference on the property of the said Clark for his payment; if the Court does not prefer to adjudge the mark in the pound<sup>1</sup> between the said Laforme and the said plaintiff. Whereupon the Court stayed all seizure granted to the said M. Laforme and decrees that the said Laforme shall be paid only his percentage of the assets with M. Clamorgan as first creditor, to which percentage he is restricted. Condemned Clark to pay the costs and charges.

The Court adjourned to the 1st of April, 1789.

M. Jacques Clamorgan presented himself for and in the name of M. Jean Bte. Pratte intrusted with the power of attorney of Madame Archange Pratte, widow of the deceased M. Augustin Dubuque, who died at Cahokia in the Illinois November 8, 1787, and brought suit for dower rights and jointure, which were accorded to the said widow by her contract of marriage, passed between her and the said deceased, on the plea of the renunciation which she has made of the community of goods between her and the said deceased.<sup>1</sup>

The Court having seen the contract of marriage aforesaid under date of October 17, 1778, passed before M. Faucher, notary of the province of Quebec, by which there is settled on the said widow for dower the sum of five thousand livres of fixed dower and three years reversion and for jointure the sum of fifteen hundred livres; and having seen also an affidavit in the form of an appraised inventory of furniture and effects, which are at the house of Madame Dubuque in Canada, made by M. Le Guay and Papineau, notaries, and legalized by M. de Rouville, justice at Montreal, and amounting to the sum of twelve hundred and eighty-two livres one sol, which are to be deducted from the said sum of six thousand five hundred livres; therefore there remains for the recovery by the said widow the sum of five thousand two hundred and seventeen livres nineteen sols; having seen also the power of attorney of the said lady, sent to the said M. Jean Bte. Pratte empowering him to receive her just dues in the Illinois, dated June 7, 1788, duly legalized in good form: all having been considered and carefully examined, the Court allowed and does allow the said Madame Dubuque, widow, the said sum of six thousand five hundred livres for her dower and jointure, from which sum there shall be deducted the sum of twelve hundred and eighty-two livres one sol, which she has retained in her hands according to the statement of the appraisement mentioned above; and consequently there shall be paid to her the sum of five thousand two hundred and seventeen livres nineteen sols to satisfy all her just claims which she has a right to expect from the said estate of the said deceased, her husband, at the Illinois, which sum M. Labuxiere, intrusted with the recovery, will pay to her as soon as he shall have collected funds sufficient to make up the said sum, and there shall be rendered an accounting thereof to him on the receipt, written on the bottom of the power of attorney aforesaid, which he will obtain from the said M. Jean Bte. Pratte, for which there will be execution notwithstanding all opposition and by preference to all other creditors. Made and given by the Court the said day and year.

The 6th of May, 1789, at a special session of the Court held on the petition of François Huberdeau.

The said M. HUBERDEAU, Plaintiff, claiming as preferred creditor, vs. the ESTATE of the deceased AUGUSTIN DUBUQUE in which suit there intervened M. Reilhe, intrusted with the power of attorney by M. Gamelin, and M. Isidore LaCroix, both opposing the said privilege, and of the other part M. de Rocheblave,<sup>1</sup> defendant, also opposing the said privilege.

François Huberdeau sets forth to the Court that he left Canada to come to receive the just dues, which accrued to him from the estate of the late Jean Bte. Huberdeau, his brother, deceased in the Illinois; of which dues the deceased M. Augustin Dubuque received from Simon Huberdeau, his brother, the sum of two hundred piastres gourdes, in order that he might remit them to him in Canada, according to the obligation of the said deceased Dubuque which was guaranteed by Joseph Marie Pepin and drawn before M. Cruzat, commandant of the Spanish side at St. Louis; of which sum there had been offered him in payment by Madame Dubuque in Canada eight hundred and fifty-two livres on condition that he should give a receipt in full for all his just dues in the estate of the said Jean Bte. Huberdeau, his brother, which he refused; and consequently he resolved to come himself to sue for his rights against his brother, Simon Huberdeau, and at the same time to claim from the estate of the deceased Dubuque the two hundred piastres Gourdes which he [Dubuque] ought to have remitted to him in Canada in virtue of the obligation aforesaid under date of May 23, 1786, together with the costs and charges, which he has been obliged to make; and he concludes that the same sum of three hundred piastres should be paid him by the said estate with all costs and charges.

<sup>1</sup> The explanation of this declaration seems to be the following: Isidore La Croix obtained on November 8, 1787, from the justice of the week a writ of seizure against Augustin Dubuque; but the latter died on the day the writ was served. This writ should have been confirmed by the full Court within the week, but this was not done, although some kind of a decree was rendered November 12, 1787, and recorded later. On account of the death of Dubuque, it was disclosed that he was a bankrupt, and his creditors attempted to obtain the rights of preferred creditors; but the Court protected first the rights of those who had been wounded and whose property had been damaged by the explosion of gunpowder, for which Dubuque was responsible, and also the rights of the widow and the creditors living in Illinois. After all these had been paid the creditors from Canada and elsewhere were to divide proportionally the balance of the estate. Isidore La Croix, however, expected that he would be numbered among the preferred creditors because of his earlier attachment, and on May 7, 1788, he did obtain a confirmation of his claim, which now the Court after further investigation disallowed. See pp. 323-327.

M. Reilhe in his said capacity proved that the said M. Dubuque is illegal and because the said deceased Dubuque died at the moment of the seizure, which was moreover only provisional, and because the Court did not decree within the week, fixed by its orders, concerning the validity of the said seizure; 2nd, because the decree which the said M. Isidore LaCroix obtained from the Court, May 7, 1788, is obreptitious and surreptitious, since the Court was not sufficiently informed of the legitimacy of the claims of M. Gigon, represented by M. PIERRE MARTIN, Plaintiff, vs. PIERRE BILLET, Defendant.

The plaintiff prays that the said Pierre Billet be held to deliver to him a cow with her calf, which he has owed him for a long time; to which the said Billet answered that M. Martin had obtained a seizure on a horse, which was lost.

To which the said Martin replied that the horse had never appeared and that the horse was not alive; that the huissier had put it under seizure without seeing it or knowing if it was alive, since it was running in the woods; that the said horse has not appeared since then; that he could not be responsible for the horse in as much as M. Tom, huissier, did not sequester it.

All considered and after the parties were heard, the Court decided that, if the horse is found through the searches, which Pierre Martin shall make for it, it shall be restored by him to Pierre Billet; that, however, it shall be at the risk of the said Billet; that the search shall be made at the suit of the said Pierre Martin; and the Court condemns the said Pierre Billet, after the delivery of the said horse, to deliver without delay the cow and the calf to the said Martin; and condemns both to pay the costs, which shall be paid according to the account, which the clerk will produce, for which there will be execution; and condemns M. Billet to pay for the capture of the horse.

M. Dumoulin said that he had not been notified and that he had an account against the said Tom Brady to produce; and he demanded that the case be dismissed to the next Court. And after the said Daniel McElduff made oath before us on the Holy Gospels to make his declaration sincere and truthful, he declared that on the twelfth of the month of May last — he is not able to tell the exact hour but it was at the break of day — he perceived that the shutter of a window of his house had been forced and that some one had torn away the hinge from the bottom of it, and that it had been done with force in the preceding night, and in a moment he noticed that his negress and her child were missing with several effects and pieces of furniture; that the next day he was informed by some persons that the negress and her child were in the possession of M. Clamorgan, merchant of St. Louis, and that he had been seen on the river with the said negress and child and two negroes whom he had had seized at Ste. Clamorgan made the abduction of the said negress at night from his house; that some days before, the deponent, being at St. Louis, went to see M. Clamorgan in order to pay him or to make arrangements; that he had offered him slaves to make a sale thereof for him; and that M. Clamorgan had offered them to M. Dubreuil and that after having spoken to him himself, the deponent agreed with M. Dubreuil, for the price of eighteen hundred piastres, to sell him two negroes, two negresses and two children; of this sum M. Dubreuil was to remit nine hundred piastres to M. Clamorgan in treasury notes or peltries as instalment on that which he, the deponent, owed, and that he would receive the other nine hundred piastres in hard cash from the hands of M. Dubreuil. <sup>1</sup> At the end of the volume containing the settlement of the Charleville estate,—Cah. Rec., in Belleville, Ill., there has been bound the following letter addressed to Antoine Girardin: "Sir: When I was last at St. Louis, I settled all matters in Difference between me and Mr. James Clamorgan, for which reason and in pursuance of our Settlement I beg that the process issued out of your Court at my Instance, may, (if you & the Court should think proper) be stopped & that no further Proceedings may be made therein.

On my Return from St. Louis to this Place I called at your House with the Intention of giving you the same advice but as I was not fortunate enough to find you at Home I take this opportunity to inform you of it. I am Sir your most obedient & very obliged humble servant, Danl McElduff. Kaskaskia 9th July 1789."

said slaves at Ste. Genevieve at the house of M. Vallé; and this he had done, with the exception of a negress who was in child bed and whom he had agreed to send after her recovery. After the said negroes were sent across to Ste. Genevieve, the said M. Clamorgan, instead of keeping his agreement, obtained by deceit a writ of seizure from M. Peyrez, commandant at St. Louis, to obtain possession of the said slaves and M. Fr. Vallé received an order from M. Peyrez to deliver them to him; and he took them to St. Louis where they are in his possession; and he delivered to M. Dubreuil the covenant which they had signed together; and that some days after, he came down with two negroes to make the house-breaking and abduction of the negress who remained behind, even as the deponent has deposed in the beginning of the present declaration.

That, since such a deception could only be regarded as a manifest theft and nocturnal abduction with house-breaking and manifest fraud, the deponent prayed for a writ against the said M. Clamorgan to prosecute him by criminal action, where he may be found; praying to this end that there be delivered to him a capias for his apprehension and arrest on this bank, if he can be discovered here; and he declares under the oath which he has made that his present deposition is sincere and true.

M. CHARLES CADRON, Plaintiff, vs. MATURIN BOUVET, Defendant.

M. Charles Cadron claims a bell from M. Bouvet which he said he had reserved by verbal agreement and included with the other pieces of furniture which he had reserved by his contract of sale entered into with the said M. Bouvet, and he declared that he had reserved the bell expressly by verbal agreement with the said M. Bouvet.

Heard the said M. Bouvet who said that M. Cadron had sold him the bell and that it was part of the grounds, as it was nailed and attached to two posts set in the earth and planks were nailed above the posts, and that it made part of the land as being attached to and planted therein<sup>1</sup>.

The said M. St. Pierre [M. Cadron ?]<sup>2</sup> replied that although the bell was not expressly reserved in the contract, that he reserved it three times by verbal agreement with the said M. Bouvet.

This the said M. Bouvet denied and maintained that the said M. Cadron had sold it to him, which has been equally denied by the said M. Cadron, who maintained that the bell belonged to him.

In consideration of the prayers, replies and answers of the parties and after having maturely considered that the bell, since it was attached to posts set in the ground and covered with planks, made part of the grounds and is appurtenant to it and consequently could not be taken away without breaking, and that besides there was no specific agreement in writing which proves that the said M. Cadron reserved it particularly, the said Court adjudges the bell to the grounds as making part thereof and condemns M. Cadron to pay the costs of the judgment.

M. St. Pierre, curé of this parish, presented a petition under date of to-day, in which he claims some joists belonging to the church of Cahokia, which are in the house belonging to Pierre

Martin, that was sold by decree at the door of the church, after being seized by virtue of the mortgage which the deceased Dubuque had on the said house; concerning which joists the church wardens made their affidavit at the second crying of the auction, and the said house was adjudged at the third crying to M. Dumoulin for two hundred and five livres. The said Court assembled decrees concerning the said petition that the joists shall be paid for at the rate of three livres the piece by whomsoever it shall concern in accordance with the appraisement which has herebefore been made of them; and that, if there should not be found in the house the quantity that Martin borrowed, what is lacking shall be paid for out of the price of the auction sale of the house.

ISIDORE SAVOY called Cadien vs. M. St. PIERRE, curé.

The plaintiff claims four minots of peas which M. St. Pierre seized and which he allowed to rot in the place where they were seized. The said peas at the rate of 10 livres the minot amount to 40 livres and the said seizure was made for 14 livres, which the said Savoy offers to deduct from the 40 livres. Heard M. St. Pierre, represented by Philippe Engel, who said that the said plaintiff had not made arrangements before his departure for the Little Bluffs.<sup>1</sup> Parties heard, the Court condemned M. St. Pierre to pay to the said Savoy, the plaintiff, the sum of twenty-six livres for the excess of the loss of the peas and to pay the costs, set at 15 livres. Ant. Girardin.

M. Labuxiere set forth that he had made all diligence possible in the collection of the debts due the estate of the deceased Dubuque and had even made his protest at the door of the church, of which the Court has knowledge. Consequently there shall be allowed him for all his labor of collecting the notes, both for those on which nothing has been paid and for those which he has collected, ten percent, after he has made a simple summons to pay through the huissier.

July 5, issued a writ of seizure and arrest to François Chevalier against Antoine Lamarche to be in force until arrangements are made between them.

ISIDORE SAVOY and CATHERINE PENCRASSE, on complaint of his wife, Plaintiffs, vs. JEAN BTE. LABECASSE accused and held in irons for lack of prison, defendant.

The said Catherine Pencrasse accuses the said Jean Bte. Labecasse of coming to her house to ask her if she wished to come with his wife to gather mulberries and that she had answered, "yes;" and that he had taken her behind him on the croup and that he had passed the bridge of the Prairie du Pont and had followed the old road of the enclosures, and that being in the road the said Labecasse had turned off on a little path in the woods; and that she had said to him: "Where are you taking me? This is not the road;" that he had said, after having advanced into the woods: "Get down! I must enjoy you;" that, when she had said that this should not be and that she would not consent thereto, he, having dismounted, had taken her and thrown her on the ground in spite of the cries which she uttered and in spite of all her resistance, and that he had enjoyed her and had violated her, since she did not have enough strength to oppose his undertaking; and that he had even bruised one of her breasts which was already sore; that he had afterwards asked if she wished him to take her to the village and that she had made no opposition because she was in the woods; and that he had brought her back to the bridge, where she had dismounted from behind him; and that he had left her in that place in a condition of greatest affliction.

Heard also the said Labecasse who acknowledges that he had sought out the said Catherine Pencrasse at her house to go for mulberries; and he acknowledges that he had made the proposal to her on the road, but he says he did not lay his hands on her or force her; and he acknowledges that he was in the wrong in having made the proposal to her and that he had been drinking; and he says that the said Pencrasse does not speak the truth, when she says that he forced her; that when he saw that she was unwilling to consent, he had brought her back to the bridge where he had left her. This is all that they have said in regard to their prayers and defences.

All examined and considered the Court knowing, from a recital which has been made to the president of the Court that the said Catherine Pencrasse has once before, two years ago, exposed herself to being forced by the said Labecasse and that she again voluntarily exposed herself to the undertaking of the said Labecasse by having accepted the invitation to go berrying, which he proposed to her, and that in the woods she remounted behind the said Labecasse to return to the village after the pretended violation, which she says had been committed on her person, is of the opinion that she has not avoided nor kept out of the way of the danger of which she complains, but that on the contrary she gave occasion to it. The Court by decree non-suits the parties and imposes silence in regard to the pretended violation, and forbids the said Labecasse to make an attempt on the chastity of the said Pencrasse in the future and sentences him to remain two times twenty-four hours in irons in the custody of the bailiff of the Court, where he shall be fed on bread and water commencing from this day, the present hour, and commands the bailiff to see to it that the present punishment be observed and this because of the attempt which the said Labecasse made on the virtue of the said Pencrasse. The said Court condemns each of the parties to pay half of the costs of the special session for which there will be execution.

LOUIS COSTE, Plaintiff, vs. IGNANCE CHATIGNY, Defendant.

The plaintiff brings complaint against the said Ignance Chatigny that he took an ox of his in the commons and gave it to M. Beausoleil to slaughter on condition of a quarter being reserved for himself, and he said to the plaintiff that he had lost it to him, since he (Chatigny) won it at play; that he, Coste, said to Chatigny that he would not give him any ox, but that he was going to pay him and this the said Chatigny had accepted; that in spite of their agreement the said M. Chatigny had had it taken and slaughtered to-day without order or consent of the said plaintiff and contrary to their agreement.

Heard the said Chatigny who acknowledged that he had agreed with the said Coste to receive the note of the said Coste in payment; but, since he had delayed remitting the note and had refused to deliver the note to François Lapancé, he had said to Beausoleil to make his arrangements about it, on condition that he gave him a quarter thereof.

The plaintiff replied that he had won this ox from the said Beausoleil and that the said Beausoleil had delivered it to him; and that M. Chatigny ought not to have disposed of it nor have paid himself by his own hands, after having agreed to make arrangements with him and to receive the note from the plaintiff.

The said Chatigny demanded the deposition of François Lapancé, who now appeared and after oath had been made by him to tell the truth, said that he was present at the game between the parties, and that, after the said Coste lost the ox, he said to Chatigny, "The ox is yours, it belongs to you," and that M. Alarie who was present said to Coste: "If you do not judge it fitting to come to deliver it, I know it and will show it to you."

M. Bte. Alarie appeared and after oath was made by him to tell the truth, said that he had offered to show the ox to Chatigny, because he knew it; but that Coste had answered nothing, that he had only said, "We will see."

After the parties and the witnesses were heard, the Court condemns M. Chatigny to render, or pay for, a similar ox to the said Louis Coste without delay and annuls the play between them. We condemn furthermore the said Chatigny to pay the costs of the special session, for which there will be execution. These costs amount to two hundred and thirty five livres and shall be paid to the said Coste by the said Chatigny without delay.<sup>1</sup>

M. WILLIAM ARUNDEL, Plaintiff, vs. LOUIS COSTE, Defendant.

The plaintiff demands of the defendant the delivery of six thousand pounds of flour, which he owes him according to his matured notes, and for which the plaintiff cannot wait longer because of his journey to Michillimakinac; and prays that the defendant be condemned to the costs.

Heard the defendant who said that he acknowledged his notes and that he owed the said quantity of flour, and said for defence that he offered to pay, but that he needed some days delay in order to have his wheat thrashed and ground, and to make those pay who owed him, and that he prayed for a sufficient delay; that, at the end of the time which M. Arundel and the Court could grant him, he promised to pay in full.

The Court having seen the matured notes of the said Coste and the crops, the harvesting of which has just been finished, with the consent of the said M. Arundel, granted the said Coste the balance of this present month of August to pay the six thousand pounds of flour to the said M. Arundel and no longer; in default of which after the said time is passed, we condemn him to pay without delay, to do which he shall be constrained by seizure and sale of goods. We condemn him to pay the costs and charges.

M. Gratiot, merchant from the Spanish bank, intervened for Madame Groot, widow, and prayed that there be stayed all suits and that there should not be given any seizures nor rendered any judgments against the estate of the said deceased Groot, her husband, until she has informed herself of the assets of the said estate and of the goods thereof in order to be in a position to pay each creditor, if the estate sufficed.

Whereupon the Court granted M. Gratiot for the said widow from now to the month of November next and no longer in order to obtain the requisite knowledge; and the said Court reserves to itself the right and privilege to attach and seize the said goods

At the same Court.

M. DUMOULIN, Plaintiff, vs. PIERRE LACOSTE, Defendant.

M. Dumoulin brought an account due him by Pierre LaCoste for the sum of two thousand and eleven livres twelve sols six deniers according to his notes and accounts; which notes the said LaCoste recognized as true, and he brought an account, which he claims from M. Dumoulin. The Court decrees that the notes and accounts exhibited by M. Dumoulin, in which is included the costs of the effects which he sent to seek at the Illinois River, shall be paid by preference, since the said M. Dumoulin is first judgment creditor,<sup>1</sup> out of the peltries, sugar and other effects brought down, with the costs of the present suit and of others which shall be made in the matter; and as to the account exhibited by M. LaCoste the Court decrees that the canoe mentioned therein shall be paid for by M. Dumoulin with the other articles, all on the report of arbitrators and appraisers. The Court decrees, furthermore, that the peltries brought down shall be delivered to M. Dumoulin on that which is due him; and if it is not sufficient, the sugar shall be sold to-morrow for cash to the highest bidder up to the equivalent of the said sum and costs; and if there is a surplus, it shall be deposited at this office to be remitted to his other creditors. And there has been deducted by these presents, after examination was made of the account exhibited by the said LaCoste, the sum of eighty-five livres, as the amount of the said account and the value of the canoe and medicine; therefore there is due to the said M. Dumoulin nineteen hundred and twenty-six livres twelve sols six deniers, which does not include the costs of justice.

At the same Court.

M. CLAMORGAN, Plaintiff, vs. PIERRE LACOSTE, Defendant.

The plaintiff demands of the defendant the payment of two notes, one for the sum of fifteen thousand nine hundred and forty-seven livres fourteen sols in money according to his obligation under date of November 30, 1787, drawn up at the record-office of St. Louis, from which it appears that the said LaCoste should pay at Michillimakinac for the release from M. M. Germain said that he claimed from Louis Gaud his horse which the savages had stolen from him; and that he had made a bargain with the said Louis Gaud that if he brought his horse back to him that he would give a cow and her calf to be chosen among his stock; that the said Louis Gaud had brought away the horse, but that he refused to deliver it to him except for a cow and her calf and a bull of eighteen months to boot; that he offered to give the said cow and her calf; but that he was not obliged according to his agreement to give the bull to boot; that the said Louis Gaud was free to bring it back for the price agreed upon or to leave it; and he concludes that the costs of the special session should be found against the said Louis Gaud.

The said Louis Gaud replied that there was no agreement in regard to the facts which the said Germain advances; that it is true that he agreed with the said Germain to do his best to bring his horse away; but that if it cost him more than the value of the cow and calf that he should pay him the extra cost, which has been denied by the said Germain, who maintained that the agreement was only for the cow and calf and he offers to furnish proofs to the Court by witnesses. Whereupon the said Germain summoned M. François Trottier, commandant, who, after the Court summoned him to tell the truth thereof, said that he was present at Louis Gaud's when Germain entered there to reclaim his horse; that he said to Louis Gaud: "Uncle! What are you going to do about it? I have come to get my horse. Your cow and calf are in my yard. Come and choose them;" that Louis Gaud replied: "Your horse cost me more than that. I can't give it to you for the cow and calf. If you wish to give me a bull of eighteen months to boot, you shall have it. Or I have one of like age; if you wish it, I will give it to you and I will keep the horse;" that Germain had not wished to agree to this, and that he had answered: "I agreed with you to give you a cow and her calf. I offer it to you. I have not agreed to give you more and [if it cost more] you should have left my horse."

Have summoned Ignace Grondine whom, after taking oath to tell the truth, we asked if he had knowledge of the bargain of Charles Germain and Louis Gaud; and he said that he had knowledge, since he was in Peoria with the said Louis Gaud as his engagé; and that the said Louis Gaud had sent him with Mailhet to buy the horse and that he had set out with Mailhet; but that having arrived at the Bluffs, he had returned; that on his return Louis Gaud had said to him: "Why have you come back? You should have gone there. You will be the cause that I do not have the horse and I shall not have the cow and her calf, which have been promised me for the horse." This is all that he said he knew.

We have summoned François Grondine, whom, after oath was made by him to tell the truth, we have asked if he had knowledge of the bargain made between Charles Germain and Louis Gaud and he said that some days after Louis Gaud and Germain had made their bargain, he, the deponent, was at Louis Gaud's and asked him, if he wished to bring back for him his mare which the savages had stolen, and that Louis Gaud had said to him that if he was willing to give him a cow and her calf as Germain was doing, that he would bring it back to him, if he found it; and that he, the deponent, had agreed to give him a cow and her calf or forty piastres, if he brought back his mare; but that he had not brought it back; which is all that he said he knew.

We summoned François Duchenu, whom, after he had made oath to tell the truth, we asked if he had knowledge of the bargain made between Louis Gaud and Charles Germain, and he said that he was at Peoria and was walking with Mailhet who had already bought the horse in question for Louis Gaud, and he asked Mailhet what it had cost and that he had answered him: "I have given two barrels of brandy to be chosen among eight and

We summoned Antoine Girardin, a boy and resident, whom, after he had made oath to tell the truth, we asked if he had knowledge of the bargain between Louis Gaud and Charles Germain and he said that he was present at Louis Gaud's the day that Germain came there; that the said Germain said to Gaud: "Uncle, bring my horse back to me and I will give you a cow and her calf; that he, the deponent, was taking a swig and did not give attention to what they may have said further. On the explanatory petition of MM. Laille and Arundel, tradesmen of this post, that some tradesmen of St. Louis were making to M. Louis Gaud, who is greatly in debt, advances which are absorbing the proceeds of the advances which were made to the said Louis Gaud by traders and others individuals of this post, an act which is effecting a wrong and considerable fraud to those on this side, both tradesmen and other individuals of this post, who have made advances to the said Louis Gaud ; the Court in virtue of the petition of M. Laille and M. Arundel and other representatives forbids the said Louis Gaud to make any payment on the other bank, to send across any peltries or payment or likewise any merchandise, effects of whatsoever nature; and it declares, furthermore, the seizure made by M. Roubidou of no value and as not made, until the said Gaud has first entirely satisfied all the claims and debts which he owes on this bank, on penalty of confiscation of the said peltries or payment that he may send and these shall be seized to satisfy the claims of this place, for which there will be execution the said day and year.

There appeared at the record office of this Court M. Ant. Tabeau, merchant of Cahokia, who required the registration of the following decree.

We Antoine Girardin, president and magistrate of the Court of Cahokia, on the representation made to us by M. Antoine Tabeau, merchant of this bank, who has made oath of fidelity thereto and established his domicile in the house of Charles Lefevre, resident of this post, and who, in his quality of citizen of this bank, has learned that the goods of Louis Gaud, trader of this post, had been seized by M. Robidou, merchant of the Spanish bank, under pretext of advances made to the said Louis Gaud, which seizure was annulled by this Court the first of this month, in order that the true citizens of this bank, and known as such, should have the privilege of being paid from the goods of the said Louis Gaud in preference of all other alien merchants who have taken no oath of fidelity on this bank and to the American government.

IN CONSEQUENCE we have permitted and do permit the said Antoine Tabeau, merchant of this bank who has taken oath of fidelity thereto and established his domicile thereon, to seize, distrain and place under the hand of justice all the goods, personal and real, of the said Louis Gaud, as last furnisher; to seize, distrain, sequester and establish a guardian therefor and a depository for all peltries, tallow, oil and other effects which the said Louis Gaud may make and bring thereof to this place by his trades, and also those which he shall be found to have in his possession in his

<sup>1</sup> The case is interesting, when it is remembered that the Spanish subjects were doing their utmost to drive the French from the American Bottom. Although the case was apparently based on a commercial transaction, this attempt to undermine the power of the Court may be due to the same policy pursued by the Spanish at Kaskaskia. THE COURT in session vs. M. JEAN MARIE PEPIN, citizen of the Spanish bank, detained in irons as a prisoner in the custody of Tom Brady, bailiff of the Court.<sup>1</sup>

We have summoned M. Louis Lebrun, inhabitant of this post, of whom, after oath was made by him on the Holy Gospels to tell the truth, we demanded for what purpose M. Pepin had been at his house Sunday the third of January last.

He answered that M. Pepin had been at his house the said day before mass to ask him if he would lend him his house for the purpose of holding an assembly; that he had a petition to present to the inhabitants and that he wished to have this assembly in order to have a court of jurors so that he could appeal from the sentence of the Court and see if he could not obtain relief in his affair; which is all that he said he knew. Reading was made to him of his deposition and he said that it contained the truth and persisted therein; and he said that he did not know how to sign and has made his mark.

We have summoned M. Joseph Lapancé, inhabitant of this village, of whom, after oath was made by him on the Holy Gospels to tell the truth, we demanded what M. Pepin said to him at the time he went to-day to arrest him.

He said that while conducting him to prison M. Pepin had said to him: "Why have they employed the people to arrest me? They are right, because if it had been magistrates, I do not know what would have happened;" which is all that he said that he knew. Reading was made to him of his deposition and he said that it contained the truth and persisted therein; and he said that he did not know how to sign and has made his mark.

The said Court summoned to the chamber of the clerk the said M. Pepin and asked him through M. the President Girardin, why he had reappeared on this bank and in this village yesterday in defiance of the prohibition which had been herebefore made him, without asking permission therefor from the commandant of this post or one of the magistrates of the Court, as he was commanded by our decree of the fourth of January last; and why he had again appeared and remained the past week in this village contrary to this decree.<sup>1</sup>

He has been a long time without answering and, after having summoned him to answer, he has said that he had nothing to say, that it was not here where he would answer.

It was asked him why he said to-day to those who have been to arrest him that they made use of the people to arrest him, that, if it had been magistrates, he would not have permitted himself to be taken so easily.

He said that he had nothing to answer.

The Court having carefully deliberated declared the said M. Pepin a disturber of the public peace in this village, caught and convicted of having wished to excite a sedition against the Court; and he has held in this said village discourses against it, leading to menaces, defiance and outrage on its authority, and other injurious talk; for reparation of which the said Court condemns him to be held in prison in irons under the custody of the bailiff, two militia-men and an officer of the militia for five days; at the end of which time he shall be placed outside of the prison and conducted by the guard to the Mississippi, and commanded to cross to the Spanish part and never to reappear in this village and the dependencies of this district, without a permission of the commandant of this post or of a magistrate, on pain of corporal punishment. We condemn him furthermore in all the costs of the special session, which the Court fixes at the sum of four hundred and forty livres in money according to the account drawn up, which he shall pay before leaving prison, for which there will be execution by privilege and notwithstanding all representations.

M. Arundel, merchant, summoned Michel Pelletier to pay him the sum of forty-four livres in money according to his account, after having demanded it of him.

The said Michel Pelletier replied that M. Arundel had told him that he would not press him and that he did not believe that he would compel him to pay now; that he was surprised that he sent him a summons, that he had relied on his word.

To which M. Arundel answered that he had been to his house to demand of him his payment; and that he was about to leave; that he had need of his money; that he did not remember at all having said to him that he would give him time.

The Court condemned the said Michel Pelletier Antaya to pay in cash and without delay his account of forty-four livres; and condemns M. Arundel to pay the costs, because he agreed not to press the said Antaya and has declared that he did not recollect it, when the said Antaya offered proofs, whereon M. Arundel has submitted for the payment of the said costs, for which there will be execution.

At the Same Court.

M. ARUNDEL vs. JOSEPH CESIRRE.

M. Arundel sues the said Cesirre for an account of the sum of thirty livres according to his account to which the said Cesirre agreed; but which he does not pay, because some one does not pay him. Whereupon the Court condemns the said Cesirre to pay to M. Arundel without delay and to pay the costs and charges.

M. ARUNDEL, Plaintiff, vs. JANOT LAPANCÉ, Defendant, who has been unwilling to appear, after having been called three times at the door of the audience chamber, the summons having been served on him yesterday by the huissier of the Court.

The plaintiff demands of the said Lapancé the payment of his account for supplies of merchandise amounting to the sum of one hundred and seventy-one livres, because of his departure for Prairie du Chien, and since he cannot wait longer.

In view of the refusal of the said defendant to appear after summons was given to him, the said Court condemns him to pay without delay his said account, amounting to the sum of one hundred and seventy-one livres and to pay the costs and charges.

FRANÇOIS TURGEON, Plaintiff, vs. LEFEVRE, smith, who has not wished to appear after summons was given him, and he was called three times at the door of the audience chamber and M. Chatel appeared for him.

The plaintiff demands of the defendant the payment of his wages for mowing grass, which amount to the sum of sixty-one livres. Whereupon M. Chatel said that M. Lefevre had told him that he owed the plaintiff only forty-nine livres. Whereupon the Court condemned the defendant to pay without delay what he owed the said Turgeon, amounting to sixty-one livres and to pay the costs and charges, for which there will be execution.

ANTOINE HARMAND called SANSFAÇON, Plaintiff, vs. M. JEAN DUMOULIN, Defendant.

The plaintiff demands of the defendant a pair of oxen which he sold to him for the sum of 550 livres and a pair of shoes, having accepted from him his note of like sum payable in the month of September next in flour at the price current; which oxen the said M. Dumoulin bound himself verbally to deliver to him on demand. He prayed, on the refusal of M. Dumoulin, that the Court compel the latter to deliver to him the said oxen. M. Dumoulin answered that he offered to deliver the said oxen and that he acknowledged that he had sold them, but that by inadvertance the note of M. Sansfaçon was torn; that he had shown the pieces of it to him; that Harmand acknowledged that he, Dumoulin, demanded, before delivering the oxen to him, that he give surety that he would pay at the said time and that he make another note in place of that which was torn by inadvertence. In view also of the affidavits of MM. Arundel and Isidore LaCroix, witnesses of the conventions of the parties, the Court decrees that the said Antoine Harmand furnish surety to M. Dumoulin, before the latter delivers to him the said oxen, and make another note in place of the torn one; and in default by the said M. M. LAYLE, trader from Canada, Plaintiff, vs. FRANÇOIS LAPANCÉ, Defendant.

The plaintiff demands of the defendant the quantity of 298 $\frac{3}{4}$  lbs. of flour or 119 livres 10 sols in money, which he owes him on his note, and costs and charges. Heard M. Lapancé who acknowledged that he owed the said sum and said that he did not refuse the payment to the plaintiff and offered still to pay it. Heard also the said plaintiff, who said that he had demanded a number of times his payment of the said defendant and that he had always put him off from day to day until to-day.

The Court, on deliberation, condemned the defendant to pay without delay his money in flour or money, amounting to 298 $\frac{3}{4}$  lbs. of flour or 119 livres 10 sols in money, and to pay the costs and charges for which there will be execution.

At the same Court.

The named WADDELL, Plaintiff, vs. PIERRE LAFLEUR, Defendant.

The plaintiff sets forth to the Court that he had bought a cow with calf for fifteen minots of corn and a hundred pounds of bacon with the understanding that it was a good milk cow and without fault; and that he had taken the cow to Grand Ruisseau; but that, sans deffaud Et quil avoit Emmené la vache au grand Ruisseau mais quetant velée Elle navoit pû nourir son veau Et quil Etoit mort la mere n'ayant pû nourir que de plus il setoit apercû que ladite vache navoit que deux trions que les deux autres Etoient Secs, quil avoit fait son payement aud<sup>t</sup> s<sup>r</sup> Lafleur. quil Reque-roit que le S<sup>r</sup> Lafleur luy remete une autre vache prete a veler Bonne Et sans deffaud. ou luy remetre son payement et aux frais et depens que dailleur il ne Croyoit pas que ce fut la meme vache que le deffendeur luy avoit proposé.

<sup>1</sup> The Court never met again, for on the 27th of the month Governor St. Clair established the county of St. Clair. Thus after eleven years of existence the Court founded by John Todd came to an end. — Smith, St. Clair Papers, ii, 165.

after calving, she could not nourish her calf not being able to suckle it, and it was dead; that, moreover, he noticed that the said cow had only two teats, the other two being dry; that he had made his payment to the said Lafleur and that he prayed that M. Lafleur give him another cow ready to calve, good and without fault, or return to him his payment, and pay the costs and charges; that besides he did not believe that it was the same cow which the defendant had offered.

Heard the said M. Lafleur, defendant, who said that he had sold the said cow to the said Waddell in the presence of M. Smith and of Meunier who acted as interpreter; that he warned him to examine her and if she did not suit to leave her and not to take her away, that he did not wish reproaches; that M. Smith had examined her, that Waddell had examined her and that he was satisfied with her, had put a rope on her horns and led her away.

In consequence we have caused MM. Smith and Atchison, to make oath on the Holy Gospels and they have said that they were present and declared to the Court the same as the plaintiff. In view also of the certificate of the named Meunier, who acted as interpreter for the said bargain and examination of the said cow, herewith joined and sworn to before two magistrates of the Court and given because of his departure, the said certificate being in favour of M. Lafleur, and after all was examined, the Court dismissed the parties to the next Court until the arrival of the named Meunier who acted as interpreter and witness, since there is a contradiction between the testimony of the two witnesses of Waddell and that of Lafleur.

To whomsoever it may concern: Inasmuch as Charles Gratiot, Isaac Levy and Jean Baptiste Hubert LaCroix, subjects of the Republic of Virginia and inhabitants of the village of Cahokia, have shown that they have made considerable expense in seeking to procure and collect a capital and a suitable fund for trade with the savages; and inasmuch as it will be in their power to furnish the States with provisions and other necessary things which are at present difficult to obtain: consequently we find it necessary to authorize them to accomplish their desires, as set forth in their prayer for an exclusive trade for a certain time within prescribed limits.

(Folio 8, Cahokia, 1779.)

Now it must be known that in order to empower them better to carry out their patriotic design, I have granted and do grant by these presents to the said Charles Gratiot, Isaac Levy and Jean Baptiste Hubert LaCroix from this day until the first of April next the sole and exclusive power of trade and free traffic within the limits prescribed herebelow: that is to say, commencing at the village of Cahokia, from there ascending the Mississippi up to the mouth of the Illinois river; and from each point and place of the said boundaries we extend their limits on the side of the west [east?] twenty leagues in depth.

Nevertheless it should be known that it is permitted those who have been given permission for the same trade and who have merchandise destined for the same commerce, to dispose thereof within the prescribed limits until the first of October next.

Extract of the Registers of the Magistracy of Cahokia.

To-day the tenth day of the month of September, 1779, there appeared at the office of this Court Marie Aubuchon, bearer of the last will and testament of the deceased René Locat, made before the undersigned notary the 24th of June, which contains what follows:

(Folio 9 Cahokia 1779.)

The year, 1779, the 24th day of the month of June, there was present M. René Locat, inhabitant domiciled in the village of Cahokia, who, having been sick for a long time without loss, however, of intelligence, memory and understanding, as appeared to the undersigned notary and witnesses named below, and considering that there is nothing more certain than death and more uncertain than its hour, and fearing to be overtaken thereby without having disposed of the little property which it has pleased God to give him, has dictated to the said notary and undersigned witnesses his present last will and testament in the manner which follows: In the first place as Christian and catholic he recommends his soul to God the Creator, Father, Son and Holy Ghost, supplicating His divine goodness, by the infinite mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ and by the intercession of the Celestial Court to receive him in the Kingdom of Heaven among the number of the blessed. The said testator wishes and requires that his debts be paid and that if any wrong is found to have been committed by him that reparation be made by his heir hereafter named. He desires first that his body be interred in the cemetery of this parish among the number of the faithful who have departed this life and that there be held fifty masses or services for the repose of his soul during the course of the year. As regards all his real and personal property, inherited or acquired before or after marriage,<sup>1</sup> belonging to him of whatever nature and in whatever place it may be situated, without any reserve he gives and devises it to Marie Aubuchon, his wife, to possess and make use thereof during her natural life and to receive therefrom the usufruct and even to sell and alienate it, if she finds there is need thereof, and to dispose thereof as a thing belonging to her in full right, in case of necessity, during her widowhood; and this is done to give recognition to the good services, labor and care which the said Madame Marie Aubuchon, his wife, has had for him and which he hopes she will have so long as it shall please God to leave them together; and after the death of the said Madame Marie Aubuchon, the said testator substitutes for his sole and legitimate heir the person of Gabriel Marlot, his stepson, to whom he gives and devises entirely and forever in full proprietorship all the real and personal property, inherited or acquired before or after marriage, which shall remain of the said estate after the death of the said Madame Marie Aubuchon, his mother and wife of the testator; that is to say that the said Gabriel Marlot shall take the said estate in the state that he shall find it after the death of his said mother, if he does not prefer to renounce it.

And to each of the other pretendants to the said estate he gives and bequeaths the sum of five sols in full satisfaction of all claims; and he revokes and annuls all other testaments which he may have made herebefore to the prejudice of the present one, which alone he determines to be his last will and testament and Dejean proposes to send you to Detroit to carry some letters, since he knows you and I have said to him that you are competent to make this journey. He will give you twelve hundred francs; it is a good price and I advise you to do it. You will render me a service also seeing that I wish to write for some merchandise. You risk nothing. We will advise you so that nothing will happen to you. If you decide to go there, come here at once. You can engage a savage at Cahokia to guide you seeing that it is necessary for you to travel by the same road which you took with Colonel Labalme. M. Dejean does not wish you to pass by the Post, since that road is not practicable on account of water; besides it is too long. If you think you cannot get a savage, try to get a white man to guide you. If you do not wish to go there, send us an answer at once. I am your servant.

Extract of the Registers of the Magistracy of Cahokia.

On the tenth of April, 1785, to-day, there appeared M. Joseph Labuxiere, guardian of the minor children of the deceased Jean Bte. Jacquemain called Lajoie of Prairie du Rocher, who has required of us the registration of what follows:

Jacquemain called Lajoie of Prairie du Rocher, notify all those who have taken goods at the auction of the deceased Jacquemain, the said auction [having been held] in the present month of April, that the purchasers have to pay for them or [give] their surety for their purchases into the hands of M. Barbau, captain commandant at Prairie du Rocher, who will give them receipts in my absence; in default of which, notice is given to them that they shall pay the costs and charges, which are made in going to them to demand the recovery, and also the interest according to the law and established custom for minors. Made in my domicile at Cahokia April 9, 1785. Signed, Labuxiere. And below is written: Sent a copy to Kaskaskia to M. de Monbreun and M. #### Notice to the Public.

The undersigned being appointed to take cognizance of the abuses of a public nature, which have been committed here in the surrounding places, he is very mortified to see that such abuses are great and frequent; but as the nature of his commission is such that he cannot examine them as he would wish to, and since, besides, it is more glorious to prevent crimes which one fears will be committed than to punish them after they are committed, he warns the public, therefore, by these presents that all persons or person, who after this date shall commit or cause any depredation, robbery or destruction either at Fort de Chartres or at the former college of the Jesuits at Kaskaskia or at the old fort on the moun-

Every person who has in his possession anything belonging to the public is notified to return it as soon as possible.

The undersigned would think himself fortunate, if the persons who are known to have demolished the old college of the Jesuits would profit by this notice to bring to it the materials which they have taken therefrom and to rebuild the structures in the condition in which they were hitherto, since it is hoped that in a short time there will be stationed there in garrison a corps of troops, who will have need of these buildings; and the necessary enquiries concerning these persons will be made, if they neglect this warning. There appeared M. Augustin Dubuque, traveling trader, at present in Cahokia, at the door of the court of justice sitting in the office of the clerk; and after having presented to the said Court the following petition, he has required the registration thereof in this said office; and I have transcribed it on the record of the registrations word for word according to the original as follows:

To M. Jean Bte. LaCroix and MM. the Judges of the Court of the District of Cahokia.

Sirs:

Augustin Dubuque, traveling trader of Montreal, resident at present in this post, and acting by power of attorney of M. Valentine Jautard, lawyer in the said city, has the honor to show you that, in virtue of the decree under date of the sixth of the month of November last, of which it has pleased you to cause him to be informed, he had believed that [he would have received justice] in accordance with the legality of the claims which the said M.

Jautard has made to the property heretofore belonging to the foreign missions situated in this village, parish of the Holy Family, and consisting of a stone house with its lot as well as a plantation and other effects, such as is described by the contract of sale, which M. Jean Lagrange during his life made thereof to M. Jautard by instrument passed before M. Labuxiere, royal notary, dated June 4, 1765, all of which the said M. Lagrange had acquired from M. François Forget Duverger, priest and missionary of the foreign missions and grand vicar of the bishop of Quebec, acting at that time in the name of M. the Superior of the foreign missions of Paris, by instrument passed before the said M. Labuxiere, royal notary of the [Illinois], on the 5th of November, 1763, under the government of M. de Neyon, at the time governor of this country in the service of His Majesty the King of France.<sup>1</sup> The petitioner cannot conceal his surprise, since he knows the probity of the arbitrators appointed by the community of the inhabitants of this village to give their votes on the validity or invalidity of the titles hereinabove mentioned, at seeing with what authority (and if it is permitted without wounding the modesty of the said arbitrators) with what levity they have put aside, annulled and set at naught the instruments passed twenty-five to twenty-six years ago by the hand of a royal notary, at which time the country was under the French dominion and enjoyed an established and regulated justice and when no person in office would have had the temerity to pass or receive any instrument, which did not conform to the laws, without incurring the risks of punishment.

Permit me, gentlemen, to inform you what this right of the people would be, if the Court of to-day, wholly honorable as it is, and what the power which is confided to you would be, did the right exist of setting aside the instruments passed under the French and English governments, under which we have successively passed in the space of about fourteen to fifteen years. What would be the public surety? Would there be any individual who could flatter himself with enjoying acquisitions which he has made or will leave to his descendants, without running the risk of seeing them forfeited? Would not such a power become absurd which instead of watching over the public surety through the maintenance of the laws should give a blow to break them. The right of the people is a right which all civilized nations respect and submit to reciprocally. When the country was surrendered to the English by the treaty of peace, that nation was seen to respect and put in force all acts of justice passed under the French government. Since now we are in the power of the United States, it will be seen that this power maintains in all their force the laws and usages which have existed under the two preceding governments. The conquering powers have the right to add to the country, which they have conquered, the laws which are their own; but not to annul those which were in force before.

The petitioner sets forth to you very respectfully that, in virtue of the power of attorney given him by M. Valentine Jautard, lawyer residing in Montreal, to take possession of the property hereinbefore mentioned, which he had legitimately acquired from the deceased M. Jean Lagrange and which he has enjoyed peacefully during the space of about twenty-one years without interruption or action from any one, and in consequence thereof, he last year caused to be issued in the presence of witnesses and posted, for three months together at the door of the church, a writ against the said mission and its property in the name of the said M. Valentine Jautard as belonging to him, without any one presenting himself to make objection thereto; and judicial sale was made according to the laws and customs of the country at the door of the church which sale, the petitioner understands, is allowed, reserving to the college of the foreign missions the right to have recourse against their agent. The petitioner has the honor to remark to you, gentlemen, that when he gave his signature to submit himself to the decision of the arbitrators, he did not believe that he had an affair with the interested parties. Since they say it or are known to be of the community of the inhabitants, and he does not wish to say by that it is believed the decision was unjust, but he feels that, since they were of the number of the parishioners, they ought properly to have challenged them instead of taking the tone of authority to annul and set aside authentic instruments legally passed under a well-conducted government. The petitioner can see only with pain that the arbitrators aforesaid announce in a passage of their verdict that the said petitioner is provided with authentic titles from M. Jautard and in another they say that he has not sufficient of them, since they demand others. They also dare to advance that M. Abbé Forget left the country at the time secretly, when they know the contrary. Their verdict proves that the Abbé Forget has carried the funds of the mission to France. It is then the mission itself which has acted in this deed, since they have placed the action and conduct in the hands of the said Forget and since no one has made opposition to the departure of the funds, when he set out from the country in the convoy of M. de Neyon, at that time governor of the country. The petitioner ought then to be certain that the said Forget had all power in the administration of this mission; and the inhabitants have had no doubt thereof, since they have acquired property of him; and if even he should not have been armed with a particular power, he has been known as a member of the mission and vicar-general and consequently all the sales or transactions made by him are for the account of the said mission; and it is therefore more than ridiculous for arbitrators to take the high tone of authority of annulling and setting aside sacred acts — a tribunal of civil justice would respect them everywhere. There is only the defect of form which could annul them, but it is forbidden arbitrators to take cognizance thereof. In consideration of this, gentlemen, you should decide to declare the said verdict null and rendered by persons incompetent, and to say that their power does not extend to deciding a question of law, which belongs only to a competent tribunal.

Furthermore the petitioner prays you, gentlemen, to receive his appeal from the verdict aforesaid and to expedite an act thereof in order that he can plead everywhere in regard to whom the rights belong and obtain justice. Presented by me, the undersigned, to the honorable Court of Cahokia, the 15th of February, 1787, at Cahokia. Signed, Dubuque. And now the said petition has been returned to the said M. Dubuque by me the undersigned clerk, after the sitting of the Court, held by MM. Fr. Saucier, presi-

Dubuque, together with the verdict of the deputed arbitrators appointed by the community of the inhabitants of Cahokia, to whom the said M. Dubuque has promised to leave the decision by his writing dated November 7, 1786. The Court has overruled all the prayers and principal observations mentioned in the petition of M. Dubuque, and has confirmed and does confirm the verdict of the said deputies, and decrees that it shall have its full and entire effect notwithstanding all appeal. Given at Cahokia February 19, 1787. Sir:—

As you are not ignorant that I am intrusted by order of the Court with the estate of the deceased M. Augustin Dubuque and you have in your possession a negress and her child belonging to him, I pray you to deliver her with her child to M. Arundel, with whom I have made arrangements to conduct her to Cahokia, where she is to be sold for the account of the estate. By doing this the present letter, which I am sending you, will serve you for a full discharge, through the receipt for the said negress and her child which you will cause to be written at the bottom of the present for fear of all perils and emergencies in regard to your discharge.

I have written in the month of November last via Detroit and the Illinois river to Madame your sister and instructed her to send to you her power of attorney or to any other whom she wishes to choose. If, contrary to my expectations, the negress and her child are refused me, I warn you that I leave her at

Testament of James Moore.

To-day the first of September, 1788, there appeared M. Dorsiere, acting for and in the name of M. Gabriel Cerré, absent, bearer of the testament of James Moore, and he has, for and in the name of the said M. Cerré, required the registry thereof, as follows:

In the name of God, amen, I, James Moore of Bellefontaine of the country of the Illinois, being in perfect health of body, soul and memory, render thanks to God for recalling to memory the mortality of my body; and knowing that the lot of every man is to die once, I make, ordain and constitute this present my last will and testament: that is to say, firstly and the first of all I give and recommend my soul into the hands of Almighty God who gave it and I recommend my body to the earth to be interred in Christian burial and the funeral to the direction of my testamentary executors, that at the general resurrection I may receive it

2. The second part outlines the specific procedures and protocols that must be followed when recording transactions. This includes details on how data should be collected, stored, and reviewed to ensure its integrity and accuracy.

3. The third part addresses the role of various departments and individuals in the record-keeping process. It clarifies the responsibilities of each party involved, ensuring that everyone understands their contribution to the overall system.

4. The fourth part discusses the importance of regular audits and reviews. It explains how these checks help identify any discrepancies or errors early on, allowing for prompt correction and preventing larger issues from arising.

5. The final part provides a summary of the key points discussed and offers some concluding thoughts on the importance of a robust record-keeping system for the organization's long-term success.

Firstly, I give and bequeath to Catherine Moore, my well beloved wife, the third of all my property both personal and real, after my debts shall be all legitimately paid; it is my intent which I wish to be executed during her widowhood. As to the negroes Bingo and Judik, it is my intent that they return to M. Tobias Barshares, if he is willing to take them back and to hold himself responsible therefor to the estate of John Allison; if not, the said negroes shall be sold at auction or sold at private sale, if the testamentary executors judge it best, and their price assured to the use of the estate of the late John Allison; as to all the lands, which I possess at the present time, it is my intent that they be equally divided between my sons except that my son, William, shall have two parts. The cleared lands shall be divided as well as those in woods and in farm-yard at the discretion of the executors hereafter mentioned. I give equally to my son, William, the horse called Pasbai and a book called or entitled "Tragedies of Otway"<sup>1</sup> and the first volume of the "Spectator"; and to my son, John, "The Companion of the Young Man"; and to my son, James, the works of Abraham Cowley; and to Henoeh, the seventh volume of the "Spectator"; and to Milton, "The Paradise Lost" of Milton and the works of M. Savage entitled "The Vagabond"; and to my daughter Mary, the first volume of the works of Shakespeare with an equal part of all my personal goods; and all the remaining books shall be equally divided among all; my son, William, shall have my violin. I ordain and constitute likewise Gabriel Cerré, Shadrach Bond and Thomas Biggs to be my executors of this present last will and testament, to whom I recommend that they leave all my property in the hands of my wife during her widowhood until the boys are of age; and that at that time each of them, as they come of age, withdraw his share; but if there appears to the testamentary executors that there is the least appearance of waste in the property, it is my intent that

Sir:

I am in despair because my affairs here are in such condition that they prevent me from joining with our young men, in order to prove to you the desire which I have of testifying to you on every occasion my attachment and zeal in all that concerns you, and to assure you at the same time of the affection, which you have so worthily earned from all the citizens of this village, whom, I flatter myself, you will see on all occasions zealous for and entirely devoted to everything which concerns the interest of the cause, of which you are the defender in this country. McCARTY TO HIS WIFE, APRIL 28, 1779.<sup>1</sup>

My dear wife:—This is the last time that I shall write you this year, one by the posts of St. Martin and that by your brother etc.<sup>2</sup> For some time past I have had to dream of you and my dear daughter. I wish to God that you might be here, since I have great fear for them and you. Try, my dear wife, to come with some one to join me here with them. Is it possible, my dear, that you cannot find any one? There is Madame Captain McDurald who wishes that you were here to see me in my uniform of orderly. I am captain in the Illinois battalion and aid-de-camp of the commander in chief of the western department. There you are, you will tell me, very suddenly advanced; but it is true I am seeking in this time of trouble to establish a fortune for our children and I cannot do it for ourselves; but if that be nothing to you [?], you will be well fixed in case of my death. Your pension is assured by sending to the State or Republic of Virginia. My mill in my absence has been carried away by the great downpour of rain; but my general has promised me that he will have a regiment encamp in the spring at the mill in order to set it up again. Try then, my dear wife, to come and join me. No doubt you have heard people speak of me, for I was prominent in the capture of Governor Hamilton, and I flatter myself that I rendered him service, of which he has had need on account of the murders, which he has caused to be committed daily on the wives and children of my compatriots; and I believe that, if the traders of the Mississippi render me justice, I am dear to them on account of the care which I have taken against the savages etc and which I am taking constantly. Dear wife, try to join me and your family; your cousin hopes it, if you do not hate me. I am living in hope of seeing you here. With esteem and respect to grandmother, mamma, uncle, baby and aunt; and the French are our allies.

Your affectionate husband

To the Honorable George Rogers Clark, Esquire, Colonel and Commander in Chief of the troops of the State of Virginia in the County of the Illinois and its Dependencies etc.

Sir:

In the deplorable situation in which we find ourselves at present we are deputing to you the person of M. Charles Gratiot, one of our citizens, to set before you our distress and the misery to which the savage nations from all sides are reducing us. We are on the eve of being attacked in our village by considerable parties of savages and will not be able to work at the cultivation of our fields, if we do not have prompt succor.<sup>2</sup> That is why we take the liberty of addressing ourselves to you on account of the confidence and hope which we have in your benevolence and affection, which you have always shown us; but what afflicts us the most is this, that in case you send us many men, we should not have the provisions which would be necessary for them. M. Gartiott can easily inform you of the capacity of our village and we have charged him to confer with you for this purpose; for we have placed all our confidence therein and that you will only work hand and hand with us to procure us peace and repose and we will not cease making prayers to Heaven for your preservation and prosperity.

We have the honor of being, sir, your very humble and devoted servants. In the name of the citizens of Cahokia, the eleventh of April, 1780.

A L'Honorable Cour du District des Cahoskias

Messieurs:

Cadien Lausage a l'honneur de vous représenter très respectueusement qu'ayant laissé en depot l'autonne dern<sup>re</sup> une Carabine chez Veuve Germain Jaquet pour trois Cent livres de farine que le Suppliant devoit a la ditte Dame etant sur son depart pour les Pays d'enhaut ou ses affaires l'appeloit, qu'en outres qu'il avoit laissé la ditte Carabine sur les pretentions qu'en avoit formé le S<sup>r</sup> Ch<sup>l</sup> Gratiot disant quelle avoit été prise a un sauvage l'autonne dern<sup>re</sup> et quil avoit ordre de la retirer.

Mais quelle a été sa surprise lorsqu'a son retour en se village il a voulu aller payer la ditte Dame Jaquet et restirer la ditte Carabine; elle lui a dit quelle avoit été saisie par l'ordre privée de Mons<sup>r</sup> Franc<sup>s</sup> Trotié alors Juge de Police en faveur de Jos<sup>h</sup> Alary pour une somme quil lui devoit le Suppliant payable a printems, et que les dits Sieurs Trotié et Jos<sup>h</sup> Alarry l'avoit forcée a livrer la ditte Carabine; comme le Sertificat de la ditte Dame ainsi que celui de son frere le Prouve.

Sirs:

Cadien Lausage has the honor of showing you very respectfully that he left on deposit last autumn a rifle at the house of Madame Germain Jaquet, widow, as pledge for three hundred pounds of flour, which the petitioner owed the said lady, since he was about to depart for the upper country, where his business called him; that, furthermore, he had left the said rifle because of the claims which M. Charles Gratiot had made to it, affirming that it had been taken from a savage last autumn and that he had an order to take possession of it.

But what was his surprise, when, on his return to this village, he wished to go and pay the said Madame Jaquet and repossess himself of the said rifle, she told him that it had been seized on the private order of M. François Trottier, at that time judge of police,<sup>2</sup> in favor of Joseph Alarie for a sum which he, the petitioner, owed him, payable in the spring; and that the said MM. Trottier and Joseph Alarie had compelled her to deliver up the said rifle, as the certificate of the said lady and that of her brother prove.

The petitioner has the honor to request this of you, to examine carefully, if M. Fr. Trottier was within his rights in issuing, in his capacity as judge of the police, on his private authority and without that of the Court, a writ of seizure for a sum like that, since a justice of the peace of the province of Virginia by himself cannot pass judgment in a suit for more than twenty-five shillings; and to notice, also, that the petitioner had arranged with the defendant to pay the sum, which he owes him, on the Mississippi; that the defendant was to have intrusted the deceased Pajet with his notes, who was to receive the payment for them and which was all ready for delivery to him; but that, the deceased Pajet not having come, the petitioner saw himself under the necessity of keeping the said payment and of carrying it with him, and this he is ready to make to the defendant.

In consideration of this, sirs, that, since MM. Joseph Alarie and Fr. Trottier have by their private authority, and not by that of

Declaration in the name of the inhabitants of the village of Cahokia in the Illinois, sent to M. Mottin de la Balme, pensioner of the King of France and French Colonel etc.

Sir:—

We, the undersigned inhabitants of Cahokia, are well persuaded of the loftiness of your sentiments for us and of the high rank which you hold in the world, concerning which we can no longer doubt, and still more of the illustrious name of Frenchman which you bear and honor, the only name for which we do not cease to sigh for fear that it be extinguished among us and for which we have always been and are still ready to sacrifice not only our property, which is only too small, but our own lives.<sup>2</sup>

These causes for consolation and for others not less legitimate command us imperiously to have so great confidence in your person that we unanimously pray you to consent to listen with favorable ear to the declaration, which we dare to present to you, concerning all the bad treatment which we have patiently suffered, since the troops of Virginia unfortunately arrived in our midst until the present moment.

We do not desire to attempt wearying you with useless complaints, which would serve in no way to free us from an insupportable tyranny nor further for us a happiness more durable in the future and which we hope for soon. That is why we wish only to relate in the most simple and faithful manner the most true things, which they (the Virginians) themselves are incapable of calling in question.

simple et la plus fidelle les choses les plus veritable sur les quelz ils sont eux memes incapable de contester.

Ou les troupes Virginiennes etant arrivés au Kaskaskia il y a deux ans passés commandés par le Colonel S<sup>r</sup> George Rogen Klark, ils se sont saisi de la personne de Monsieur de Rochefort sans que les habitants du dit village se soient mis en devoir de leur faire aucunes resistance, vu qu'ils se declarerent formellement amateurs de la liberté pour laquelle ils ne cessoient de se battre et encore plus constamment fidelles allies de la France leur plus grande protectrice. Il ne leurs fut donc pas possible de faire le moindre signe de violence au seul nom des françois un fois prononcé devant eux.

Ces Habitans enfin peu attentifs a leur propre bonheur et n'ayant point eux memes assez d'esperience pour decouvrir leur fourberie cachée, Sous de fausse apparence d'honetes gens n'y point prevenir les facheuses suites qui les menacoient ainsy que nous et qui nont pas manquer de s'effectuer en effet se sont rendues avec la plus grande crédulité sans meme exiger de voir aucuns Titres qui puissent nullement les eclaircir ny leur prouver par quelle autorité le Col. Clark s'emparoit de leur village, s'aveuglant eux memes du doux espoir de se revoir en bien peu de temps les très humble et fideles sujets de leur ancien et très puissant monarque le roix de France.

Nous avons lieu de croire que les Virginiens voyant la trop grande Credulité des Habitants des Kaskaskias et trouvant en un mot combien il leur etoit facile de faire le conquête d'un pays habité par des gens si credulle et si aisé a gouverner ont sans doute crus à propos de depecher promptement le Capitaine Jos<sup>h</sup> Bowman pour venir s'emparer de notre Village, n'ayant uniquement que trente hommes avec eux et sans estre soutenu d'aucuns titres reconnus ny des Etats unis ny meme de l'Etat de Virginie, ou s'il en avoit s'est epargné la pene de nous les faire voir, ou craignant quelques facheuses suites les voyant nos voisins et meme maitres des Kaskaskias avons proferer de nous rendre plutot que des nous exposer à de plus grandes risques joint à cela les promesses récidivées qu'ils nous faisoient incessamment

When the Virginia troops arrived in Kaskaskia two years ago, commanded by Colonel George Rogers Clark, they captured the person of M. de Rocheblave without the inhabitants of said village attempting the duty of making any resistance to them; because they explicitly declared themselves lovers of liberty for which they fought incessantly, and still more constantly as faithful allies of the French, their greatest protector. It was not, then, possible for the Kaskaskians to make the least sign of violence to the name of Frenchmen once pronounced before them.

These inhabitants, finally, little attentive to their own happiness and not sufficiently experienced to discover the concealed knavery of the Virginians under the false appearance of honest people or to anticipate the grievous consequences which menaced them as well as us, and which have not failed to take effect, have surrendered themselves with the greatest credulity, without even exacting a sight of any credentials which might enlighten them in any way or prove to them by what authority Colonel Clark took possession of their village, for they blinded themselves with the sweet hope of seeing themselves again in a short time the very humble and faithful subjects of their former and very powerful monarch, the king of France.

We have reason to believe that the Virginians, after seeing the very great credulity of the inhabitants of Kaskaskia and finding, in short, how easily it was for them to make the conquest of a country inhabited by people so credulous and so easy to govern, have undoubtedly believed it expedient to despatch immediately Captain Joseph Bowman to come and take possession of our village. He had only thirty men with him and was unsupported by any recognized credentials either from the United States or even from the State of Virginia or, if he had them, he saved himself the trouble of showing them to us. And we, fearing some grievous consequences in seeing them our neighbors and even masters of Kaskaskia, have preferred to surrender rather than expose ourselves to greater risks. There should be added to this the repeated promises, which they continually made us, of enjoying the sweets of liberty and its advantages and the declaration to us, under oath de jouir de douceurs de la liberté et de ses avantages, et nous affirmant par serment meme que la guerre entre l'Amérique et la grande Bretagne ne pouvoit pas durer plus qu'une année vu que la voix seppuisoient tous les jours et ne tiroit aucune force, généralement que ce peut être d'ailleurs, enfin les protestations reiterés detre toujours sincere et allies fidelles et plus encore l'esperance de nous voir un jour assujettie au joug leger de la France. Nous ont contraint à les recevoir chez nous comme amis croyant bien qu'ils étoient autorisés du Congié Meme et non pas qu'ils formoient un Etat particulier entre eux.

Nous voyant alors épuisés et réduits à souffrir les fieux d'une guerre contre les sujets de la grande Bretagne dont la cause et principal point ne nous venoit que par apart aux Virginiens qui nous avoit conquis. Nous avons crus necessaire d'en prevenir le Colonel Clark qui etablissoit pour lors la minne de faire ou il avoit amené quantité de famille et Beaucoup de Troupes.

Mais ce dernier il faut croire se voyant à charge tant de monde sans vivres, n'at point beaucoup hésité de nous envoyer pres de deux cent hommes, aux quels il s'est joint affectant sous les apparences d'un feau zele le plaisir qu'il avoit de nous estre de quelqu'utilité.

Quelques jours apres son arrivée icy l'armée de nos ennemis composé d'un assez nombreuse quantité de Sauvages cy devant nos fidelles amis, et fort peu d'englois étant débarqué partie sur notre rive et le reste sur les terre espagnolles s'est retirés s'étant borné à quelques tis-tis à leur lache maniere de faire la guerre sans faire un grand Carnage dans notre partie.

<sup>3</sup> The chronology from this point on is difficult to understand. If it is assumed that the narrative follows the chronological order, as from the connectives it appears to do, this attack on St. Louis and Cahokia occurred in the fall of 1778, the retaliation on the Indians immediately afterwards, and after that the troops were left in Cahokia, where they still were in 1780. All this is impossible, for Great Britain was not at war with Spain, Montgomery had returned to Virginia, and the troops were not in Cahokia all the time from 1778 to 1780, as the document itself later shows. Therefore, the narrative as it stands is not chronological.

If we suppose that the writers set down each grievance as it came to their minds, new difficulties arise. The transition to this passage is too abrupt. On page 543 the writers mention Captain McCarty and add, "of whom we have spoken before," although it is the first time his name appears. On page 549, near the end of the memorial, the writers declare that they will now narrate a detailed account of the treatment they have received from the Virginians, and begin with number 1; but that detailed account had already been given.

From these chronological and other inconsistencies, it is evident that the pages of the original memorial had become misplaced before any copy of them was made, and subsequent even, that the war between America and Great Britain could not last longer than a year, seeing that public opinion was being wearied every day and that no conclusion was generally drawn that it would be otherwise;<sup>1</sup> and finally the reiterated protestations that they were always sincere and allied friends; and furthermore the hope of seeing ourselves again subjected to the light yoke of France. Therefore we were constrained to receive them among us as friends, believing indeed that they were authorized by Congress itself and not that they represented a particular state.<sup>2</sup>

Seeing ourselves exhausted and reduced to suffer the scourge of a war against the subjects of Great Britain, the cause and principal point of which reached us only from the side of the Virginians who had conquered us, we have believed it necessary to inform Colonel Clark thereof, who was establishing at that time the Iron Banks where he had brought numerous families and many troops.<sup>3</sup>

But this latter, it must be believed, seeing himself in charge of so great a number without supplies, has not hesitated long to send us almost two hundred men, to whom he joined himself, affecting under the appearance of a false zeal, the pleasure which he had in being of some utility to us.

Some days after his arrival here, the army of our enemy, composed of a sufficiently large number of savages, herebefore our faithful friends, and of very few English, having disembarked, copies have perpetuated the error. That this is true may be easily proved by transposing this passage, including the paragraphs through the one beginning with "On the return from this last ill success", with the passage on page 547 beginning with "We believed also that there", and including the paragraphs through the one which begins with "A heifer, about two years old", when all difficulties of chronology and interpretation disappear.

Such memorials as these, of which I have seen several, were written on folios placed together, but unsewed, and folded once. In this case there must have been four folios, making, when folded, sixteen pages. The first four pages were in correct order when copied, but with the paragraphs which would fall on the pages 5 and 6 the difficulties begin; then there follow four pages of narrative without inconsistencies, and on what would be pages 11 and 12 further difficulties occur. These pages of the memorial, i. e., 5, 6, 11, and 12, were written on the same folio. What has happened is this: one of the first readers of the memorial has folded the folio backwards, so that pages 11 and 12 replaced pages 5 and 6. This was not noticed by the copyist, because the pages of the memorial were not numbered and because each sheet began and ended with a paragraph.

With this change, the paragraph under consideration is easily explained. The "en" refers to the expected attack by the British and Indians in 1780; the "mine de faire" should read mine de fer, which means the Iron Banks south of the mouth of the Ohio, where Clark was building Fort Jefferson. See letter from the Cahokians to Clark, asking for his assistance, p. 531.

Oh! le Col. Clark affectant toujours de vouloir notre bien publique sous pret ex de nous Vanger forma aussitot avec nous et conjointement aux Espagnoles un partis de plus trois cents hommes pour aller ravager dans leur propre village les Sauvages qui etoient venus nous harceller chez nous ayant substitué en Sa place Col. Montgomery pour nous commander et aussitost il nous a laissé.

Il est donc bon Monsieur de vous exposer que les Virginiens n'ayant jamais eu aucune principe d'economie ont été cause par leur peu d'arrangement et mauvaise conduite na point reussi et que notre glorieux projets se sons trouvés par leur faute evannouié, les Sauvages ayant abandonné leurs Villages les plus proches ou nous avons été nous nous sommes vus forcé a relacher et ne pas pousser route plus loin n'ayant plus presque de vivres ny de poudre ny balle ce qu'ils s'etoient chargé de nous fournir eux memes. l'un des plus grand sujet pour lequel se plaignent tous les jeunes gens qui ne veulent plus entendre parler de les suivre en quelques lieux que se puisse etre.

Au retour de cette derniere Cacade le Colonel Montgomery nous a proposé de garder les troupes que nous souhaiterons pour la sureté de notre Village, deignez aussi rappeler que nous ne croyons point qu'il nous faisoit cette offre par un Veritable effet de son zéle qu'il nous vouloit montrer mais parcequ'il s'en voyoit luy meme embarrassé. nous avons cru necessaire de garder avec nous cent hommes que nous nous sommes obligé de nourir chez nous et comme nous meme lesquels sont encore chez nous les uns malades et les autres en santées qui ne nous sont qu'a charge et qui dans un tems aussi critique que celui ou nous sommes a present ne daigne point seulement faire la moindre garde puisqu'ils manquent donc totalement leurs engagements nous ne nous croyons plus obligé au soutiens d'un Troupe qui nous infecte et nous ruine en ne nous payant point ce que nous leurs avons jusqu'a ce jour avancé qu'avec un monnoye dont nous ne pouvons rien part on our bank and the remainder on Spanish land, withdrew, having limited themselves to some "tis-tis" in their slack manner of making war without causing a great carnage in our country.

Oh! Colonel Clark, affecting always to desire our public welfare and under pretext of avenging us, soon formed with us and conjointly with the Spaniards a party of more than three hundred men to go and attack in their own village the savages who had come to our homes to harass us, and after substituting Colonel Montgomery to command us in his place, he soon left us.

It is, then, well to explain to you, sir, that the Virginians, who never employed any principle of economy, have been the cause, by their lack of management and bad conduct, of the non-success of the expedition and that our glorious projects have failed through their fault; for the savages abandoned their nearest villages, where we have been, and we were forced to stop and not push on further, since we had almost no more provisions, powder and balls, which the Virginians had undertaken to furnish us.<sup>1</sup> This is one of the greatest subjects about which all the young men complain and they no longer wish to hear talk of following the Virginians to any place whatsoever.

On the return from this last ill success, Colonel Montgomery proposed that we keep the troops which we wished for the safety of our village. Deign also to recall that we do not believe that he made this offer from a true effect of his zeal, which he wished to show us; but because he saw himself embarrassed. We believed it necessary to keep with us a hundred men, whom we are obliged to support at our homes, and like ourselves they are still with us, some sick and others well; and they are only a charge to us and at a time so critical as this present, they do not deign to do the least guard duty. Since, therefore, they fail totally in their engagements, we do not believe ourselves bound to the support of a body of troops, that infect and ruin us by not paying for what we have up to this day advanced to them except with a money with which we can buy nothing; for property infinitely more considerable than ours would be weakened very quickly and avoir des biens infiniment plus considerable que les noirs, s'alterroient bien vitre et s'eppuiseroient enfin si comme nous les s'avanceroient toujours et ne recevoient rien.

Joint à cela encor nous avons l'honneur de vous observer qu'il est arrivé ici dernièrement que le Capitaine Hallars logant dans ce village, s'est adonner a entrer dans la maison d'un Habitant de ce Village, ou étoit logé un Soldat de sa compagnie lequel s'est plaint de la mauvaise nourriture bien qu'il fut à la table de son haute homme chargé d'une nombreuse famille, et qui n'a qu'un bien très mediocre enfin le Capitaine prenant un ton imperieux dit qu'il pretendoit que les soldats fussent bien traité et qu'il lui ordonnoit de tuer ses poulles jusqu'a la dernière, et qu'après il le forcheroient d'acheter ailleurs a prix d'argent n'ayant pas lui meme assez de raison ou n'en vouloit point avoir ny croire qu'il ne tendoient tous qu'a la ruine et insupportable captivité de tous les Habitants.

En outre le major Rich<sup>d</sup> Mc Carty dont nous avons déjà parlé mecontent disoit il du mauvais procedé des Habitants à leurs egards; auroit souhaiter Commander en chef ce village afin de faire prendre une partie des principaux Habitants d'icy pour les mettre au fers et les envoyer ainsy gagner dans la Virginie n'étant pas encor rapasé de la vaine et trop grande credulité avec laquelle il nous ont jusqu'icy abusé.

Il nous plaira aussy croire que dernièrement Major William ayant envoyé chez Monsieur gagné habitant de ce lieux un soldat avec un ordre pour y loger. Cet homme qui depuis un assez long espace de temps avoit eu l'importunité jusqu'au nombre de quatre a la fois et qui en avoit encor un dans le meme moment ne se croyant point obligé de prendre ce dernier par plusieurs fois recidivez le renvoye parrer son ordre refusant constemment de le recevoir Le Major William meme s'emportant en une furieuse Collee s'est munis de deux bon pistolets avec resolution de le luy faire revoire son soldat par la force, en ayant rencontré en chemin ledit gagné il luy a appliqué un de ses pistolets sous la gorge le menaçant bien fort de luy flamber le tette s'il ne vouloit incontinent obeir a son ordre et loger son soldat.

Joined to this also, we have the honor to inform you of what happened here recently. Captain Hallars [Kellar?] happened to enter into the house of an inhabitant of this village where was lodged a soldier of his company, who complained of the bad food, although he was at the table of a host intrusted with a numerous family who has only a very small property. Finally the captain, assuming an imperious tone, said that he meant that the soldiers should be well treated and he ordered the man to kill his fowls up to the last one, and afterwards compelled him to buy elsewhere at the money price, because he did not have or did not wish to have sufficient reason for believing that they were reducing to ruin and insupportable captivity all the inhabitants.

Furthermore, Major Richard McCarty, of whom we have already spoken, discontented, he said, with the bad behavior of the inhabitants towards them, had wished to be chief commander of this village in order to have arrested a part of the principal inhabitants thereof so that he might put them in irons and send them, thus caught, to Virginia, since he is not satiated with the vain and too great credulity by means of which they have until now deceived us.

It will please you also to consider that lately Major William sent to the house of M. Gagné, an inhabitant of this place, a soldier with an order to lodge there. This man, who for a sufficiently long time had had the vexation of as many as four at a time and who had one of them still at the very time, did not believe himself obliged to take this last, and several times sent him back to get rid of his order, and refused constantly to receive him. Major William himself, flying into a furious passion, armed himself with two good pistols in the determination to force him to receive his soldier; and having met on the way the said Gagné, he placed one of his pistols at his neck and threatened fiercely to blow off his head, if he did not agree immediately to obey his order and lodge his soldier.

Dernierement aussi le meme Major William ayant envoye chez un nommé lefevre forgeron pour emprunter quelques Bouteilles de taffia Ce dernier luy a fait repondre que n'etant point maitre puisqu'il le debitoit pour un autre qui le payoit pour ses peimnes il ne luy estoit point possible de prendre sur luy et qu'il étoit prêt a luy en ceder cent pots s'il le souhaittoit moyennant qu'il donneroit de l'argent comptant aussitot et sans attendre d'avantage le Major envoya un officier ou sergent accompagné par six soldats avec ordre de saisir tous les taffias que le dit lefevre pouvoit avoir et ce sans doute au profit des Etats de Virginie, mais ce dernier leur ayant montré le lieux ou ses Brissons estoient referme ils n'ont point osé faire fraction et en a été aquitté au moyen d'un cruche qu'il a été obligé de leurs donner.

Lately also, the same Major William,<sup>1</sup> having sent to the house of a man named Lefevre, blacksmith, to borrow some bottles of tafia, this latter answered that he was not the owner, since he sold them at retail for another who paid him for his trouble, and that it was not possible to assume the responsibility and that he was ready to give him a hundred jugs thereof, if he wished to pay cash. Immediately and without waiting longer, the major sent an officer or sergent accompanied by six soldiers with an order to seize all the tafia which the said Lefevre might have; and this without doubt to the profit of the estates of Virginia; but after this last had shown the place where his liquor was locked up, they did not dare to break in and he has been freed from them by paying a jugfull which he was obliged to give them.

In order that you may better understand the little indulgence which they have for us and the little care they take to win our affections and even more their pitiless manner of governing a people, over whom they see they have taken such an advantage, we tell you that they exacted expressly, and have compelled us to furnish, a considerable quantity of flour to put in their storehouse for the needs of the state, since they wished, they said, to make an expedition for our general welfare, without telling us explicitly where they intended to go or what they wished to do.

Oh! As we have not appeared wholly disposed to consent too blindly to their requisition, they have from that moment determined to put down force by force; and without further delay they sent one of their officers, a sergent followed by some soldiers, to search all the mills of this village in order to make collections on their own account, according to the amount of the flour which they found there and which they could take for themselves. This guard, governed by their evil principles, dared to break the doors, which were locked, and they threatened with their rifles those who were bold enough to make opposition to their infamous violence; and they dared further to mark on the doors of each mill the stamp of the State of Virginia, as a sign that it belonged thereto. Among those who had mills, there was only M. Beaulieu, one of the cap-il ne s'est trouvé que M. Beaulieu l'un des Capitaines de milice d'icy qui s'y est exposé furieusement et contre lequel ils n'ont point osé exercer leur cruelle tiranie. Il nous reste encore à savoir si la crainte ou la honte les a Retenus.

Nous voyant donc ainsy Molesté par nos fidelles alliés au moins qui osoient se servir de ce titre pretendu nous avons sollicité afin que les soldats fussent dispensé dans chaqu'une de nos maisons esperant par la estre moins Captivé et pouvoir mieux conserver nos Bestiaux preferant à notre malheureux sort, la jaine d'avoir chez soye une troupe de Brigans qui loin de nous estre de quelqu' utilité nous sont insupportables et pour les pensions desquels nous sommes forcés à tenir des billets de logement en payement sans nul espoir d'en estre jamais payé.

Nous ne vous dirons point par quel heureux destin nous nous en' ommes trouvés debarassé. Nous scavons seulement que par un bonheur imprevu ils ont été rapellé aux Kaskaskias pour passer leur quartier d'Hyver. Ce qui nous a procuré une grande tranquillité jusqu'a ce printems dernier ou ayant été menacé d'une armée considerable qui se formoit de la part des royalistes pour venir nous combattre et tacher moyen d'achever notre ruinne très persuadé qu'elle etoit avancée a un grand point.

Nous crumes donc apres n'avoir rien à craindre en commercant avec eux nos Marchandises denrées meme nos animaux de toute espece pour leur argent qu'ils nous en asseuré bonnes et qui n'at aucuns cours en ce pays pas meme entre eux ils nous ont aussy chargé d'un nombre immense de lettres de change sur le tresorié de Virginie dont nous ne pouvons rien faire et dont nous sommes infectes jusqu'a present et ce apres nous avoir fidellement promis que ces papiers nous seroient payé en or ou bonnes marchandises à grand prix que nous pouvons commercer et gagner considerablement.

tains of militia of this place, who exposed himself to their violence with fury and against whom they have not dared to exercise their cruel tyranny. We are still doubtful whether fear or shame restrained them.

Seeing ourselves thus troubled by our faithful allies, at least by those who dared to make use of this pretended title, we have petitioned that the soldiers should be billeted in each of our houses, since we hoped thereby to be less held captive and to be better able to preserve our animals, preferring in our unhappy lot the inconvenience of having at our houses a troop of brigands, who, far from being of any use to us, are insupportable and for whose board we are obliged to take in payment notes for lodgment without any hope of being ever paid.

We shall not tell you by what lucky fate we were freed from them. We know only that by an unforeseen good fortune they were recalled to Kaskaskia to pass their winter quarters,<sup>1</sup> which procured for us a great peace until last spring, when we were menaced by a considerable army which was formed by the royalists to come to attack us and attempt means of achieving our ruin, being persuaded that it had reached its height.

We believed, also, that there was nothing to fear in trading our merchandise, commodities and even our animals of all kinds with the Virginians for their money, which they assured us was good, and which had no currency in this country even among themselves. They have also loaded us with an immense number of letters of exchange on the treasury of Virginia, with which we could do nothing and with which we are infected up to the present; and this after having faithfully promised us that these would be paid in gold or good merchandise at a good price, with which we could trade and make a considerable gain.

Not content, however, with having exhausted and ruined us by taking from us generally all our commodities and animals without paying for them and not wishing to permit us to export any to the other bank, that we might obtain therefrom wherewith to recover from our difficulties [?], they threatened with cruel punishments those who should do so without their consent, if de cruelles punitions ceux qui le pouvoient faire sans leur délibération, s'il y étoit surpris et souvant se sentant fort, par la facilité avec laquelle ils nous ont toujours gouverné jusqu'a présent qu'ils font plus qu'a menacer parcequ'ils en viennent a des faits.

C'est a ce moment Mons: que nous entreprenons de vous faire le plus brièvement que nous pouvons le detaille des insupportables manieres d'agire des Troupes de Virginie a notre Egard, nous qu'ils ne la soit de traiter d'amis et alliés fidelles, ils ont droit en quelque sorte parcequ'ils ne trouveroient point ailleurs d'amis si bons ny si doux pour eux.

1. Nous commençons donc par vous rapporter icy que le Capitaine Rich<sup>d</sup> McCarty ayant été renvoyé icy l'année dernière (après l'expédition marquée du Detroit) pour y resider en qualité de Commandant est arrivé avec une petite garnison de quarante Hommes au plus qui se sont logé dans une maison cise en ce Village assez propre et spacieuse pour y loger commodement un certain nombre de soldats (nous voyant dans l'impossibilité de faire autrement) nous nous sommes memes obligé tous unanimement de leur procurer une quantité suffisante de farine Mays et Viandes pour leurs substance qu'ils n'ont pas sans doute trouvé suffisante puisque les soldats ne se gennoient point pour tuer (même devant nous) nos pourceaux et autres animaux sans que leurs Capitaines ou officiers s'empresassent à y mettre ordre quelques representations qu'on leurs fisse.

Probablement un Boeuf de Charue qu'ils ont tué sur la place devant le fort appartenant a un homme pierre Roux que le Capitaine du detachement a payé mais le tort n'a pas été moins grand pour un pauvre Homme a qu'il n'étoit pas possible d'en ravoire un autre pareille.

Une tor d'environ deux ans qu'ils ont tué a Monsieur Trotier qu'il luy ont payé avec un bon encore a estre payé.

Enfin plusieurs motifs aussi sencible qu'ils seroit inutile de decrire dans cette narration croyant ce que nous avons rapportés suffisant pour faire voire la justice de ce que nous avons l'honneur de vous observer Monsieur et qui vous font assi voire que les Virginiens n'ont jamais eu d'autre butte que celui de nous opprimer they should be caught; and often feeling themselves strong on account of the ease with which they have always governed us up to the present, they are doing more than threatening, because they come to deeds.

It is now, sir, that we undertake to make for you as briefly as possible the detailed account of the insupportable manner the troops of Virginia have acted towards us, us whom they were to treat as friends and faithful allies; and they are right in a way because they would not find elsewhere friends so good and so gentle to them.

1. We begin then by reporting to you here that Captain Richard McCarty, having been sent here last year (after the failure of the Detroit expedition) to take up his residence as commandant, arrived with a little garrison of forty men or more, who have been lodged in a house situated in this village sufficiently proper and spacious to lodge there easily a certain number of soldiers. Since we saw the impossibility of doing otherwise, we unanimously bound ourselves to procure for them a sufficient quantity of flour, corn and meat for their subsistence, which they have not found sufficient undoubtedly, since the soldiers made no ceremonies about killing, before our eyes even, our pigs and other animals, without their captains and officers bestirring themselves to provide therefor, when representations were made to them.

There was a plough-ox belonging to a man named Pierre Roux, which they killed on the square before the fort for which the captain of the detachment paid; but the wrong was not less great to a poor man since it was impossible to get another like it.

A heifer, about two years old, belonging to M. Trottier, which they killed, and for which they settled with a bon still to be paid.

Finally several counts as obvious as they would be useless to describe in this narrative, for we believe that what we have reported sufficient to make you see the justice of what we have the honor to call to your attention, sir, and which cause us, also, to see that the Virginians have never had other end than that of Changeant eux memes en la plus insupportable Captivité l'espoir dont il nous avoit flatté en entrans sur nos terres de jouir comme eux memes des douceurs de la plus paisible possession de nos bien et d'une entiere liberté et qu'ils veulent a present nous ravir.

C'est ce que nous sommes tous Capable de soutenir par les serments les plus inviolable et pourquoi nous avons en faire signe pour donner force aux presentes.

Mais nous ne devons nullement douter que le voix de france le plus grand de tous les potentas S'ignore très certainement la triste et déplorable citation ou sont a present reduits ses tres fideles et bien aimés sujets Canadiens et Creole, par la trop grande Credulité que nous avons eu en la fourberie des Troupes Virginiennes et que nous avons crus ses fidelles alliés credulité si funeste pour nous et dont nous ne sommes des abuse que depuis que vous nous avez fait l'honneur de nous aider de vos sages et tres puissant Conseils.

Pouvons nous croire que notre genereux et tres bon pere le roix de france nous abandonnoit aussy a notre malheureux Sort s'il pouvoit une fois connoitre les fonds de nos coeurs, que nous sommes prêts a luy sacrifier nous nous devons croire qu'il penseroit plus avantageusement de nous et ne trouveroit de vray bonheur pour luy qu'en nous procurant a l'avenir un bonheur infinie en nous reprenant sous sa protection et nous declarant ses bien aimés sujets Esperons cheres compatriottes qu'une fois persuadé et certain de notre fidelités de coeur que non seulement il nous reconnoitra pour ses fidelles enfants et nous fournira tous les moyens et secour necessaires avec lesquels nous pouvons secouer le fardeau pesant qui nous écrassent et soutenu par un tel monarque quelle puissance a l'avenir osera entreprendre de nous subjuguier.

C'est donc Monsieur avec toute l'affection et zele que nous vous promettons que vous voudrez bien vous interesser à nos maleurs et parler en notre faveur fasse le ciel que par votre interception nous puissions parvenir un jour a ce que nous aspirons qui n'est autre chose que le bonheur et nous revoir tous françois. Nous n'avons autre chose a vous offrir en otage que la plus grande oppressing us by changing into the most insupportable captivity the hope, with which they had flattered us on entering on our lands, of enjoying, like themselves, the sweetness of the most peaceable possession of our goods and of a complete liberty, of which they wish now to rob us.

This is what we are all capable of affirming by the most inviolable oaths and why we have caused this to be signed in order to give strength to these presents.

But we ought in no way to doubt that the public opinion of France, the grandest of all powers, is very certainly unacquainted with the sad and deplorable situation to which her most faithful and well-loved subjects, Canadians and Creoles, are at present reduced by the too great credulity, which we have had, in the knavery of the Virginian troops and whom we have believed her faithful allies; a credulity so fatal for us and of which we have been disabused since you have made us the honor of aiding us with your wise and very powerful counsels.

Can we believe that our generous and very good father, the King of France, would abandon us so to our unhappy lot, if he could once know that in the depths of our hearts we are ready to sacrifice ourselves; we must believe that he would think more highly of us and would find true happiness for himself only in procuring for us in the future an infinite happiness by retaking us under his protection and declaring us his well-loved subjects. We hope, dear compatriots, that once persuaded and certain of our fidelity of heart, that not only he will recognize us as his faithful children and will furnish us all the necessary means and succor with which we can shake off the heavy burden, which is crushing us. And supported by such a monarch, what power in the future will dare to undertake to subjugate us!

It is then, sir, with all the affection and zeal, which we promise you, that we ask you to be willing to interest yourself in our grievances and speak in our favour. May the Heavens bring it about that by your intervention we may be able to attain that to which we aspire, which is nothing else than the happiness of seeing ourselves again all French. We have nothing to offer you

Sir:

Still detained in the Illinois by sickness, I am waiting with impatience the moment when my health will permit me to rejoin you and render a detailed account of my mission and of my sojourn in these parts.

A man named Clairmont, deputed with six other individuals by the commandant of Michillimackinac, has arrived at St. Louis, intrusted with a letter addressed to the inhabitants of Cahokia in order to move them to receive the messengers and to hold themselves on the defensive against the Spaniards.<sup>2</sup> Don François Cruzat, lieutenant colonel and lieutenant governor at St. Louis, after a minute examination in regard to these envoys, whom he caused to be arrested upon their arrival, and after being informed of the letter mentioned above, has taken possession thereof, and has, thereafter, acted in this affair as a man entirely devoted to the service of the united powers. Since he recognized as absolute masters at Cahokia only the Americans, conquerors of this region, he did not believe that it was his duty to render account to any one except Major Williams, an American and in the employ of the states, in as much as this affair appeared to him purely military.

one would make it appear. It seems almost incredible that both Linctot and Gratiot should be ignorant that, at the time they were writing, two of the British agents were in Cahokia by permission of the Spanish commandant.

avoir fait part de toutes Ses decouvertes il lui a envoyé copie exacte de la Susditte Lettre: cette conduite prudente de la part de Monsieur De Cruzat na pas laissé d'occasionner des rumeurs, des propos indiscrets et dexciter une jalousie outrée dans plusieurs particuliers tant aux Cahos qu'au Kaskaskias qui tous en particulier pretendent etre absolus et les Seuls a qui lon doit rendre compte. Comme ceci pourroit occasionner de la mesintelligence et querelle entre les deux partiés, il seroit bon d'establir en Ces endroits un Maître et Savoir a qui se communiquer en affair d' Importance Sans etre obligé de Se commuier a une populace ignorante, emportée, indiscrete, et Souvent partagée dans ses opignons.

Par un exprés nous venons d'apprendre que le Florida a ete prise par les Espanols. GRATIOT TO G. R. CLARK, AUGUST 1, 1781.

Monsieur

Consequently, after having informed him of all his discoveries, he sent an exact copy of the aforesaid letter. This prudent conduct on the part of M. Cruzat has not failed to occasion murmurs and indiscreet talk and to excite unreasonable jealousy in several individuals both at Cahokia and Kaskaskia, all of whom privately claim to be absolute and the only ones to whom account should be rendered. Since this can cause misunderstanding and strife between the two parties, it would be well to appoint in these parts some one with power and knowledge to whom communications could be made in affairs of importance, so that it would not be necessary to make communications to a populace, ignorant, hot-headed, indiscreet, and often divided in its opinion.

By an express we have just learned that Florida has been captured by the Spaniards. M. de Galvez, governor of New Orleans, who deserves all possible praise on account of the activity intelligence and intrepidity, which he has shown, has possessed himself of Pensacola after ten days of open trenching. I am sending you the detail of this capture as it is reported to M. Cruzat, commandant of this post. The people of Natchez, after having been taken by the same M. de Galvez, have revolted in his absence and taken arms against the Spaniards, whom they have driven out or made prisoners. M. Miro, who has the second rank at New Orleans, has reconquered them. It is not known what will be done to M. Bleomar, author of this revolt and of others.

While awaiting the pleasure of seeing you, permit me to wish your arms all possible success and to call myself with respect, for the public service.

Sir, your very humble and very obedient servant,

Godefroy Linctot.

GRATIOT TO CLARK, AUGUST 1, 1781.<sup>1</sup>

Sir:

I profit by the opportunity which M. Linctot, who is sick, procures me to inform you of the good news, which we have received, of the capture of Pensacola, which M. de Galvez has subjected to the dominion of His Catholic Majesty. From the account which Galvez Gouverneur de la Nouvelle Orlean a Soumise a l'obeissance de Sa Majesté Catholique, l'on peut dire par la Relation que nous avons Reçue icy que ce n'est qu'avec bien des difficultés et par une grande intrepidité de la part de ce General, S'il a conquis cette Ville et cette Province, ou il a eu le Malheur d'etre blessé en enfaissant le Siège mais par bonheur fort légèrement; nous navons eû dans l'arméé de M<sup>r</sup>. De Galvez que trois cent hommes tué et blessé, mais dans celle des Anglois cinq cent ont resté mort sur le Champ de Bataille et treize cent fait prisonniers tous de troupes regléé; Jespere qu'après une prise aussi glorieuse pour les armes d'Espagne, et le desavantage des Anglois dans toute leurs expeditions, que bientot nous aurons une paix heureuse qui nous procurera l'abondance dont depuis longtems nous sommes privés.

Je ne sais cy vous aurés été informé quil y a quelques tems, un Nommé Clairmon envoyé avec Six hommes par le Commandant de Michilimakinac avec une Lettre adressée aux habitans des Cahos et des Kaskaskias, par laquelle il les engagoient de lever des Compagnies de Milice qui Seroient payée par le Roy D'Angleterre afin de Sopposer a leurs Ennemis, Ses hommes etant heureusement arrêté a S<sup>t</sup> Louis Monsieur Don Francois Cruzat Lieutenant Colonel et Lieutenant Gouverneur en ce Village les a arrêté, et a envoyé copie de la ditte Lettre au Major Williams; Sans cette prudence de la part de notre Commandant je ne Sais Comment les Habitans de votre rive en auroient agi, vous Savés ce qu'est un peuple sans chef et ou tout particuliers ce croit en droit d'agir en toute liberté et Selon Sa volonté, Je Sais Seulement qu'il y en à plusieurs qui ont temoigné du mecontentement de ce que M<sup>r</sup> Cruzat ne leur remettoit pas une Lettre qui leurs avoient été adressée, mais toute personnes qui pencerons un peu juste ne pourrons que l'en louer d'en avoir agi de la Sorte.

Depuis votre départ des Cahos l'année dernieré il m'est arrivé bien des évenemens, vous saurés qu'a present ja Suis resident a S<sup>t</sup>. Louis n'ayant pû resté plus longtems dans un village ou il regnoit cy peu d'union par la liberté efrenée qui y regnoit alors, je me reserve a la première entrevue a vous conter tous les desagremens que jy ai essuïé, de plus depuis quelques tems jai été taxcé par trois we have received here, it can be said it is only with much difficulty and by great bravery on the part of this general that he has conquered this town and this province, where he has had the misfortune to be wounded, while conducting the siege, but fortunately very lightly. We had in the army of M. de Galvez only three hundred men wounded, but in that of the English five hundred remained dead on the battle field and thirteen hundred were made prisoners, all regular troops. I hope that after a capture so glorious for the arms of Spain and the disadvantage of the English in all their expeditions, that soon we shall have a favorable peace, which will procure for us the abundance of which we have need for so long.

I do not know if you have been informed that, some time ago, a man, named Clairmont was sent with six men by the commandant of Michillimackinac with a letter addressed to the inhabitants of Cahokia and Kaskaskia, by which he invited them to raise companies of militia, to be paid by the king of England, in order to make opposition to their enemies. Fortunately these men stopped at St. Louis and Don François Cruzat, lieutenant colonel and lieutenant governor in this village, arrested them and sent copies of the said letter to Major Williams. Without this prudence on the part of our commandant, I do not know how the inhabitants of your bank would have acted. You know what people are without a head and where every individual believes himself within his rights in acting with full liberty and according to his caprice. I know only that there are several who have shown discontent, because M. Cruzat did not send to them a letter which was addressed to them; but all persons who think a little justly can only praise him for having acted in such a manner.

Since your departure from Cahokia last year, many events have occurred. You know that at present I am residing at St. Louis, since I could not remain a longer time in a village where so little unity ruled on account of the unbridled liberty which reigned there. I am waiting for the opportunity of the first interview to recount to you all the annoyances which I have experienced; the more so because, some time ago, I was accused by three men of hommes de traison, d'avoir envoyé Ma Berge au Secour de Nos ennemis, je vous prie Mons<sup>r</sup>. de vouloir bien écrire at rendre temoignage de ma conduite a cette Occasion, jespere que Votre certificat pourra retablir mon honneur attaqué et donner du pois a ma justification. [Ms. illegible.] le retablissement de M<sup>r</sup>Linctot pour avoir le plaisir de vous voir et aller faire un tour du Côte de la Virginie.

Permettes moi de vous feliciter Sur votre avancement au Service des Etats Unis, j'espere que l'occasion de vous Signaler ne vous Manquerons pas, je Souhaitte que vos armes soient victorieuse contre tous vos ennemis, et que lon vous voye par tout avec ce courage, cette prudence et Sagesse qui ne vous a jamais abandonée ce Sont les desirs de celui qui est avec respect Votre très humble

Monsieur,

Vous serez puttetre surpris du motiffe qui me fait prendre la liberté de vous ecrire cette present Lettre puisque Je n'ai dautre vue que de vous prevenir de ce qui se passe icy et des intentions de la plus grande partie des Habitans de cette Rives que vous pensé veritablement ou bons ameriquains ou bons Espagnolles bien qu'enterieurement ils ne soient, suivant ce que je puis voir ni lun ni lautre.

Vous en auriez été déjà persuadé il i a meme longtemps si les personnes que vous aviez deputé pour negocier avec vous un Traitté de Commerce dans le Mississipy ou dependences des <sup>1</sup> In March, 1780, Gratiot and Pepin, protected by trading permits from the Spanish commandant and Colonel Montgomery, started with a boatload of goods for Prairie du Chien, at that time in possession of the British. They were associated in the enterprise with Mr. Kay, of Michillimackinac. A few leagues above Cahokia they handed the boat over to a man named Cardinal, who conducted it to its destination where he and the crew were put in prison and the boat confiscated. On escaping, three of the crew sued Gratiot for wages, and made the above accusation against him. This was later withdrawn. The statement by Cardinal is in Can. Archives, B., 97, vol. ii., p. 536. I hope that your certificate will be able to re-establish my honor, which has been attacked and give weight to my justification.<sup>1</sup> [MS. illegible] the recovery of M. Linctot to have the pleasure of seeing you and going to make a tour of the Virginia coast.

Permit me to congratulate you on your promotion to the service of the United States. I hope that the opportunity to signalize yourself will not fail you; I hope that your arms will be victorious against all your enemies and that you may be seen everywhere with that courage, that prudence and wisdom, which has never failed you. These are the desires of one who is with respect your very humble servant,

Sir:

You will be perhaps surprised at the motive which makes me take the liberty of writing to you this present letter, since I have no other than to inform you of what is taking place here and of the sentiments of the majority of the inhabitants of this bank, whom you think indeed are either good Americans or good Spaniards, although they are not all either one or the other, as I can see. You would have been long ago persuaded thereof, if the persons whom you sent to negotiate with us a treaty concerning trade on the Mississippi or in the dependencies of the Illinois [had exercised judgment].<sup>4</sup> The treaty would certainly have been accepted, seeing that it would procure for us the advantage of obtaining our necessities in merchandise all and singular, for which we would have given in payment either our peltries or commodities. But islenois qui certainement auroit été accepté vue qu'il nous procurait l'avantage de tirer nos besoins en Marchandise generalement quelconque pour laquelle nous avons donné en payement soit nos Pelleries ou Denrees. Mais souffrez que je vous dise que vos deputés si sont trop malprise pour esper la reussite de leurs voyages. Vue qu'ils ont arreté a St. Louis ou ils ne devoient pas, par les Espagnolles qui n'ont que de l'avarice mais très peu de connoissance et naturellement ambitieux jaloux et mefiant quand il ne le faut pas, les ont arreté sans raisons, et nous n'avons pu les Ravoir qu'au Moyenne de bon Caution Domiciliés de ce lieu qui ont engagé la meilleure partie de leur bien leurs Corps meme pour les retirer, bien entendus qu'ils seroient garder a vue chez nous sans en pouvoir sortir sous quelque pretexte qui se peutetre sans le plein consentement des Commandants de l'une et l'autre partie. Ils auroient bien pu s'epagner cette Epocque qui nous fait un tort considerable a tous sils si etoient pris comme ils l'auroient pus faire, mais ayant vue moi même que c'a n'etoit qu'un etouderie que cette faut ne dependoit que du peut de Connoissance qu'ils ont pour des affaires d'un telle consequence, Je me suis chargé du soin de Monsieur Langlois qui s'est trouve icy sans nule ressource auquel j'ai Procure au temps [autant ?] qu'il a été en mon pouvoir le moyen de se retirer d'icy et c'est par lui-même que j'ai l'honneur de vous adresser cette Lettre, qui vous informe de la bonne intentions des Habitans de ces Lieux. Je les crois disposés pour [?] mes persuader qu'ils ne seroient pas fâché de se revoir dependant et sujet a la Domination Angloise. Les Besoins les y forcé absolument, ils ne peuvent plus tenir i s ont tous un Besoin urgent des marchandises et je pense qu'un pavillon angloise seroit bien recue chez nous si le parti n'etoit compris que de Blancs, sans qu'il y eut un seul sauvage avec eux, mais s'il y en avoit je douterois fort de l'enterpirse car tout le monde de tous les villages de ce continent sont determiné suivant les apparences a bien rendre leur vie plutot que de ce rendre a des barbares.

Les Commerçants meme ne demanderont peut etre pas mieuť qu'a tenter l'entreprise, le grand Profit qu'il pouroit faire dans la suffer me to tell you that your deputies have made too many mistakes to expect success from their journey; for they stopped at St. Louis, which they should not have done, and the Spaniards, who have only avarice but very little knowledge and are naturally ambitious, jealous and defiant, when there is no need, have arrested them without cause; and we have been able to get them back only by means of offering bondsmen domiciled in this place, who have engaged the better part of their property and even their bodies to release them; and it was indeed agreed that they should be kept in sight among us and that they could not leave here under any pretext whatsoever without the full consent of the commandants of both places. They might have been able to be spared this period which caused a considerable wrong to us all, if they had gone at it in the way they might have done; but since I myself saw that it was only a heedless action and that this fault was the result of the little knowledge which they have for affairs of such consequence, I have taken on myself the care of M. Langlois who is here without any resources. I have procured for him, inasmuch as he has been in my care, the means of withdrawing from here; and it is by him that I have the honor of sending you this letter, which will inform you of the good sentiments of the inhabitants of these regions. I believe them so disposed that I am persuaded that they would not be offended at seeing themselves again dependent and subject to the English Government. Necessities have absolutely forced them to it; they can no longer hold out; they all have an urgent need of merchandise and I think that an English flag would be well received among us, if the party was composed only of whites without a single savage being with it; but if there was, I would be very doubtful of the success of the enterprise; for everybody in all the villages of this continent is determined, according to appearances, to give up his life rather than to surrender to the barbarians.

The merchants indeed will demand, perhaps, nothing better than to attempt the enterprise. The great profit which can be made in trade could compensate them doubly for the expense. As for myself, if you decide to make the expedition, I offer my commerce les pouvoit de dommager doublement de leurs frais pour moi si vous trouvez juste d'en faire l'expédition Je m'offre en tout ce que je pourrais faire pour vue que je sois avertis par quelques personnes eclaire, quelque jour avant l'arrivée des parties ici, et j'ose me tenir fort de disposer tous les habitans a vous recevoir librement pour vue toutte fois qu'il n'y aye point de Sauvages mele dans votre Detachement, Je ne doutte pas qu'on ne nous accuse de Rebelles pour avoir sans resistance souffert l'entre des Ameriquains etre nous mais que peut faire un peuple abandonné que l'on aveugle par mille beaux discours dont nous sommes encore a voir les effets joignant a cela crainte de ne pouvoir trop vitte abuser de notre Credulité les menaces de nous nuire, si de bon Coeur nous ne consentions a leur faire un serment inviolable il nous a don fallut pour nous menager la propriété de nos biens consentir a tout ce qu'ils ont voulu. Nous ne nous croirions de ne pas engager a rien, si nous nous relevions nous amemes d'un serment que nous avons été obligé de faire.

Il est bon de vous observer Monsieur qu'il i aura quelques obstacles pour passer aux portes que les Espagnolles occupe mais j'ai lieu de croire qu'une fois entre che vous vous i trouverez tous les besoins de bouches qui vous seront necessaire pour en faire l'expédition. Je ne doute pas non plus qu'il ni en aye beaucoup de nous qui ne se joignant a vous meme de ceux qui dependent des Espagnolles qui comme nous reduit au plus pressant besoins de tous voudront rester neutre ou peutetre se mettre avant.

J'espere monsieur qu'en cas que mes speculations n'ayent aucuns Lieux et que vous ne veuillez tenter l'enterprise que ma Lettre ne sera point communiqué a personne afin de m'epargner ainsi qua celui qui ecrit cette Lettre les poursuites que pourroit faire les ammeriquains et les Espagnolles aux quelles poursuites il ne vous serait pas peutetre aisé de nous sous traire.

services in everything that I can do, provided that I am informed by some instructed persons a few days before the arrival of the parties here; and I dare to hold myself ready to prepare all the inhabitants to receive you freely, provided there should be no savages mingled in your detachment. I do not doubt that we are accused with being rebels for having suffered without resistance the entrance of the Americans among us; but what could a deserted people do, who were blinded by a thousand beautiful speeches, of which we are still to see the results, and there was joined therewith, for fear of the impossibility of so quickly deluding our credulity, threats of destruction, if we should not consent cheerfully to make to them an inviolable oath. It was for us a necessary gift, to consent to all they have desired, in order to procure for ourselves the security of our property. We would not believe ourselves in any way bound, if we should free ourselves of an oath which we have been forced to make.

It is well to call your attention, sir, that there will be some obstacles to pass at the posts which the Spaniards occupy, but I am right in believing that once entered into our villages, you will find there all the necessary provisions which you will need in order to make the expedition. I no longer doubt but that there would be many of us who would join themselves to you, even of those who are subject to the Spaniards, who, like ourselves, are reduced to the most pressing needs and will wish to remain neutral or perhaps to take an active part.

I hope, sir, that, in case my speculations should have no results and you should be unwilling to attempt the enterprise, my letter will not be communicated to any one, in order to spare me as well as him who writes this letter the prosecutions which the Americans and the Spaniards might make, from which prosecutions it would not be easy for you to screen us.

I am, sir, in the hope of your protection your very humble and obedient servant

The year, 1783, the eleventh day of the month of June, in virtue of the Court, held this day in the name of the public to determine the amount of land which remains to be taken up in the Prairie du Pont, appropriate for cultivation,<sup>2</sup> it has been decided by the said Court that there be made a census of the citizens, giving them the preference over all others, and that, thereafter, there be set aside the amount of land, which can be taken up without encroaching on the ground which it has been agreed to reserve for the commons; and thereafter that the said common fence shall be made to pass behind the ground belonging to Joseph Maisonville and to join there the gully of limestone along which the said fence shall run up to Butau's point and from there running to the point of woods of the Big Hill, in case there are found sufficient inhabitants to take up the land as far as that; and if not, the fence shall stop at the end of the last land surveyed and taken up by the said inhabitants. And it has been furthermore agreed that, since some of the said lands are not as desirable in respect to area as others, there should be tickets which shall be drawn by lot, and that each who shall draw his ticket shall be compelled to make his fence in the order of his number; that is to say they shall begin the said fences at the end of that belonging to the inhabitants who have already cultivated land in the cul de sac of the said Prairie du Pont and build them according to the amount of their land; and that the other tickets which remain shall be drawn by lot in the manner it has been heretofore explained. And in regard to the rest of the prairie on the right of the said limestone gully, the said Court in the name of the inhabitants has reserved that for the pasturage of their animals, the limit of each land extending from the Mississippi to the bluffs, and, if hereafter there should present themselves other inhabitants who wish to have lands and to go on farther, they shall be obliged to follow the direct line of the fence, on condition that the side of the said limestone gully shall remain always a commons for the animals; and it has been decided that after all enclosures of land have been made, that which remains shall be divided

Extract of the Registers of the Record-Office of the Illinois in the Town of Kaskaskia.<sup>2</sup>

Sirs:—

It is with a true pleasure that we, the inhabitants of Cahokia and of the surrounding villages, have learned that by an act of the assembly of Virginia of the 20th of January, 1781, we have fallen entirely under the jurisdiction of your honorable body; for we hope that you will give us the assistance which we need, and grant us the enjoyment of our former laws, privileges and customs, and that as American subjects we shall enjoy the same advantages as the other inhabitants enjoy; for we have borne voluntarily our proportional share in all the enterprises, which have been formed against the common enemy, and even very often exposed our families to the brutality of savages by going far from them, and we have often been deprived of the necessities in order to contribute to the support of the troops who have been sent among us; and this at a time that our crops have completely failed both on account of the overflow of the Mississippi and the incursions which the savages made on our lands. Finally we have shown on all occasions a true zeal in the defence of liberty. This is why we hope to receive the advantages of our labors and that you will give heed to the petitions which we make and which are only too just to cause us doubt of their success.

The transcripts from the Papers of the Old Congress, printed in this volume, were made under the direction of the staff of the Bureau of Hist. Research of Carnegie Institution, and were collated a second time by Dr. J. Franklin Jameson.

<sup>2</sup> The petition was drawn up by the inhabitants of Cahokia in 1784, but the copy which reached Congress was made by the Kaskaskia clerk, which accounts for certain peculiarities of spelling. Labuxiere, the clerk at Cahokia, who wrote the original petition, makes a final s which looks like a straight line, and this has been read by the clerk of Kaskaskia as the letter t. There are other errors which can be accounted for in a similar way, as, for instance, the spelling of the signatures. Also, the clerk of Kaskaskia has added a paragraph to make it appear that the Cahokians united with the Kaskaskians in denouncing John Dodge. The Cahokians intrusted the original petition to Major Lebrun, but he was killed before he reached the Ohio river. In 1786 the people of Kaskaskia sent a copy of it with a petition of their own to Congress. See Introduction, pp. cxxix., cxxx.

Firstly, we pray that you grant us the right of choosing from among ourselves the most enlightened persons for magistrates, who shall hold their places as long as they merit the confidence of the people, and that in case of malversation we have also the same right of displacing them in order to name others; and that all the persons who shall come to settle among us be obliged to conform themselves to the laws which are already established and under which we have and hope to live in peace.

Secondly, we pray that, for all the important suits in which the well-being of some individual shall be entirely at stake, we have, besides our judicature, a place to which we can make appeal from the judgments when one of these individuals believes that he has not been heard according to the full justice, which he had the right to expect; that the number of these suits be reduced to that which you shall believe absolutely necessary for the well-being of the place; and that the sites of the forts be not alienated to any individual, as now the said M. John Dodge possesses a site of a fort, the earth-works of which have been all built since the time when the king of France possessed the colony of the Illinois and which are the defence of the village of the town of Kaskaskia.<sup>1</sup>

Thirdly, on account of the hope, which we have, that once good order is established among us, there are bound to come back all the inhabitants who, wearied with seeing themselves exposed to all kinds of danger, have withdrawn to the Spanish parts, and furthermore on account of the advantages which the fertility of our lands offers to those who shall come here to settle, we desire that you will hinder the abuse which generally occurs in all new countries, where there are always some individuals who make purchases of large tracts of land on which they have no intention of settling,

Fourthly, since we have reason to expect that you will send troops, of whom we have need for the safety and the police of the place, we hope that you will provide for this, that we are no longer exposed to the same disorder and irregularity that we have already suffered from them; that it be no longer in the power of the commander of these troops to take by force from the houses of the inhabitants what he shall believe he has need of; that for this purpose you will authorize some one to settle the old accounts for the supplies which the inhabitants have already furnished, and that this same person or another be also authorized to satisfy either in gold or credit-notes the inhabitants who shall furnish him provisions for the troops; and that in case he happens to lack any necessity, the officer in command be obliged to have recourse to the magistrates of the place, who shall use the most prompt means and the most satisfactory to the individuals to obtain for him what he needs.

Fifthly, since we have among us several persons who through the correspondence which they keep up with the subjects of the king of England both from Michillimackinac and Detroit and other places to the prejudice of our commerce; and also a band of worthless fellows who assemble with the subjects of the king of England and make speeches against the United States and who are instilling into the minds of the feeble spirits the belief that the king of England will take possession of this colony, that is what makes the trouble among the savage tribes and exposes us daily to peril; and when a justice is seen to be established, it would prevent all the intrigues and by its troops spare us all danger.<sup>1</sup>

Sixthly, for a last petition, which we regard as a special grace, we hope that Congress will consider that for several consecutive years we have suffered from a lack of all necessities both on account of the inundation of the Mississippi on the lands which we have conjointly chosen and because of the disturbance which has been caused by the savage tribes, who have obliged us to abandon the settlements which we have already made, a fact which compels

PETITION OF LA CROIX IN REGARD TO TRADE, OCTOBER 29, 1785.

Messieurs

Jean B<sup>te</sup> LaCroix a lhonneur de vous exposer que pour le Bien public la Cour luy a accordé le 8. de Mars 1782 la permission de la traite avec les sauvages dans ce village aux conditions Expliquées dans la Sentence de ladite Cour rendue cedit jour 8. mars are committed as well by night as by day in the fields, sown and cultivated in wheat, corn, peas, beans, pumpkins, melons and other vegetables and also in the orchards or gardens, where these same thieves spoil and ruin utterly the work and labor of the good citizens who give all their toil to have their subsistence and to enjoy the fruit of their labor; since it is indispensable to stay the course of a disorder so pernicious to the public welfare, it is very expressly forbidden all persons of what quality soever whether inhabitants, their wives or wayward children and slaves, vagabonds,<sup>1</sup> vagrants or others, to enter the fields, sown with grains or vegetables, which do not belong to them, and also the orchards and gardens and to steal or take anything whatsoever there, on pain of one hundred livres fine, payable half to the public treasury and the other half to the informer, and of being put in irons for eight days and led about in the village of Cahokia with the marks of their theft hung around their neck, for the first offence, and of greater punishment in case of repetition. It is also very expressly forbidden to pass across the sown fields either on horseback or in a wagon. We command that the line of the roads be followed on pain of fifty livres fine against those who shall violate the present ordinance and of paying for the damage, for which there will be execution without mitigation. And the present shall be read and posted on the door of this church and registered in the record-office in order that there may be recourse thereto. At Cahokia, August 28, 1785.

PETITION OF LA CROIX IN REGARD TO TRADE, OCTOBER 29, 1785.<sup>2</sup>

To MM. the Magistrates and the honorable Court of the District of Cahokia.

Sirs:—

Jean Bte. LaCroix has the honor to set forth to you that, for the public good, the Court granted him on the 8th of March, 1782, permission to trade with the savages in this village under the conditions declared in the decree of the said Court, rendered the said day, March 8, 1782.<sup>1</sup> The said M. LaCroix has not been troubled up to the present in his trading; but now he is in a position very prejudicial to the public and to the petitioner and which tends to cause the citizens to perish from hunger, especially at a time of such great calamity as we find ourselves in at present.<sup>2</sup>

The alien merchants of Michillimackinac, gentlemen, are here and, far from contenting themselves with the asylum which we give them to sell their merchandise to the French, they are trading with the savages, who come to this village, for all the goods which the said savages bring and are taking from us in this way the means of making a living, since they overcharge us for these same commodities of trade at exorbitant prices; and to the detriment of the people they are making hords of the goods in order to transport them out of the place or to sell them at prices most burdensome to the public. Since these merchants have no right of trade in this village and since, if we have some goods to trade with the Indians, [this] advantage should belong to us and not to strangers; and since we suffer them here for convenience, after having been sent away from the Spanish bank, it is not just in us to permit these traders to carry off before our eyes what Providence offers us through the savages. But these traders are trading before our eyes and up to our very doors not only in merchandise but also in what is more pernicious, drink, and are favoring the savages at a time when one cannot be too careful. In order to avoid the evils which may result therefrom, I pray, gentlemen, that you have the goodness to continue me in my trading right and that all alien merchants for the future be forbidden to participate therein in this village or to trade in anything with the savages who come here, on pain of a fine, such as it shall please you to fix, and of confiscation of that for which they shall have traded; and in return the petitioner offers to conform to the conditions of the decree of the Court of the said 8th of March, 1782, so that this branch of commerce be preserved for us in our village [and not pass] to aliens; and this is my conclusion. with the savages to the said Jean Bte. LaCroix, who has always exercised the said right of trade without any reproach or complaint from any one, for which reason the Court in assembly has decided and does decide by the present decree that the said M. LaCroix shall be continued in the said trading privilege, exclusive of all others, for the public good of this post; and he shall be free to trade in liquor with the savages with this reservation and condition, nevertheless, expressly reserved, namely that he can only deliver liquor to the savages when they shall set out from this village and so that they do not drink in the said village and there results no damage therefrom; and there shall be appointed by the Court a trustworthy person to see to it that the said M. LaCroix does not give them anything to drink and that the savages with their drink are conducted to the limits outside of the village. And the said LaCroix shall conform to all the conditions declared in the decree of permission March 8, 1782. In regard to the public, we forbid very expressly all English merchants, who are alien residents for a short time in this post and have not taken the oath of fidelity to the states, the trade in liquor under any pretext whatsoever on pain of one hundred livres fine and of greater punishment in case of repetition, not [intending], however, to detract from the free commerce of the alien traders for the trade and [Mss. torn] of merchandise [Mss. torn]. And the Court reserves to itself, in case of prejudice to the public, to change the present permission granted to the said M. LaCroix, of which it will take cognizance in time and place, if the case requires it; and we continue him in his privilege until express revocation on our part. We forbid any one whomsoever to trouble or disturb him. And the present shall be read, published and posted tomorrow, Sunday, on the door of this church at the close of mass. Given by us, the court in session, J. Bte. Dubuque, Charles DuCharme, Fr. Courier and Tom Brady; the last has not wished to sign and the others have signed; and it was approved by M. Sirs:—

It is with the deepest pain that the inhabitants of Cahokia find themselves compelled to bring their just complaints to you and to demand your protection against projects which M. Dorsey Pentecoste is devising with respect to lands at Cahokia and by which he would dispossess them of property which belongs to them legally and of which they have been in possession, themselves and their fathers, since almost a century.

The Prairie du Pont has belonged from all time to the inhabitants, both for the purpose of cultivating it, if there was need thereof, or to serve for commons for their animals, without which commons it would have been impossible to raise any kind of animals.

M. Gibault, curé, serving the parish of Kaskaskia 20 leagues from our village, has dared to arrogate secretly the power of disposing of this prairie by conceding it to Colonel Clark, who has resold this same concession to M. Pentecoste, who to-day wishes to take possession and dispossess the inhabitants thereof.<sup>2</sup>

It has never been in the power of any ecclesiastic of the Illinois to dispose of the property of the subjects. Neither the laws nor their state have ever given them a power so arbitrary. So far from having had therein any authority or right, their duty has been limited to saying the mass and to receiving the remuneration which accrues to them for celebrating divine service; and never have the priests had the permission or the privilege of giving concessions. This privilege has formerly belonged to the com-land commissioners of the U. S. disallowed Pentecoste's claim, because Father Gibault had no authority to alienate the lands of the church, and was expressly prohibited from doing so. —Amer. State Pap., Pub. Lands, ii., 139.

Le Sr Gibault sachant quil n'avoit aucun droit ni pouvoir de concedder, mais pour se faire un merite Et tromper la bonne foy de M<sup>r</sup> Clark luy a fait cette concession frauduleuse Et contre la bonne foy publique. aussi en a-t-il gardé le silence Et bien [rien ?] n'est venu à la Connoissance des habitans jusqua ce jour, dans la Crainte quil avoit sans doute qu'ils ne luy fassent la honte Et la confusion d'avoir trompé Mr. Clark Et En meme temps voult s'il avoit été En son pouvoir deposseder les dits habitants de leurs Biens par une concession aussi vaine que tenebreuse qu'il a donné secretement au Mr. Clark En voulant le persuader de son faux pouvoir.

que deviendroient les citoyens de cette partie si des tromperies aussi manifestes et aussi scandaleuses avoient lieu ou seroit la sureté publique des Biens de chaque famille. il ny en auroit plus aucune et le propriétaire ne pourroit pas sassurer d'etre tranquille sur son propre foyer. cette Liberté si chere N'en seroit que l'ombre.

c'est pour prevenir de si mauvais dessein Et arreter le Cour des Entreprises que le Sr pentecoste veut former sur nos Biens fondé sur ce vain titre ou dautres quil auroit pû surprendre et obtenir de Nos Siegneurs du Congrè a nous honoreuses et prejudiciables que nous prenons la Liberté de Nous adresser Nos seigneurs Et Souverains a votre tribunal, pour vous suplier de regarder la Concession donnée par led<sup>t</sup> Sr gibault comme une tromperie manifeste donnée par un homme non titré a ce sujet Et qui na jamais eu aucun pouvoir sur nos Biens la declarer nule Et abuzive, Renvoyer M<sup>r</sup> pentecoste a se pourvoir contre M<sup>r</sup> Le Colonel Clark Et ce dernier contre Gibault qui sera tenu de nous Exiber ses pouvoirs En vertu des quels il veut nous desposceder de nos Biens Et terres Et des quels nous sommes En pcession depuis letablissement des cahos qui passe plus de 80, ans: pcessions que ces predecesseurs et meme les anciens commandants ont toujours respectées.

mandants and the commissaries of the places, when they were authorized thereto by the sovereign; and never has any priest interfered or dared to assume such an authority.

M. Gibault, knowing that he had no right nor authority to make the concession, but in order to make a merit and to deceive the good faith of M. Clark, has made this concession fraudulently and against the public good faith. Also he has kept silent about it (and it didn't come to the knowledge of the inhabitants until this day) on account of the fear, which he undoubtedly had, that they would disgrace and confuse him with having deceived M. Clark; and, at the same time, he wished, if it had been in his power, to dispossess the said inhabitants of their property by a concession as vain as underhanded, which he had given secretly to M. Clark, because he wished to persuade him of his false power.

What would become of the citizens of this part, if trickeries, so manifest and so scandalous, were allowed; and where would be the public surety of property? There would no longer be any; and no proprietor could be assured of being undisturbed in his own home. This liberty, so dear, would be only its shadow.

It is to anticipate so evil a purpose and to stop the course of the attempts which M. Pentecoste wishes to make on our property, which attempts rest on such a vain title, or to stop other concessions, burdensome and prejudicial to us, which he may undertake to obtain from our lords of Congress, that we take the liberty, our Lords and Sovereigns, of addressing your tribunal, in order to pray you to regard the concession, made by the said M. Gibault, as a manifest fraud and as given by a man not empowered in this matter and who has never had power over our property; and to declare it null and improper and to dismiss M. Pentecoste to plead against Colonel Clark and this latter against Gibault, who shall be held to show us his powers, by virtue of which he wishes to dispossess us of our property and lands, which we have possessed since the establishment of Cahokia, which is more than eighty years; possessions which his predecessors and even the former commandants have always respected.

We dare to hope, sirs, that you will set aside and annul all ci inclus Nos Seigneurs vous trouverés la Copie de la procuracion que le chapitre de Canada a Envoyé au S<sup>r</sup> gibault dont l'original est déposé au greffe du district des cahos, par laquelle procuracion vous verés que le S<sup>r</sup> Gibault n'a pû ny du le demembrer ny Conceder aucune partie ni portion des terres et Bien de la mission des Cahos sans lexp<sup>r</sup>s consentement des habitants dud<sup>t</sup> lieu a qui tous ces Biens sont transmis pour l'Entretien de Ladite mission ou prestre que lesdits habitants voudront y Etablir. Et que par concequant le S<sup>r</sup> gibault n'ayant jamais deservy cette cure ny a Eu aucun droit ny pouvoir. dailleur on ne Craint pas de L'avancer dans le temps quil a donnée cette pretendue Concession secrette et hor de la Connoissance des habitants il estoit interdit par ordre de Leveque de Canada de la quelle interdiction on ignore s'il est Encore relevé, or toute interdiction Ennule tous actes Et contracts qu'il auroit pû faire pendant quelle a duré et par concequant tous ses pouvoirs se trouvoient anéanti.

Nous vous reiterons Nos Siegneurs avec tout le respect et la soumission que nous devons a nos Souverains Et avec toute la fidelité que nous vous avons jurée, de nous accorder la justice que nous vous demandons, contre toutes les Entreprises du S<sup>r</sup> pentecoste sur nos biens terres et communes, que vous ne pouvez connoître par vous meme a moins qu'une personne Eclairée Et sans partialité ne vous en face un fidel raport. c'est En concequance que nous avons chargé M<sup>r</sup>. Gabriel Ceré Negociant des illinois porteur de ces presentes de vous donner tous les Eclair-other concessions or permissions, which M. Pentecoste may obtain from you, which tend to dispossess us of our possessions, and consent that he cannot obtain a larger amount of land than that which the Court of this district will grant him in places which shall not be settled and up to the present have not been taken up by anyone, such concession not to exceed ten arpents in width and four hundred and forty arpents in area; which amount of land shall be given to him, where it will not be prejudicial to anyone.

Enclosed herewith, our Lords, you will find the copy of the power of attorney which the chapter of Canada sent to M. Gibault, the original of which is deposited at the office of the district of Cahokia, from which power of attorney you will see that M. Gibault neither could nor should dismember or concede any part or portion of the lands and property of the mission of Cahokia without the express consent of the inhabitants of the said place, to whom all this property is conveyed for the maintenance of the said mission or priest, that the said inhabitants shall wish to establish here; and that consequently M. Gibault, since he has never administered this cure, has had no right nor power. Besides we do not fear to advance that, at the time when he gave this pretended concession secretly and without the knowledge of the inhabitants, he was interdicted by order of the bishop of Canada, and we do not know if that interdiction is yet removed; but all interdictions annul all acts and contracts, which the one, so interdicted, may have made while it lasted; and consequently all his powers are annulled.

We ask again of you, our Lords, with all the respect and submission that we owe to our sovereigns and with all the fidelity which we have sworn to you, that you grant us the justice, for which we pray, against all the attacks of M. Pentecoste upon our property, lands and commons, about which you cannot yourselves know, unless a person, informed and without partiality, makes to you a faithful report thereof. Therefore we have intrusted M. Gabriel Cerré, merchant of the Illinois, and bearer of these presents, to give you all the necessary information so cissements necessaires afin de nous rendre la justice que de Bons Et fidels sujets doivent attendre de leurs souverains pour la Conservation de nos Biens qui sont a la veille d'Etre en proye a la voracité du Sr pentecoste, avide de nous depouiller de notre patrimoine Et nous obliger nous et nos familles a faire un deguerpissement de tiranie pour nous obliger a Chercher un azile chez letranger après avoir Epuisé notre sang a metre nos terres En valeur pour sa rapacité. Nous vous supplions de nous pardonner si nous nous servons de ces Expressions La lettre quil Ecrit icy nous prouve assez ses intentions de la quelle nous envoyons copie cy jointe.

Nous vous demandons Nos seigneurs d'Etre maintenus dans toutes nos pocessions, usages, coutumes Et loix anciennes sans quaucunne autorité y puisse donner ateinte Et que nous n'ayant pas le desplaisir d'Etre soumis a aucune autre justice des ilinois connoissant L'incapacite, haine, Et partialité des sujets qui pouroient lexercer, mais de Nous donner la permission de nous gouverner nous memes comme nous avons toujours fait.

La cour de ce district des cahos à pris sur Elle de Conceder a chaque particulier ameriquain ou autres Nouvellement arrivez En ce pays Et qui veulent sy Etablir dix arpents de terre de large, sur la superficie de quatre cent quarante arpents, dans notre district, Nous Nexedons pas cette quantité afin de menager le terrain pour que Chacun puisse En avoir et nous fortifier par le Nombre d'habitans Et nous metre a labry des incurssions des sauvages Nous esperons que vous nous otorizerez a Continuer dans notre district

Le Sr pentecoste a Envoyé icy un procureur arpenteur avec d'Emple pouvoir pour mesurer Et Borner sa concession qui consiste a douze mille arpents de terre ou sont comprises toutes les notre il doit se metre En devoir de le faire sous peu de jour. cest a quoy nous formerons notre opositions jusqua ce que nous avons reçu vos ordres que nous esperons autoriser nos opositions Et nous Confirme dans nos pocessions.

Nous vous supplions Nos Seigneurs de nous Envoyer vos de-that you may render us the justice, which good and faithful subjects should expect from their sovereigns, for the preservation of our property which is on the verge of being a prey to the voracity of M. Pentecoste, who is eager to dispoil us of our patrimony and to compel us to make of ourselves and our families a sacrifice to tyranny by obliging us to seek an asylum among strangers after having spent our life-blood in making our lands valuable for his rapacity. We beseech you to pardon us if we make use of these expressions; but the letter which he has written here proves sufficiently his intentions, a copy of which we send joined herewith.<sup>1</sup>

We pray you, our Lords, that we be maintained in all our possessions, usages, former customs and laws so that no authority can do violence thereto and that we may not have the distress of being submitted to any other court of the Illinois, since we know the incapacity, spite and partiality of the subjects who might exercise it;<sup>2</sup> but we pray you to grant us the permission to govern ourselves as we have always done.

The court of this district of Cahokia has taken on itself to concede to each single American or other, who has newly arrived in this country and wished to settle here, land in our district of the width of ten arpents and with an area of four hundred and forty arpents. We do not exceed this quantity in order to manage the land so that each can have some and we may be strengthened by the number of inhabitants and so sheltered from the attacks of the savages. We hope that you will authorize us to continue to do so in our district.

M. Pentecoste has sent here a surveyor as representative with full power to measure and lay out the boundaries of his concession which consists of twelve thousand arpents of land in which are included all ours. He is bound to begin to do it within a few days. That is why we shall issue our injunction until we have received your commands, which we hope will authorize our injunction and confirm us in our possessions.

We beseech you, our Lords, to send us your decision on all the articles of these representations by M. Cerré, our attorney, so that we may know to what we are bound.

LABUXIERRE TO CONGRESS, JULY 17, 1786.<sup>1</sup>

Sirs:—

Since I had the honor of being named state's attorney at the Illinois five years ago in the place and stead of M. Girault who held this office,<sup>2</sup> I have taken the liberty of writing to you four times and of rendering account to you of what there was of most interest in the Illinois. Either my letters have not reached you or your answers have not been delivered to me, and I have not been able to know whether I ought to continue to perform my functions in this office. The misunderstanding of the magistrates of Kaskaskia and the extreme disorder of the business of the individuals, occasioned by some persons greedy for money, have compelled me to withdraw with my family to Cahokia, where I have found inhabitants filled with unity of peace and fidelity to the states, and a court of justice which they are careful and of which we are in possession, in extent four leagues square, which were formerly granted to the mission and parish of Cahokia by MM. de Boisbriant and des Ursins, governor and commissary appointed by the king of France in this country, according to the land-grant, which we have, dated June 22, 1722. This tenth part shall be understood to take the place of payment to him for his labor and pains, costs of travel and other expenses, which he shall incur in order to obtain the said new concessions; on condition that, if he obtains nothing, there shall be no cause for action against us for his said labors, costs and pains. It is understood that the said M. Barthélemi Tardiveau cannot take the tenth of the lands, which is accorded him for his payment, in the extent of the four leagues square mentioned above which belongs in full right to the mission of Cahokia and to individuals, and this is stipulated by express clause; but that the said tenth shall be given as payment for the new concessions which he shall obtain for the inhabitants, in one or two pieces of ground making part of the general concession which he shall obtain; provided, nevertheless, that the said piece or pieces be nearly equal in quality of soil and situation to the rest of the lands thus obtained. In faith of which we, the magistrates and principal inhabitants of the village of Cahokia and its dependencies have signed and thereto set the seal of our Court. Done by unanimous consent at Cahokia the twenty-seventh day of August, 1787.<sup>1</sup>

We have received the documents which you have sent us. We intend and have agreed with you to give you only the tenth of the lands which shall be newly conceded by Congress to us and our male children, but not of the lands, of which we are in possession already and which are included in our seigniory of Cahokia, for which we have the sufficient title of the said seigniory for four leagues square and for which we do not believe that we have need of other confirmation. This is the reason that we except this tenth from the four leagues square of the said seigniory, which belongs to us by title-deeds which we have and which we believe have no need of being confirmed. In regard to the new concessions outside of our seigniory, which you wish to obtain for us, we are always in agreement and do agree to give you the tenth in one or two pieces, provided, nevertheless, that it is outside of our seigniory. By express convention we do not undertake to pay any duties, rents, dues or imposts for the lands which you obtain for us from Congress. That would become too onerous in the end.

We beg you to except in the power of attorney the powers which we have given to M. Cerré, which we do not intend to annul and which concerns only the ownership of our seigniory and commons.<sup>3</sup> As for all other powers, claimed to be given by us, we disavow them as false and as having been fabricated without our knowledge.<sup>4</sup> We find only this change to make in the agreement and in the particular power given to M. Cerré.

We have the honor of being respectfully and with attachment,

Sir

your very humble and very obedient servants.

ADDRESS BY ROBERT WATTS, SEPTEMBER 14, 1787.<sup>2</sup>

Address made to the Court of Cahokia in session by Robert Watts, Commandant, named by the Court, at the place called Grand Ruisseau, in its dependency and district.

Sirs:—

It is not my cause which calls me into the presence of your august assembly .....<sup>3</sup> It is that of your security, your peace, your justice and far better still that of your supreme authority, which nothing should alter or disturb; and yet, gentlemen, it is that which disorder is about to bring forth to-day.

If you have commissioned me to sustain your justice in watching for you over the public security and over the tranquility and activities of this handful of inhabitants who compose and form the little village of Grand Ruisseau, I ought not to allow you to remain ignorant a longer time, gentlemen, that there is among us one whose would-be pretensions are directed towards weakening and diminishing your authority,...that authority which has always maintained peace and harmony, that which the estates of Virginia even have deigned to respect in giving it their

De quel oeil après des droits aussi bien Cimentér et emanér Pourés vous voir Messieurs l'atentat et l'infraction que L'on Comet aujourd'hui sur vos pouvoirs.

Passeriés vous sous silence Messieurs, des Iniquités qui vont jusqu'a blesser L'autorité la plus respectable: .....Ce n'est plus la votre dont Il est question en ce moment, c'est Celle Mes- sieurs des états de Virginie que vous devés deffendre. C'est elle qui est offensé dans le Corp respectable qui vous assemble ici. Car vous n'êtes a Cet égard que L'image de Leur Justice Come Je ne suis au votre que l'electricité de vos Volontés.

Si tant d'Insubordination devenoit Inpunissable que Devien- droit par la suite votre Sureté, vos droits inaltérables vos Familles & vos biens; ne vous rendriés vous Comptable Envers dieu envers les homes, vous en qui chaque Cytoyen doit placer sa Confiance par la sureté qu'ils établissent dans les droits qui vous appartiennent & que loin de laisser oisifs, deves au Contraire dans des besoins aussi pressants faire éclater d'une Maniere propre a étouffer dans sa naissance le danger évident de voir chaque Cytoyen et vous même Messieurs, devenir le jouet d'une Soit disante Cour Créée & Innové sans autorité & sans pouvoir dans le lieu de la belle approval thenceforth, that which these same estates recognize always as co-operating to the glory of the United States.

With what eye, after rights so well strengthened and emanated, can you see, gentlemen, the outrage and infraction, which is being committed to-day on your powers?

A certain M. Piggott, as party chief in the cabal of Grand Ruisseau, has just divested me of the titles and qualities with which I was honored by your honorable Court; and at the enquiry, which I hastened to make in regard to the causes of such a proceeding, a certain Rogers, a man without name and without honor, has villainously abused all that proceeds from your authority at the moment when my duty obliged me to take up the defence of your august Court in the preservation of its rights and its privileges.<sup>1</sup>

Would you pass in silence, gentlemen, iniquities which go as far as to wound the most honorable authority? . . . . It is no longer yours which is in question at this moment; it is, gentlemen, that of the estates of Virginia which you ought to defend. It is that which is offended in the honorable body which assembles you here; for in this respect you are only the image of their justice, just as I am for yours the electricity of your wills.

If such insubordination were to be unpunishable, what would in consequence become of your security, your unalterable rights, your families and your property? Would you not render yourselves accountable to God and to men, you in whom each citizen should place his confidence through the security, which they establish, in the rights which belong to you, and which far from permitting ease, you ought on the contrary in needs so pressing to make blaze out in a manner calculated to destroy in its birth the danger, obvious to every citizen and to you also, gentlemen, of becoming the sport of a would-be court, created and innovated without authority and without power in the locality of Bellefontaine, where the assemblies must be convoked in order to judge definitely on all that shall be carried before their would-be tribunal.<sup>2</sup>

Is there not therein a formal defiance made to the most sacred authority? Is that not a violation of the submission which is due to fontaine & ou les assemblés Doivent Se Convoquer pour juger définitivement sur tout Ce qui Sera porté à leur Souverain Tribunal.

N'est ce pas la un mepris Formel fait à l'autorité la plus sacrée, n'est ce pas enfreindre la soumission que l'on doit au Souverain le plus Saint, n'est ce pas abuser ouvertement de la Constitution Fondamentale des états unis: ou est le droit des Gens ou est La Sureté publique, ou est l'amour de la patrie & ou est Enfin cette autorité absolue qui appartient à notre métropole. Je vous Messieurs En arreter Le Cours ..... Je vous le demande. Craignés Cet orage qui gronde déjà sur vos têtes. Craignés le ier dangereux dont vous devés redouter les étincelles. Craignés vous dis Je Messieurs. Cet attentat aux loix & à l'honneur & Nous vous verons bientôt répondre sur chaque individu la Justice que vous leur devés, au moment surtout où chaque Fiel Citoyen aie sa voix & qu'il s'adresse à vous pour adre ses loins sur les malheurs que Fomentent toujours le Désordre & L'insubordination.

Oui Messieurs J'entrevois vos regards Favorables sur des Evénements qui nous touchent tous en particulier. & dont les suites ne sauroient être que funeste. Je vous vois avec Le danger d'une Conscience aussi régulière dans une prudence d'honnêtes gens, qui n'ont pas dédaigné de vous demander un avis & une rectitude lorsque leur propre patrie étoit soumise à leurs besoins. Je vous vois dis Je rompre le silence & reprirent le Coups d'une haute Emportance du Crime de lèse état: que votre Justice Se manifeste & qu'elle éclate & Ce Sera pour vous une augmentation à la gloire que vous devés aux états & au moment à vos loins, mais à vos loins vous Présentez Sous Silence de pareils attentats, vous verés bientôt Forcer aux pieds vos états & votre equité.

C'est pourquoi Messieurs qu'après avoir mis Sous vos yeux La position Fâcheuse circonstance dangereuse, Il faut bien Espérer Non Comme membre particulier des représentation que J'expose à votre Cour, mais Comme Citoyen de la part de tous Ceux qui respectent vos états & vos Intérêts, de voir pour agréable de Fier transporter Le St Payer beaucoup dans votre district de grand russell pour le reprirent dans ses démarches, lui défendre d'exercer & De S'engager en Souverain Magistrat et the most sacred sanctuary? Is that not an open abuse of the fundamental constitution of the United States? Where is the right of the people? Where is the public surety? Where is the love of country and where finally is that absolute authority which belongs to our metropolis? Ought you not to stay its course? . . . . I demand it of you! Do you fear this tempest which rumbles already over our heads; do you fear the dangerous fire, the sparks from which you ought to dread; do you fear I say, gentlemen, this outrage on the laws and the estates; and we shall see you soon answering to each individual for the justice which you owe him, at a moment especially when each faithful citizen is raising his voice in appeal to you to attract your benevolence to the evils which are always fomenting disorder and insubordination!

Yes, Gentlemen, I catch a glimpse of your looks favorable to the events which affect us all and severally, and the results of which could be only fatal; I see you stay the danger of a conduct so irregular in a handful of erring beings, who have not disdeigned to ask of you an asylum and retreat, when their own country was deaf to their needs; I see you, say I, break the silence and repress the sinful, bold crime of high treason. Let your justice be made manifest and let it blaze forth and there will be for you an increase in the glory which you owe the states and a monument to your benevolence; but if this same benevolence should pass in silence such outrages, you would soon see your rights and your justice trampled under foot.

That is the reason, gentlemen, why, after having placed before your eyes the fatal position of a dangerous event, I have every reason to hope, not as a particular member of the representation which I am setting forth to your Court, but as intrusted by all those who respect your rights and immunities, that you will determine to cause M. Piggott, inhabitant in your district of Grand Ruisseau, to be transported in order to restrain his activities, and to forbid him to exercise the duties of and set himself up as a would-be magistrate and justice of the peace in the whole department and dependency of your Court, on pain of being treated as an insurgent and rebel to the United States and of being from now on regarded as a traitor to your will and constitution; and to reprimand and punish, in so far as there is need, the named Benjamin Rogers, inhabitant of the same place of Grand Ruisseau, for having defied and badly spoken of the Court here present, and consequently to have him brought before your said Court in order to make him retract and to make demand of him therefor and to cause him to make his apology according to the exigences of the case, or to do such other acts of submission as you shall judge suitable to satisfy the respect which belongs to your Court; after which, gentlemen, that it please you to order him to make reparation to me for the heinousness of his insults made at the moment specially when my duty obliged me to sustain the right, honor and interest of your august Court.

And in order that the affair may have all the effect which the public has the right to expect from your benevolence, I hope that you will take cognizance, gentlemen, of the motives which have caused the inhabitants of Bellefontaine to inaugurate a court independent of your own, without authority to do so, without rights, without reserve and without pleas, (sad omen, gentlemen, when the germ of honor has need of a law more urgent and nearer than yours to make it develop) . . . or indeed, gentlemen, it remains for each to make his own flight, or indeed, again, to violate your justice and your rights, or rather, gentlemen, drawing away from the center of your weighty authority, to shake off the yoke and defy the benevolence which you have at all times diffused for all persons; such are the consequences of the gratitude, which those whom miserly nature has transplanted into your climate, are offering you.

May you be able, Gentlemen, by developing your rights and your authority, make germinate in all hearts the unalterable sentiments, which inspire the respect and attachment which are due your august Court! It is indeed that, gentlemen, which obliges me to tell to you how I shall never cease to be in all that which appertains to you,

THE SENTENCE AGAINST PIGGOTT AND ROGERS, SEPT. 17, 1787.<sup>1</sup>

The Court of the District of Cahokia assembled, on the fourteenth of this month, to hear the representations made to it by M. Robert Watts, commandant established by the said Court at Grand Ruisseau, in which he makes accusation in informing us of the outrage and insubordination, which tend to a popular conspiracy on the part of the inhabitants of Grand Ruisseau and Bellefontaine, in order to escape from the jurisdiction of this Court and to annihilate it finally, by arrogating to themselves a right of independence on our lands and by encroaching on our authority and privileges; and he has accused especially the named James Piggott inhabitant of Grand Ruisseau, in the dependency of this district, of having thrust himself into the office of magistrate and justice of the peace in this pretended and would-be jurisdiction to the defiance of our Court; and the named Benjamin Rogers, also inhabitant of Grand Ruisseau, of having scorned by offensive terms the person of M. Watts, whom his duty compelled to support our interests and the rights of our Court, and of having wished to dishonor our orders: after all was examined and considered, the Court forbids very expressively the said Piggott to call assemblies henceforth at Bellefontaine for the purpose of holding any session there or of devising any justice or militia independent of the Court of Cahokia, on pain of being driven from this district and of the confiscation of his property, for whom it shall concern; and for having accepted the position of magistrate and justice of the peace in the said assembly, held by the people without permission or authority, the Court has condemned him to be placed in irons in this village for the space of twenty-four hours; and it condemns to a like punishment the said Benjamin Rogers for his lack of respect both towards our Court and towards the said M. Watts; and they shall be in the custody of our huissier at their own expense; and the said Benjamin Rogers shall make in the presence of the Court suitable apologies to the said M. Watts; for which there will be execution. Given in Court the seventeenth of September, 1787. Signed, Pierre Laperche, Bte. Saucier, Philippe Engel, DuCharme, Fr. Saucier, president.

ORDINANCE OF THE COURT OF CAHOKIA, JULY 5, 1789.<sup>1</sup>

On the part of the Court of the District of Cahokia.

The Court having considered that the circumstances in which this village finds itself on account of the evil purposes which the savages have against us,<sup>2</sup> which are shown, since a long time, both by the assassination of several persons in the neighborhood of this village and by the continual stealing of our horses and by other insults committed by these barbarians, to whom it is almost impossible to make opposition on account of the lack of military force; and finding ourselves continually exposed to the fury of the parties, which come daily on our lands and roads for the purpose of killing persons there and of stealing the horses, which exposes the inhabitants to being massacred while at work and makes it impossible for us to go out without risking our lives:

It is to prevent the dangers to which we are exposed from the savages who come to this village under the veil of union and friendship and who, on returning, kill, pillage and steal the horses, that the Court seeks means to remedy the evils which surround us.

To this end, by resolution of the said Court, it is expressly forbidden all persons of what quality, condition and profession soever and under any pretext whatsoever, without the possibility of excuse, to sell, trade or sell at retail to the savages any intoxicating liquors of any sort; we forbid also trading with them in powder, bullets, ammunition and arms or giving them even as presents, on pain of one hundred piastres fine payable in cash without mitigation and of confiscation of the liquors, powder, ammunition and arms, which shall be found at their houses for sale, and of being driven from this district forever without hope of being able to return. The said Court enjoins all those who shall have knowledge of offenders to inform us thereof or to denounce them at the office, on pain of rendering themselves accomplices; and those who receive savages at their house shall be held to notify the commandant thereof as soon as they arrive, on pain of prison, for which there will be execution; and the present shall

Dear Sir

I Expected to start from here tomorrow but finding that the man who was appointed by Mr. Lacroix to Brand all the Cattle as they were Purchased had done it in such a manner that out of Eighty head their does not appear the Brands of above twenty so that we shall now have near as much trouble Collecting if then from the different Inhabitants as in Purchasing if then at first. Also, Mr. Searsons not returning according to Promise as well as the want of a Boat or Boats to transport the Goods from here, he disappointed me further. I should be glad you would let me know what they you intend to send so that I may be able to direct Everything Accordingly. I should at least want to be at Kaskaskia three Days before hand in order to settle my accounts & Communicate if my Company.

Mr. Perault addresses himself to me to go with us in the Expedition. Observing that he being A Cripple & the Employment he is now in does not afford him sufficient Livelihood, on account of his Employer not having Merchandise Sufficient for trade as to afford him better wages.

But at the same time his Employer being Willing to advance in the said Perault a Quantity of Liquors &c. provided You would grant him permission to act as a seller to the Regiments as well as your permission otherwise. I have therefore Recommended him to you to know whether you will Grant him that Permission or not.

I have furnished him with one of the state Horses which you will be Pleas'd to keep and let him have another to Return with if you should think proper. I have also sent another state Horse by Barrist Allerey which is to be Delivered to the Packhorsemaster, if any.

I am under the Necessity of informing you of what Party of the Inhabitants of this Village hath been Guilty of in Destroying a Part of my Stock the Quantity I cannot Ascertain; having been called out on the Service of my Country in January last and always Since been Obligated to attend the Service, to the prejudice of my own; I could not lay in a Sufficiency of Provisions &c. for the Subsistence thereof unless let run in the woods about my Settlement Six Milles Distant from this town. the People of this Village have Sown Grain out in the open fields & meadows without Any fence or inclosure to preserve it as I am at Such a Distance from this Village it cannot be Supposed that I have any Connections with them in the Town Laws Concerning their Commons, as I am Quite on the other Side of them It would be very Rediculous to Suppose that If any Person Should take it in their heads to Sow Grain in any Part of the Lands between this and Post Vincent without any inclosure and have a Right to Shoot any mans Cattle hogs &c. should they find out such a field and Enter it.

I dont see yet through the Designe of a few Dispicable Inhabitants who say they are authorized by you, to parade themselves in the fields Destroying My property when there is Numbers of other hogs in the Same place that are as fauctious as Mine Whither it is because I command a party of of the State Troops hear or not, perhaps they want us away. Indeed unless there is Soon a Change made for the Better me nor my Soldiers will have no Buissiness hear, Neither can we Stay half Naked, what we are paid with Call'd down by the Civil power; with what can we get our Neccessaries of Life; as long as I had any thing in my hands I furnished it for the Service, but at this rate it will not be long in my power to Subsist, when my Stock is Shot down in the Open fields and no redress to be had in this Country; Neither do I kno' the Laws you have Established. Since you left us my men Desert dayly. they are Continually with me to Cloath them or give them there Discharge, that they may Cloath themselves I have trouble enough with them and have thought could we Contrive a Method by the intermission of M<sup>r</sup> Bourgard to Satisfie them for the present for If Something is not done, they will all leave me Except my English who are the least Clamorous, yet they Complaine, and Colo. Todds Residence here will Spoil the people intirely for the Inhabitants no more Regard us then a Parcel of Slaves. Neither do I chuse to do any thing yet Soldiers & people Disatisfied, you may think what a poor life your humble Serv<sup>t</sup> hath. My Schem is to purchase as much Strouds as will make a short jacket, and a pair of long Trowsers to each man, the jacket to have a red Cuff turned up by which they will be uniform it will take 2½ Ells to each man and there is no Hats we can make them caps. for Shoes we must Shift with Mogasins. M<sup>r</sup> Ceres has linnen two Suppos we furnish each man with one Shirt untill Better turns out—M<sup>r</sup> Ceres asks 15<sup>1b</sup> in Peletries p<sup>er</sup> Ells, 15<sup>1b</sup> d<sup>o</sup> P<sup>r</sup> Shirt &c. It will be A Terrible Price to the State but yet it will be perhaps better to pay that then have in a few days no Soldiers which I think will Shortly be the Case If Some Such Method is not taken.

M<sup>t</sup> Perault will tell you our Situation and what the Result would be in case of an attack.

I think it would be a happy thing could we get Colo<sup>l</sup> Todd out of the Country for he will possitively Sett the Inhabitants and us by the Ears. I have wrote him a pretty Sharp Letter on his Signing a Death Warrant against My poor hogs for Runing in the Oppen fields. I hear inclose a Copy of it—on Some Complaints by the Inhabitants the other day he wished that there was not a Soldier in the Country I wish so two provided we were any where else to do Something for we are but poor fellow's now. If you approve of this I beg you will give me an Answer as Soon possible for perhaps If two days Retarding may even put it out of our power to even procure this I have never Seen the people of this place So Mutinous as they are by the Encouragement of Colo<sup>l</sup>. Todd, for they even begin to threaten to turn my men out of Doors and god knows what I shall do If they do for we are not Above 20 Strong and them Sick that I could depend on So they may Starve us if they like I am Sir with Compliments to the Gent<sup>l</sup>

On my return Home from your part of the Country I Purchased from Generall Clark the Grant made to sir Stephen Trigg adjoining the lands I bought of Mr Gerardine, and by Sir Stephen

Conveyed to the Said Genl. Clark Including the Caskaid and the feilds [sic] Adjoining between the Abbee Springs and Caskaid and the Mills, this grant is ten Arpents extending out from the line of Common. Easterly one half Arpent North of the Caskaid and thence down the Missisipi with the said Line of Common 21 arpents in Depth and as those Expressions in the Original Language means Different from yours of the Kanadian Customs I am apprehensive some of the people will be dissatisfied, but it cannot be helped, for for [sic] it includes upwards of Twelve Thousand Acres our measure, which will Extend down the River Near Four Miles, therefore it is not my Intent to disturb any person either settled within the bounds or that tend feilds [sic], Captn, Peterson will give them Leases for ten years without rent subject to the taking Care not to make waste and to keep up the fences, and any person that may have built in the bounds shall have their buildings and a Suitable piece of Land adjoining thereto without paying me any thing for which this shall Serve as an Obligation, and I Expect you will Assist Captn Peterson in Negociateing this business. I enquired at Congress Relating to grants of your Country made by your Preists [sic] or Vicar Generals under his Lordship the Bishop of Quebeck, and the United States Agree they are Valid and Cannot be Controverted, which is one of the Titles I hold by, and it may be pleaseing to your Settlers to know their property is secure to them — the Post Vintsent People seems to be on a Diferent footing, but it seems the Kaskaskias and your people have a Quite different authority to grant Lands.<sup>1</sup> I saw the Generall Clark in Philla-delphia Last sumer who told me as soon as the Late Indian Treaty was Completed that he would Come down to your town and Lay out my lands agreeable to Pattent but if he should not be down this summer please to assist Captn Peterson in doing it as he has a Coppy of the deed with him with the Engles and Calculations agreeable to which it must be done, the Original deed is recorded in the Office for Recording Deeds in the Village of Kaskaskias in book or Folio No 172 Pages 122: 123 and 124 to which reference may be had.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Papers of the Old Congress, lxviii., 180, original manuscript. This census was made after Harmar's visit to Illinois, and was used by Barthélemi Tardiveau in his petitions to Congress for grants of land. There are similar lists of the inhabitants of Vincennes, of Kaskaskia, and of the American settlers. The last gives the date of the arrival of each in Illinois.

For the following notes I am greatly indebted to Mr. Benjamin Sulte of Ottawa, Canada, who has traced for me the families from France to Canada, and, when possible, from Canada to Illinois. The chief sources of information have been Tanguay, Dictionnaire Genealogique, 7 vols., Mr. Sulte's own notes, notes of Hon. Walter B. Douglas of St. Louis, Mo., the documents printed in this volume and a collection of marriage contracts belonging to the Cah. Rec. in Belleville, Ill. Identification is made very difficult by the common usage among the French of two names, the regular surname and a second name given for some peculiarity of character in an ancestor or taken from place of origin or habitation. In the documents of the time either, or both, of the names is used.

<sup>2</sup> The family was in Canada as early as 1647, some members of which moved to Detroit at an early date. In 1758 François Trottier married at Cahokia Louise Laroche. Reynolds (Pioneer History, 35) says that there was a Joseph Trottier in Cahokia in 1775, who carried on an extensive commerce with New Orleans. I have found only one reference to him. — Supra p. 459. François was very prominent after the coming of Clark, was made the commandant of the village and was elected justice both of Clark's court and in 1779 of that of the district of Cahokia.

<sup>3</sup> Lefebvre or Lefevre called Courier. The family is a large one in Canada, but I have not been able to follow this particular branch to Illinois. There was a Lefebvre acting as judge in the Illinois under the French in 1765. It is possible that Charles is descended from him. Charles married Françoise Nicolle September 19, 1761. It is probable that the other Couriers of the records were also Lefebvres.

<sup>8</sup> Langlois is a common second name in Canada, and is found both in Cahokia and Kaskaskia used as a surname. A Clement Langlois was a justice in 1780, but what his relation to these two was I do not know.

<sup>9</sup> Born at St. Pierre-les-Becquets near Three Rivers, Canada, March 6, 1746, he married at Cahokia Julienne Locat, widow of Pierre Roy, on September 25, 1787. As the preceding pages show, he was of a lawless character and gave the authorities much trouble.

<sup>11</sup> His signature reads Belcour. This was a very common second name among the French. I have noted it as given among the Cahokians to a Saucier and a Lebrun.

<sup>12</sup> Cesire in Canada and Casirre according to the signature of his father. The family was at Lachine, Canada, in 1670. Antoine, the father of this Joseph, was in Cahokia as early as September, 1753, at which time he married. He was the most important citizen of Cahokia in 1778. He died in 1779. His son, Joseph, married on February 9, 1777, Marie Alarie. He was one of the justices in 1781. On August 6, 1783, he married Marie Louise Levy, widow of Michel Monet.

<sup>13</sup> The name as given here was probably the correct spelling, but since this member of the family was the only one who could write and he preferred to spell the name Lapencé, I have followed that spelling throughout the volume. The name was the second name of the Roy family. Jean Roy, his father, emigrated from Lachine, Canada, to Cahokia before 1753, for he was married there in that year to Marie Pancrasse. Joseph Roy called Lapencé was evidently an important citizen, since he was twice elected to the office of justice, in 1783 and 1786. He married on February 8, 1781, Catherine Cesirre, daughter of Antoine Casirre.

<sup>14</sup> The Lepage of Cahokia probably came from Canada, where several families of that name settled between 1665 and 1750. A Joseph Lepage was elected justice in 1780, but whether he was this one or the father of these four I do not know.

<sup>15</sup> The Dubuques came from St. Pierre-les-Becquets in the district of Three Rivers, Canada. The most important of the family was Julien Dubuque, after whom Dubuque, Iowa, was named. It has been said that he was at Cahokia for a time, but I have found no evidence of his presence there.—Tassé, Les Canadiens de l'ouest, 230 et seq. What is known about Augustin Dubuque will be found in this volume. See Index.

<sup>16</sup> Not Labussiere or Labusciere, as it is sometimes written. Billon, Annals of St. Louis, 27, says he came from Canada, but no trace of him has been found there. He became notary-clerk in the Illinois in 1757 and served the French government till 1765, when he went to St. Louis, where he received the first grant of land in the new settlement. Here he continued to exercise his functions under the government of the interregnum. After the Spaniards took possession he served as notary till about the year 1781, when he went to Kaskaskia and was appointed state's attorney and notary. See supra p. 487. On account of the disorders of the village, he moved to Cahokia, and, as the preceding pages show, gave the community able service. He died April 29, 1791.—Missouri Reports, IV, 343.

<sup>17</sup> See supra, note 13. This is probably J. Pierre Roy called Lapencé. He was elected a justice in 1784. In 1785 he married Marguerite Lefebvre, daughter of J. Marie Lefebvre and widow of J. B. Lalande.

<sup>23</sup> This as it is written is not a Canadian name, but it may be Troche called Lafleur, a name found in Montreal in 1748. The name of Lafleur was common in Cahokia, as in Canada. Pierre had moved across the river to St. Charles by 1791.—Census of St. Louis in Mo. His. Soc. library of St. Louis.

<sup>27</sup> Perhaps Cadieu, as it is written in Canada, but the Cahokia clerk spells it very carefully Cadien. In Amer. State Papers, Public Lands, ii., 164, Cadien is given as a second name to Pierre Roy. It is possible that one branch of the Roy family was called Lapancé and another Cadien. See supra, note 13.

<sup>29</sup> Second name of nineteen families in Canada. He was the son of Antoine Lamarche of the Montreal district, and married April 17, 1781, Magdeleine Buyat. He was a justice in 1783. On October 19, 1785, he married Marie, daughter of J. B. Bequet.

<sup>30</sup> I find this as a second name of the Cadien family, but see supra note 27. He was born about 1762.

<sup>31</sup> Family in Lower Canada since 1684. J. Marie Dorion was son of J. Marie Dorion of Quebec, and married Marie Magdeleine Buteau, widow of Alexis Bissiette of Cahokia, November 19, 1773.

<sup>32</sup> Also Dumest, Dumets, Dumais, Dumers. Family in Canada as early as 1640. J. Bte. Dumay's father, Jacques Dumay, was killed by an Indian at Detroit in 1760, the year the son was born.

<sup>35</sup> Saussier in France: The family is descended from a line of merchants who lived in Orleans, France. J. Bte. Saucier, the founder of the Illinois branch, became a military engineer and was sent to the Illinois. Here he planned Fort de Chartres in 1752. When the country was surrendered to the British he retired to Cahokia. Snyder, Captain Jean Baptiste Saucier. The story of the lives of his sons, J. Bte., François, and Matthieu, is found in these records. They were important men in the community and were frequently elected to office. François was the first clerk of the Court of the District of Cahokia and Baptiste was one of the first judges. Like many other Frenchmen, François and Matthieu withdrew to the Spanish banks on account of the immigration of the Americans. The former was appointed commandant at Portage des Sioux and was given a large tract of land by the Spanish government in 1799. His brother, Matthieu, received a grant the next year.—24 Cong., 1st Sess., H of Rep., Doc. 59, pp. 75 and 181. François was living in 1817 and was about eighty years old.

<sup>39</sup> Fifteen families of this name in Canada. His father's name was Joseph Lebrun. He himself married Marie Louise, daughter of François Trotter, February 13, 1776. He was a justice in 1782-1784.

<sup>40</sup> From his marriage contract with Marie Lachevéque, widow of Charles Le Boeuf called Lafamme, of June 8, 1779, it is learned he was a "native of New England of the ville of Maryland," which doesn't agree with Reynolds' statement (Pioneer History, 68) that he was a native of Pennsylvania. He was a member of the De la Balme expedition against St. Joseph, and was captured. He afterwards escaped and returned to the Illinois. See Introduction, p. xcii. and Mason, Chapters from Illinois History, 285. His connection with this expedition proves that his interests were with the French party in the Illinois rather than with the American. He was for a time Indian agent at Cahokia.—Cah. Rec. In 1785 he was one of the justices and for several years acted as hotesier.

but he died shortly afterwards. His wife, and the mother of these Beaulieu, was a member of the Chastain family, her father being a subaltern officer at St. Philippe. She was educated at Quebec and was "Director General in moral and medical matters" of Cahokia.—Reynolds' Pioneer History, 295. She lived to an advanced age and died in 1806.

<sup>25</sup> This is the second name of many families in Canada. Nicolas was the son of Andre Boismenu of Montreal. He married Margaret Palmier called Beaulieu, daughter of Michel Beaulieu, on January 28, 1786. He was a member of the De la Balme expedition against St. Joseph.

<sup>28</sup> Laperche called St. Jean. The family was in Boucherville, Canada, as early as 1694. He was the son of Pierre Laperche, and married Therese Chretien, February 25, 1786. He was one of the justices in 1787, and served till 1790.

<sup>29</sup> Also Relle, Real, and Riel. The name is still found in the province of Quebec.

<sup>35</sup> Grandmont is the proper spelling. Second name of the Hourés, who lived near Three Rivers, Canada, as early as 1670. He was the son of Pierre Grandmont, and married Catherine, daughter of Joseph Clermont, February 16, 1784.

<sup>36</sup> If the identification in note 23 above is correct, the name is Troche called Lafleur. The name Lafleur, however, was and is as common in Canada as Smith with us. Pierre was son of Paul Lafleur, and married Marie Amable, daughter of Fr. Louval, February 8, 1784.

<sup>60</sup> Uncertain whether from Canada or not. His wife was Domitilde Rolet. He was one of the justices in 1782. He died some time before 1789.

<sup>65</sup> Durbois, or Dubois. The family is from Canada. He was the son of J. Bte. Durbois, and married Catherine, daughter of Fr. Lefebvre called Courier.

<sup>66</sup> Probably Lefebvre called Courier. See supra, note 3, but there were two families of Couriers in Canada from the end of the 17th century. François was twice elected justice, in 1780 and 1783.

<sup>67</sup> See supra, note 15. Jean Bte. was the son of Andre Dubuque, a native of Montreal, and married Suzanne, daughter of Antoine Cesirre. His influence in Cahokia was equal to that of François Trottier or of Antoine Girardin. He was a justice in 1781, again in 1785 and in 1788, when he served till 1790. He was acting as commandant in 1787.

<sup>72</sup> Also Blin. From parish of St. Pierre-du-Mont-de-St. Michel, Normandy. He married Suzanne Alarie, widow of Louis Bissonnette, October 25, 1775. His father was a justice in 1781 and died about 1784.

<sup>74</sup> The family settled near Quebec in 1680, and has spread in all directions. Although illiterate, Louis Chatelet was an influential man in the community, and was a justice in 1764, 1786, and in 1788, serving the last time till 1790.

<sup>75</sup> The name of a fort forty miles below Three Rivers, Canada. The Hamelins were signiors of it, and since Hamelin lived in Cahokia these men probably were of the same stock. There were Hamelins at Michilimackinac as early as 1735. It was a J. Ben. Hamelin who led the detachment of the De la Balme force against St. Joseph in 1780, where he was killed. He was probably the father of these brothers.

<sup>77</sup> Father Paul de St. Pierre was a native of Germany or Holland. He became a Carmelite, served as priest in France, and came to America as chaplain in Rochambeau's army. He was sent by Prince-Archbishop Carroll as missionary to the West. In February, 1785, he was in Louisville, Kentucky, and then went to Cahokia, where he resided as parish priest till 1786. He was very popular with the people, and they built for him a new parochial residence and a new church. The latter is still standing. His relations with Father Gibault, who was priest at Vincennes till 1789, were very pleasant; but the ecclesiastical peace of the Illinois was disturbed by the appearance of Father de la Vallée as vicar general of the province-archdiocese. The latter made many complaints against Father de St. Pierre, but the people of Cahokia repudiated their priest. Like the other priests of the Illinois, Father de St. Pierre was persecuted by the Spaniards to cross the river, and he was put in charge of the parish of Ste. Genevieve, where he officiated till 1791. Where he went then I do not know, but from 1786 till his death on October 15, 1800, he was parish priest at Pointe Coupee, where he was regarded as "one of the most remarkable priests that ever administered St. Gabriel's church." — Shaw, Life and Times of Archbishop Carroll, Jesuit, and reference, p. 474; Amer. Cath. Hist. Researches, New Ser., B., No. 3; Rosier, Early Settlement of the Miss. Valley, 117; Annuaire, 7, 333.

<sup>79</sup> Probably he came from France to Detroit, where he married Marie Joseph Lapointe, January 2, 1777. He may, however, be descended from the Hardoin family of Canada.

<sup>80</sup> Also Leveillé. The family settled in Canada about 1755. There were members of the family at Michilimackinac in 1742.

<sup>89</sup> Also Alarie, which is the way the members of the Illinois family wrote it. The family was in Canada in 1678. He was the son of Bte. Alarie, and married Catherine Lavolette, widow of Pierre Godin, April 16, 1781. He was a judge in 1782.

<sup>90</sup> Godin called Tûranjeau; also spelled Gaudin. The family was in Canada in 1651. The father of these three, Pierre Godin, was one of the prominent inhabitants of Cahokia in 1778. He served as justice in Clark's court, but he died shortly after being elected as one of the justices of the Court of the District of Cahokia in 1779.

<sup>95</sup> Also Savoy and Savoie. Many families of this name settled in Canada between 1747 and 1779. In 1791 Izidore Savoy was in Spanish St. Charles.—Census of 1791, in Missouri Hist. Soc. Library of St. Louis.

<sup>96</sup> Native of the Duchy of Darmstadt, Germany. He married Marie Josephite Rochelot on August 13, 1783. He was elected a justice in 1785, 1787, and 1788, when he served till 1790.

<sup>97</sup> This may be either a surname or a second name, both of which are found in Canada.

At Cahokia the ninth of September, 1787.]

<sup>98</sup> Also Gerosme. Probably a second name. He was the son of Jean Gerosme, and married Marie Louise Lemire, widow of Louis Giroux and also of Francois Biguier called Groslé.

<sup>99</sup> Pelletier called Antaya. The family was among the early arrivals in Canada. About 1665 one of the family married an Indian woman, from whom came the name Antaya. The family was in Cahokia as early as 1751.

<sup>100</sup> A family of this name settled near Quebec as early as 1664, but this Cahokia family may have come directly from France. Antoine was one of the most prominent citizens of the community. He bought in 1764 the plantation and mill belonging to the mission of St. Sulpice at Prairie du Pont.—Reynolds, Pioneer History, 54. He was justice in Clark's court, and was elected a justice of the Court of the District of Cahokia in 1779, 1785, and 1787, serving till 1790. During the last years he was president of the Court. He was commandant of the village of Prairie du Pont. After the establishment of the county of St. Clair he was appointed judge of the Court of Common Pleas as well as of Quarter Sessions, and he held other important positions. He died about 1802.—Smith, St. Clair Papers, ii, 165.

<sup>101</sup> The name is a most common one in Canada. His full name was J. Bte. Hubert LaCroix. He was son of Pierre Hubert LaCroix of Quebec, and married Catherine Aubuchon, widow of Joseph Clermont. He is probably the LaCroix referred to in Clark's letter to Mason.—English, Conquest of the Northwest, i, 443. He was one of the justices in 1780, 1784, 1785, and 1786.

<sup>102</sup> See supra, note 60. He was a son of J. Bte. Baron, and was born at Cahokia December 17, 1752. He married, first, Marie Louise Buteau, and, on June 15, 1789 Marie Harmand, widow of Alexis Tabeau. He was a justice in 1772.
